832. Business arrangements.

A solicitor may practise as a sole principal, in a partnership¹, as a director, member or shareowner² of a company which is a recognised body³, as a member of a limited liability partnership⁴, or in employment in an in-house practice or private practice⁵. Where a solicitor has a separate business⁶ which is not regulated by the Solicitors Regulation Authority only certain services may be provided by that separate business⁷.

A principal in a firm or a director or member of a recognised body must make arrangements for the effective management of the firm paying particular attention to certain supervision and management responsibilities set out in the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007⁸.

A solicitor practising from an office as an employee of a business which is not the practice of a solicitor may act on behalf of others or provide advice under the circumstances provided by the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007⁹.

Generally a solicitor must not share his fees with a non-lawyer unless he is an employee¹⁰. If a solicitor makes or receives referrals to or from third parties he is under a duty to ensure he maintains his independence and acts in the best interests of his client without restricting his freedom to recommend alternatives¹¹. Contingency fees are generally prohibited by the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007¹².

1 However this must not be partnership with a separate legal identity if the partnership has an office in England or Wales: see the Solicitors' Code of Conduct r 12.01(2)(a); and PARA 676.

2 However this must not be as a director, member or owner of a body corporate with an office in England and Wales which is not a recognised body, unless as an in-house solicitor: see the Solicitors' Code of Conduct r 12.01(2)(b); and PARA 676.

3 As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3.

833. Equality and diversity.

A solicitor is under a duty in his professional dealings not to discriminate and to take steps and make adjustments to prevent discrimination by his employees, partners, members, directors or clients¹. A principal in a firm or a member or director of a recognised body must adopt and implement an appropriate policy for preventing discrimination and harassment and promoting equality and diversity within his firm and to ensure compliance by all employees, partners, members and directors².

1 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 6.01. A decision by a court or tribunal that the solicitor has committed or is to be treated as having committed an unlawful act of discrimination is treated as evidence of a breach of this rule: r 6.02. Rule 6 does not apply to an overseas practice: r 15.06.

2 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 6.03. A similar duty applies to a person with management responsibilities in an in-house practice: see r 6.04. The Solicitors Regulation Authority has no power to waive any of the provisions of r 6: r 6.05.

834. Publicity.

A solicitor is generally free to publicise his practice as a solicitor but such publicity may not be made using unsolicited visits or telephone calls to a member of the public¹. Any publicity must not be misleading or inaccurate² and where it relates to charges this must be clearly expressed³. Such provisions apply to all forms of publicity⁴.

1 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 7.03(1). For this purpose 'member of the public' does not include a current or former client, another lawyer, an existing or potential professional or business connection or a commercial organisation or public body: r 7.03(2). Rule 7 applies to any publicity a solicitor or his firm conducts or authorises in relation to the practice, any other business or activity carried on by the solicitor or his firm or any other business or activity carried on by others: see r 7.06(1). A person must not be authorised to conduct publicity for a practice which would be contrary to r 7: see r 7.05.

2 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 7.01.

3 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 7.02. In relation to a practice in England and Wales, it must also be made clear whether or not disbursements and VAT are included: r 7.02. Rule 7 generally applies to an overseas practice with some exceptions: see r 15.07.

4 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 7.06(2). (iii) Client Money

A. GENERALLY

835. The power to make rules.

The Solicitors Regulation Authority¹ must make rules²:

- 1105 (1) as to the opening and keeping by solicitors³ of accounts at banks⁴ or with building societies⁵ for clients' money⁶ and as to the keeping by solicitors of accounts containing particulars and information as to money received or held or paid by them for or on account of their clients⁷; and
- 1106 (2) until a day to be appointed, as to the opening and keeping by solicitors of accounts at banks or with building societies for money comprised in controlled trusts⁸ and the keeping by solicitors of accounts containing particulars and information as to money received or held or paid by them for or on account of any such trust⁹; and
- 1107 (3) as from a day to be appointed, as to the operation by solicitors of accounts kept by their clients or other persons at banks or with building societies or other financial institutions¹⁰.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 32 refers to the 'Council' (ie the Council of the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1)) but s 32(1), (4) are prospectively amended to refer to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)): see s 32 (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 32(1), (2)(a), (5)(a))). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors and the making of such rules is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619). 'Charter' means the Royal Charter dated 26 February 1845, whereby the Society was incorporated, together with the Royal Charters supplemental to it dated respectively 26 November 1872, 4 June 1903, 2 June 1909 and 10 March 1954: Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1).

2 Until a day to be appointed such rules must be made with the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(1) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 32(1), (2)(b), Sch 23). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. Rules under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(5) may specify circumstances in which solicitors or any class of solicitors are exempt from the rules by virtue of their office: s 32(5). As from a day to be appointed the words 'or a part of the rules' are substituted for the words 'by virtue of their office or employment' by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 32(1), (5)(c). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. Rules made under the Solicitors Act 1974 must also provide for interest to be paid on clients' money: see s 33; and PARA 842. As to the relevant rules see the Solicitors Accounts Rules 1998; and PARA 836. As from a day to be appointed when rules made under s 32 contain any such provision as is referred to in s 33(1) and have effect in relation to employees of solicitors by virtue of s 34A(1) (see PARA 622) the following applies: s 34B(2) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 36). Except as provided by the rules, an employee to whom the rules are applied is not liable to account to any client, other person or trust for interest received by the employee on money held at a bank or building society in an account which is for money received or held for, or on account of clients of the solicitor, other persons or trusts, generally or that client person or trust separately: Solicitors Act 1974 s 34B(3) (as so prospectively added).

3 As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 600 note 1.

4 'Bank' means the Bank of England, a person (other than a building society) who has permission under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt 4 (ie ss 40-55) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 348) to accept deposits or an EEA firm of the kind mentioned in Sch 3 para 5(b) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 315) which has permission under Sch 3 para 15 (as a result of qualifying for authorisation under Sch 3 para 12) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 315) to accept deposits: Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1) (definition substituted by SI 2001/3649).

5 As to the meaning of 'building society' see the Building Societies Act 1986; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 1856 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1) (application of definition added by the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 18 para 11(5); and amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 7 para 4, Sch 15 Pt II).

6 Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(1)(a) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 18 para 11(1), (2)). For the purposes of the Solicitors Act 1974 ss 32, 33 references to clients' money and money of a kind mentioned in s 32(1)(b) or s 33(1)(a) (see PARA 842) include references to money held by a solicitor as a stakeholder (whether or not paid by a client of his): s 32(6) (added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 18 para 13). As from a day to be appointed, the Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(1)(a) is substituted and s 32(1A) is added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 32(1), (2)(c), (3) and instead of applying to clients' money applies to money (including money held on trust) which is received, held or dealt with for clients or other persons: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(1), (1A) (as so prospectively substituted and added). 'Client' includes:

171 (1) in relation to contentious business, any person who as a principal or on behalf of another person retains or employs, or is about to retain or employ, a solicitor, and any person who is or may be liable to pay a solicitor's costs (s 87(1));

172 (2) in relation to non-contentious business, any person who, as a principal or on behalf of another, or as a trustee or executor, or in any other capacity, has power, express or implied, to retain or employ, and retains or employs or is about to retain or employ, a solicitor, and any person for the time being liable to pay to a solicitor for his services any costs (s 87(1)).

'Contentious business' means business done, whether as solicitor or advocate, in or for the purposes of proceedings begun before a court or before an arbitrator, not being business which falls within the definition of non-contentious or common form probate business contained in the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 128 (see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 74): Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1) (amended by the Arbitration Act 1996 Sch 4, the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 1 para 12(a); and prospectively amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 para 21(1), (6) to refer to the Senior Courts Act 1981 instead of the Supreme Court Act 1981). 'Non-contentious business' means any business done as a solicitor which is not contentious business: Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1). 'Costs' includes fees, charges, disbursements, expenses and remuneration: s 87(1).

7 Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(1)(b). As from a day to be appointed s 32(1)(b) is substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 32(1), (2)(c) and as from that date will apply to the keeping by solicitors of accounts containing information as to money received, held or paid by them for or on account of their clients or other persons (including money received, held or paid under a trust): Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(1)(b) (as so prospectively substituted). The rules must empower the Authority to take such action as may be necessary to enable it to ascertain whether or not the rules are being complied with (Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(1)(c)), and, until a day to be appointed, may specify the location of the branches at which the accounts are to be kept (s 32(1) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 19 Pt II; and relevant wording prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 32(1), (2)(e), Sch 23)). As from a day to be appointed the Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(1)(c) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 32(1), (2)(d)(iii) to include where the rules are being or have been complied with. As to the prospective amendments see also note 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 Until a day to be appointed 'controlled trust', in relation to a solicitor, means a trust of which he is a sole trustee or co-trustee only with one or more of his partners or employees: Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1) (definition prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 75(c), Sch 23). At the date at which this volume states the law no such days had been appointed.

9 Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(2)(a), (b) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 18 para 11(1), (2); and prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 32(1), (4), Sch 23). The rules must empower the Authority to take such action as may be necessary to enable it to ascertain whether or not the rules are being complied with (Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(2)(c) (as so prospectively repealed)), and may specify the location of the branches at which the accounts are to be kept (s 32(2) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1986 Sch 19 Pt II; and so prospectively repealed)).

10 Solicitors Act 1984 s 32(1)(aa) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 32(1), (2)(c)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

836. Rules relating to accounts.

The main rules currently in force relating to solicitors' accounts are the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998¹. These rules regulate the accounts of solicitors², registered European lawyers³, registered foreign lawyers⁴ and recognised bodies⁵ in respect of their English and Welsh practices⁶. Provision is made by the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 in relation to the practice of a solicitor or a recognised body from an office outside England and Wales⁷.

1 The Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 were made on 22 July 1998 and amended on 15 January 2008 and 14 July 2008. They were originally made by the Council of the Law Society but in practice are now governed by the Solicitors Regulation Authority: see PARA 619. They replaced the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1991, the Solicitors' Accounts (Legal Aid Temporary Provision) Rules 1992 and the Accountant's Report Rules 1991 but implementation was not required until 1 May 2000 with the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1991 continuing to operate until full implementation and applying in certain circumstances: see the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 50. The Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 contain notes which expand on the rules and are not set out in this work.

2 The Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 apply to solicitors of the Supreme Court whether they are sole practitioners, partners (or held out as partners), assistants, associates, consultants or locums in private practice, employed as in-house solicitors (ie in a law centre or in commerce and industry), or directors or members of recognised bodies: see r 4(1)(a). 'Solicitor' means an individual who is a solicitor of the Supreme Court; and for the purposes of the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 also includes a registered European lawyer; a registered foreign lawyer practising in partnership with a solicitor of the Supreme Court or registered European lawyer or as the director of a recognised body which is a company or as a member of a recognised body which is a limited liability partnership; a recognised body; and a partnership including at least one solicitor of the Supreme Court, registered European lawyer or recognised body: r 2(2)(x), (xa). However the rules do not apply where a solicitor is practising as an employee of: (1) a local authority; (2) a statutory undertaker; (3) a body whose accounts are audited by the Comptroller or Auditor General; (4) the Duchy of Lancaster; (5) the Duchy of Cornwall; or (6) the Church Commissioners or a solicitor who practises as the Solicitor of the City of London or a solicitor carrying out the functions of a coroner or other judicial officer or a sheriff or under-sheriff: see r 5.

A solicitor acting as a liquidator, a trustee in bankruptcy, a Court of Protection deputy or a trustee of an occupational pension scheme must comply with the appropriate statutory rules or regulations and rr 1, 9: see r 9.

3 The Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 apply to registered European lawyers whether they are sole practitioners, partners in a practice (or held out as partners), assistants, associates, consultants or locums in a private practice, employed as in-house lawyers (ie in a law centre or in commerce and industry), directors of recognised bodies which are companies or members of recognised bodies which are limited liability partnerships: see r 4(1)(aa). As to the meaning of 'registered European lawyer' see PARA 542 note 2. As to the register see PARA 628.

4 The Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 apply to registered foreign lawyers whether they are practising in partnership (or held out as partners) with solicitors of the Supreme Court or registered European lawyers, or directors or members of recognised bodies: see r 4(1)(b). As to the meaning of 'registered foreign lawyer' see PARA 628 note 2.

5 As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3.

6 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998. The rules only apply to practice carried on from an office in England and Wales: r 3. All the principals in a practice are responsible for ensuring compliance with the rules by themselves and everyone else working in the practice: r 6. 'Principal' means a sole practitioner, a partner or a person held out as a partner (including a 'salaried' or 'associate' partner), the principal solicitor (or any one of the principal solicitors) in an in-house practice (for example, in a law centre or in commerce and industry): r 2(2)(r). However the duty to ensure compliance with the rules also extends to directors of a recognised body which is a company or to the members of a recognised body which is a company or to the members of a recognised body which is a limited liability partnership and to the recognised body itself: r 6. The duty to remedy any breaches of the rules rests with the person causing the breach and all the principals and extends to replacing missing client money or controlled trust money from the principals' own resources, even if the money has been misappropriated by an employee or fellow principal and whether or not a claim is subsequently made on the Solicitors' Indemnity or Compensation Funds or on the firm's insurance: see r 7. The rights or recourse of a solicitor by way of lien, set off, counterclaim, charge or otherwise against money standing to the credit of a client account are not affected by the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998: r 12.

7 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 15.27.

As to the meaning of 'building society' see the Building Societies Act 1986; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 1856 (definition applied by the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 2(2)(d)).

9 Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 1(d).

10 'Controlled trust money' is money held or received for a controlled trust: Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 13 (definition applied by r 2(2)(i)). A 'controlled trust' arises when:

173 (1) a solicitor of the Supreme Court or registered European lawyer is the sole trustee of a trust, or co-trustee only with one or more of his or her partners or employees (r 2(2)(h)(i));

174 (2) a registered foreign lawyer who practises in partnership with a solicitor of the Supreme Court or registered European lawyer is, by virtue of being a partner in that partnership, the sole trustee of a trust, or co-trustee only with one or more of the other partners or employees of that partnership (r 2(2)(h)(ii));

175 (3) a recognised body which is a company is the sole trustee of a trust, or co-trustee only with one or more of the recognised body's officers or employees (r 2(2)(h)(iii)); or

176 (4) a recognised body which is a limited liability partnership is the sole trustee of a trust, or co-trustee only with one or more of the recognised body's members or employees (r 2(2)(h)(iv)); and 'controlled trustee' means a trustee of a controlled trust: r 2(2)(h). A solicitor who in the course of practice acts as a controlled trustee must treat the controlled trust money as if it were client money except where the rules provide otherwise: r 8.

'Trustee' includes a personal representative (ie an executor or an administrator) and 'trust' includes the duties of a personal representative: r 2(2)(y).

Client accounts and client money.

B. HANDLING CLIENT MONEY

838. Client accounts and client money.

A solicitor¹ holding or receiving client money or controlled trust money or both² must keep one or more client accounts³ and all client money or controlled trust money (and with limited exception only client money or controlled trust money⁴) must without delay be paid into and held in a client account⁵. However, money may be held or received by a solicitor jointly with the client, another solicitor's practice or another third party⁶. Also money held or received by solicitor liquidators, trustees in bankruptcy⁷ and Court of Protection deputies⁸ does not have to be kept in a client account⁹.

The following exceptions also apply¹⁰:

- 1118 (1) client money may be held outside a client account or paid into an account opened in the name of the client or a person designated by the client if the client instructs the solicitor to that effect¹¹;
- 1119 (2) cash received and paid, or a cheque or draft received and endorsed over, in relation to client money to the client (or a third party acting on his behalf) or, in relation to controlled trust money a beneficiary (or a third party) may under particular circumstances be withheld from a client account¹²;
- 1120 (3) certain payments in relation to unpaid professional disbursements and payments by the Legal Services Commission may be withheld from the client account¹³;
- 1121 (4) client money may be withheld from a client account on the written authorisation of the Solicitors Regulation Authority¹⁴;
- 1122 (5) controlled trust money may be paid into an account which is not a client account in accordance with the trustees' powers¹⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 600 note 1.

2 All money held or received in the course of practice is 'client money' (ie money held or received for a client, and all other money which is not controlled trust money or office money), 'controlled trust money' (ie money held or received for a controlled trust) or 'office money' (ie money which belongs to the solicitor or the practice): see the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 13.

3 Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 14(1). The only exception to this is where the solicitor always deals with client money and controlled money in accordance with the relevant exceptions: see r 14(1). A 'client account' is an account of a practice kept at a bank or building society in England and Wales for holding client money or controlled trust money or both, in accordance with the requirements of the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 rr 14-23: r 14(2), (4). The account must generally be in the name of the solicitor's business and include the word 'client': see r 14(3). A client account is either a 'separate designated client account' (ie relating to a single client or single controlled trust) or a 'general client account' (ie any other client accounts): see r 14(5). For the purposes of the Solicitors Act 1974 'client account' means, until a day to be appointed, an account in the title of which the word 'client' is required by rules under s 32 and, as from a day to be appointed, an account subject to rules under s 32(1)(a): s 87(1) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 75(a)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4 The solicitor's own money may be used to open or maintain the account, or as an advance to fund a payment on behalf of a client or controlled trust in excess of funds held: see the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 15(2)(a), (b). Money may be paid into the account to replace money withdrawn in breach of r 22 (withdrawals from a client account) (see PARA 841); see r 15(2)(c). Interest liable under a client account (see r 24; and PARA 843) may be paid into an account instead of being paid directly to the client: see r 15(2)(d). Money paid in full or part settlement of the solicitor's bill (or other notification of costs) and payments that include client money or controlled trust money as well as office money may be paid in a client account and all office money transferred out of the account within 14 days of receipt: see rr 19(1)(c), 20(2)(b), (3); and PARA 840. Where a solicitor receives regular payments from the Legal Services Commission under certain circumstances these may be transferred into a client account: see r 21(2)(c); and LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 17.

5 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 15(1). As soon as there is no longer any proper reason to retain client money, it must be returned to the client promptly and any client money retained at the end of a matter must be explained in writing by the solicitor to the client: see r 15(3), (4).

6 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 10.

7 For the relevant provisions relating to liquidators and trustees in bankruptcy see the Insolvency Regulations 1994, SI 1994/2507; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 28.

8 For the relevant provisions relating to the Court of Protection deputies see the Court of Protection Rules 2007, SI 2007/1744; and MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 757 et seq.

9 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 9. However if such money is received or held into a client account the rules apply: see r 9(3).

11 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 rr 16, 17(c).

14 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 17(f). See also r 18(d). The rules refer to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society), however, in practice regulation of the rules is now with the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

838 Client accounts and client money

NOTE 3--Day appointed is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(7) PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, PRACTICE AND REDRESS/(iii) Client Money/B. HANDLING CLIENT MONEY/839. Position in relation to banks or building societies.

839. Position in relation to banks or building societies.

Clients' money¹ held by a solicitor is, in a sense², trust money³, and when paid into a bank account the bank is debtor to the solicitor⁴ and accordingly, because of this relationship of debtor and creditor between the bank and the solicitor, the bank will be justified in refusing to meet a cheque drawn on the account before but presented after a garnishee order nisi had been served on the bank in respect of debts due to the solicitor⁵.

Where a solicitor keeps an account with a bank or a building society⁶ for clients' money⁷, the bank or building society:

1123 (1) incurs no liability, and is under no obligation to make any inquiry, and is not deemed to have any knowledge of any right of any person to any money paid or credited to the account, which it would not incur or be under or be deemed to have in the case of an account kept by a person absolutely entitled to all the money paid or credited to it⁸;

1124 (2) has no recourse or right against money standing to the credit of the account in respect of any liability of the solicitor to the bank or building society, other than a liability in connection with the account⁹.

As from a day to be appointed where rules made under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(1) (see PARA 835) have effect in relation to employees of solicitors by virtue of s 34A(1) (see PARA 622), s 85 applies in relation to an employee to whom the rules have effect who keeps an account with a bank or building society in pursuance of such rules as it applies in relation to a solicitor who keeps such an account in pursuance of rules under s 32: s 34A(1) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 36). body which keeps an account with a bank (or as from a day to be appointed, a building society) in pursuance of the rules as it applies in relation to a solicitor who so keeps such an account: see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 31. Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(7) PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, PRACTICE AND REDRESS/(iii) Client Money/B. HANDLING CLIENT MONEY/840. Paying money into accounts.

840. Paying money into accounts.

A solicitor¹ who receives money paid in full or part settlement of the solicitor's bill or other notification of costs must deal with the money in one of four ways². A mixed payment of client money or controlled trust money³ as well as office money must either be split between a client account and office account as appropriate or placed without delay in a client account⁴.

2 Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 19(1). The four ways are:

177 (1) determine the composition of the payment without delay and deal with the money accordingly (r 19(1)(a)); or

178 (2) ascertain that the payment comprises of unpaid professional disbursements and place the entire sum in an office account at a bank or building society and by the end of the second working day following receipt either pay any unpaid professional disbursement or transfer a sum for its settlement to a client account (r 19(1)(b)); or

179 (3) pay the entire sum into a client account and transfer any office money out of the account within 14 days of receipt (r 19(1)(c));

180 (4) deal with receipt of costs from the Legal Services Commission under r 21(1)(b) (r 19(1)(d)).

As to the meaning of 'bank' see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1); and PARA 835 note 4 (definition applied by the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 2(1)(c)). As to the meaning of 'building society' see the Building Societies Act 1986; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 1856 (definition applied by the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 2(2)(d)). A solicitor who properly requires payment of his fees from money held for the client or controlled trust in a client account must give or send a bill of costs to the client or paying party and then the money earmarked for costs becomes office money and must be transferred out of the client account within 14 days: see r 19(2), (3). Until compliance with r 19(2) payment on account is generally client money: r 19(4). A payment for an agreed fee must be paid into an office account: r 19(5).

3 As to the meaning of 'client money' see PARA 838 note 2 and as to the meaning of 'controlled trust money' see PARA 837 note 10.

4 Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 20(1), (2). If paid into a client account any office money must be transferred out within 14 days of receipt: r 20(3). Dispensations apply to payments from the Legal Services Commission: see r 21; and LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 17 et seq. As to the meaning of 'client account' see PARA 838 note 3.

UPDATE

840 Paying money into accounts

TEXT AND NOTES 2, 4--Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 rr 2, 19-21 amended on 31 March 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(7) PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, PRACTICE AND REDRESS/(iii) Client Money/B. HANDLING CLIENT MONEY/841. Withdrawals from client account.

841. Withdrawals from client account.

Client money may be withdrawn¹ on the client's instructions where it is for the client's convenience². Otherwise client money and controlled trust money³ may only be withdrawn from a client account⁴ when it is:

- 1125 (1) properly required for certain payments⁵;
- 1126 (2) transferred to another client account⁶;
- 1127 (3) a refund to the solicitor⁷ of an advance no longer required to fund a payment on behalf of the client or controlled trust⁸;
- 1128 (4) money which has been paid into the account in breach of the rules (ie it has been paid into the wrong account)⁹;
- 1129 (5) money not covered by heads (1) to (4) above, where the solicitor complies with certain conditions¹⁰;
- 1130 (6) money not covered by heads (1) to (4) above, withdrawn from the account on the authorisation of the Solicitors Regulation Authority¹¹.

Office money may only be withdrawn from a client account when it is:

- 1131 (a) money properly paid into the account to open or maintain it¹²;
- 1132 (b) properly required for payment of the solicitor's costs¹³;
- 1133 (c) the whole or part of a payment into a client account¹⁴;
- 1134 (d) part of a mixed payment placed in a client account¹⁵; or
- 1135 (e) money which has been paid into a client account in breach of the rules¹⁶.

Money held for a client or controlled trust in a separate designated client account must not be used for payments for another client or controlled trust¹⁷. Generally money withdrawn from a general client account in relation to a particular client or controlled trust must not exceed money held on behalf of that client or trust¹⁸ and a client account must not be overdrawn¹⁹.

1 As to the meaning of 'client's money' see PARA 838 note 2. Unless transferring money from one general client account to another at the same bank or building society, a withdrawal from a client account requires the signature of a solicitor holding a current practising certificate or a registered European lawyer or a Fellow of the Institute of Legal Executives of at least three years' standing employed by such a solicitor or lawyer or a registered foreign lawyer who is a partner, director or member of the practice: see the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 23(1)(a), (b), (d), (2). However in the case of an office dealing solely with conveyancing the withdrawal may also be signed by a licensed conveyancer employed by a solicitor holding a current practising certificate or a registered European lawyer: see r 23(1)(c). The withdrawal must not be made in cash: r 23(3).

3 As to the meaning of 'controlled trust money' see PARA 837 note 10.

4 As to the meaning of 'client account' see PARA 838 note 3.

5 Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 22(1)(a)-(c), (2)(a)-(c). Such payments are payments to or on behalf of the client or in the execution of the particular trust, payment of a disbursement and to reimburse the solicitor for money spent on behalf of the client or the particular trust: r 22(1)(a)-(c), (2)(a)-(c).

6 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 22(1)(d), (2)(d). In the case of controlled trust money it may also be transferred to an account other than a client account if the trustee's powers permit: see r 2(2)(e). There are certain restrictions on transfers between clients: see r 30.

8 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 22(1)(f), (2)(f).

9 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 22(1)(g), (2)(g). Such money must be withdrawn promptly upon discovery: see r 22(4).

10 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 22(ga), (2)(ga). The conditions referred to in the text are that money may be withdrawn where the amount does not exceed £50 in relation to any one individual client or controlled trust matter and the solicitor:

181 (1) establishes the identity of the owner of the money (or makes reasonable attempts to do so) (r 22(2A)(a));

182 (2) makes adequate attempts to ascertain the proper destination of the money and return it to its rightful owner (unless doing so would incur unreasonable costs) (r 22(2A)(b));

183 (3) pays the funds to a charity (r 22(2A)(c));

184 (4) records the steps taken in accordance with heads (1)-(3) above and retains those records, together with all relevant documentation (see rr 22(2A)(d), 32(8A));

185 (5) keeps a central register of such withdrawals (rr 22(2A)(e), 32(13A)).

12 Ie paid into the account under the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 15(2)(a) (see PARA 838).

17 Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 22(7).

18 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 22(5). However money may be paid out of a general client account if sufficient money is held and immediately transferred from a separate account held on behalf of that client or trust: see r 22(6).

19 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 22(8). There are however two exceptions which are (1) where a controlled trustee makes payments on behalf of a controlled trust before realising sufficient assets to cover the payments; and (2) if a sole practitioner dies and the client accounts are frozen, overdrawn client accounts can be used to the extent of the money held in the frozen accounts: see r 22(8).

TEXT AND NOTES--Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 rr 2, 22, 23 amended on 31 March 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(7) PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, PRACTICE AND REDRESS/(iii) Client Money/B. HANDLING CLIENT MONEY/842. Requirement to make rules regarding interest.

842. Requirement to make rules regarding interest.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Rules made by the Solicitors Regulation Authority² must make provision requiring solicitors³, in cases prescribed by the rules, either to keep on deposit in a separate bank account at a bank or with a building society⁴ for the benefit of the client's money⁵ received for or on account of a client or to make good to the client out of the solicitor's own money a sum equivalent to the interest which would have accrued if the money so received had been so kept on deposit⁶. Nothing in the rules must affect any arrangement in writing, whenever made, between a solicitor and a client as to the application of the client's money or interest on it⁷.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect⁸. The rules made by the Authority⁹ may require a solicitor to pay interest, or sums in lieu of and equivalent to interest, to a client, any other person or any trust, for whom the solicitor holds money¹⁰. However the rules may prescribe the circumstances in which a solicitor may make arrangements to limit or exclude an obligation so imposed on the solicitor and prescribe the requirements to be met by and in relation to those arrangements¹¹.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 33(1), (3), (4) is substituted and s 33(2) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16, paras 1, 33, Sch 23 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 The rules made under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 32 (see PARA 835). As to the Solicitors Regulation Authority see PARAS 619, 835 note 1.

3 As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 600 note 1.

4 As to the meanings of 'bank' and 'building society' see PARA 835 notes 4, 5.

6 Solicitors Act 1974 s 33(1) (amended by the Building Societies Act 1968 Sch 18 para 11(1), (3); prospectively substituted (see note 1)). The cases in which a solicitor may be required by the rules to act as mentioned in s 33(1) may be defined, among other things, by reference to the amount of any sum received or the period for which it is or is likely to be retained or both: Solicitors Act 1974 s 33(2). Until a day to be appointed the rules may include provision for enabling a client (without prejudice to any other remedy) to require that any question arising under the rules in relation to the client's money be referred to and determined by the Solicitors Regulation Authority: s 33(2) (relevant wording prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 33(1), (3), Sch 23). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 33(2) refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors and the making of such rules is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619). As to rules relating to interest see the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 rr 24-28; and PARA 843. However an overseas practice is bound by the deposit interest requirements in the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 15.15: see r 15.15; and PARA 843.

NOTE 6--Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 rr 24, 25 amended, r 28 repealed on 31 March 2009. Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 15.15 amended on 31 March 2009.

843. Rules relating to interest.

When a solicitor¹ holds money in a separate designated client account for a client², or for a person funding all or part of the solicitor's fees, he must aim to obtain a reasonable rate of interest on the account and must account to the client or that person for all interest earned on the account³.

When a solicitor holds money in a general client account for a client or for a person funding all or part of the solicitor's fees, he must account to the client or that person for a fair sum in lieu of interest⁴. However there are exceptions to this rule⁵.

Where money has been held outside of the client account on the client's instructions⁶ the solicitor must account for all interest earned on the account⁷.

When money is held by a solicitor as a stakeholder the solicitor must pay interest or a sum in lieu of interest⁸ to the person to whom the stake is paid⁹.

1 As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 836 note 2.

2 As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 837 note 3. As to the meaning of 'separate designated client account' see PARA 838 note 3. The Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 24 does not apply to controlled trust money: r 24(7).

3 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 rr 24(1), 25(1). Where client money is held by an overseas practice and in regard to all the circumstances (including the amount of money, the length of time it is likely to be held and the law and prevailing custom of lawyers in the jurisdiction) interest ought in fairness to be earned for that client, the solicitor must ensure that:

186 (1) the client money is dealt with so that proper interest is earned upon it and paid to the client (Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 15.15(2)(a), (3));

187 (2) the client is paid a sum equivalent to the interest that would have been earned if the client money had earned proper interest (r 15.15(2)(b), (3)); or

188 (3) any alternative written agreement with the client setting out arrangements regarding the payment of interest on that money is carried out (r 15.15(2)(c), (3)).

4 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 rr 24(2), 25(1). The sum in lieu of interest is calculated in accordance with r 25(2)-(4).

5 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 24(3). The exceptions are:

189 (1) if the amount calculated is £20 or less (r 24(3)(a));

190 (2) if the solicitor holds a sum of money: (a) not exceeding £1,000 for a time not exceeding eight weeks; (b) not exceeding £2,000 for a time not exceeding four weeks; (c) not exceeding £10,000 for a time not exceeding two weeks; or (d) not exceeding £20,000 for a time not exceeding one week (r 24(3)(b)(i));

191 (3) if the solicitor holds a sum of money exceeding £20,000 for one week or less, unless it is fair and reasonable to account for a sum in lieu of interest having regard to all the circumstances (r 24(3)(ii));

192 (4) on money held for the payment of counsel's fees (and counsel has requested a delay in payment) or for the Legal Services Commission (r 24(3)(c), (d));

193 (5) on advance from the solicitor under r 15(2)(b) (see PARA 838) (r 24(3)(d));

194 (6) if a client and his solicitor have agreed to deal with matters differently (see rr 24(3)(e), 27).

Money held intermittently and money held for some part in a separate designated client account and for the rest of the time in a general client account may require the payment of interest despite the sum in lieu of interest being calculated at £20 or less: see r 24(4), (5).

C. ACCOUNTING SYSTEMS

844. Accounting systems.

The Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 provide rules regulating solicitors' accounting systems and records¹. Guidelines for Accounting Procedures and Systems have also been produced and solicitors may be required to justify any departure from them².

A solicitor must at all times keep properly written up accounting records to show his dealings with:

- 1136 (1) client money received, held or paid by the solicitor including any money held outside a client account under the relevant provisions³;
- 1137 (2) controlled trust money received, held or paid by the solicitor including such money held outside a client account under the relevant provisions⁴;
- 1138 (3) any office money relating to any client matter or to any controlled trust matter⁵.

All dealings with client money and any controlled trust money must be appropriately recorded in a client's cash account or in a record of sums transferred from the ledger account of one client to that of another and on the client side of a separate ledger account for each client or other person or controlled trust⁶.

If separate designated client accounts are used a combined cash account must be kept in order to show the total amount held in separate designated client accounts and a record of the amount held for each client must be made in a client ledger account⁷.

A solicitor is required to prepare a reconciliation statement every 14 weeks for controlled trust money held in a passbook-operated separate designated client account and least once every five weeks in other cases⁸.

Certain records (including bills and notification of costs) must be kept together centrally⁹ and the majority of documents and records (including those mentioned above) are to be kept for at least six years from the date of the last entry but some are required to be kept for at least two years¹⁰. Although most records may be kept on a computerised system original statements, passbooks, cheques and copy authorities should generally be retained as printed or otherwise issued¹¹.

1 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 rr 29-33. As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 836 note 2. If a solicitor's practice owns all the shares in a recognised body which is an executor, trustee or nominee company, the practice and the recognised body must not operate shared client accounts: see r 31.

2 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 29 and Appendix 3 to those rules. Such guidelines were produced by the Council of the Law Society with the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls: see the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 29. However in practice the body now responsible for such guidelines is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619). The guidelines are a benchmark or broad statement of good practice and apply to both client money and controlled trust money: see the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 Appendix 3. 5 Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 32(1)(c). As to the meaning of 'office money' see PARA 838 note 2. All dealing with office money that relates to any client or controlled trust matter must be recorded in an office cash account and office side of the client ledger account: see r 32(4).

6 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 32(2). The current balance on each client ledger account must always be shown or readily ascertainable from the records: see r 32(5). Separate client ledger accounts are not necessarily required where a solicitor acts from both lender and borrower on a mortgage advance: see r 32(6). Suspense ledger accounts may be used only when the solicitor can justify their use: r 32(16). A centrally kept register (along with a record of steps taken under r 22(2A)(a)-(c)) must be kept of any client money or controlled trust money withdrawn in accordance with r 22(1)(ga), (2)(ga) (see PARA 841): see r 32(8A), (13A).

E. ACCOUNTANTS' REPORTS

847. Accountants' reports.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. With certain exceptions, every solicitor², unless he satisfies the Solicitors Regulation Authority³ that it is unnecessary for him to do so, must once in each 12 month period ending with 31 October deliver to the Authority by post or otherwise an accountant's report containing such information as may be prescribed by rules⁴.

The Authority must make rules prescribing:

- 1139 (1) the qualification to be held by an accountant by whom a report may be given⁵;
- 1140 (2) the information to be contained in an accountant's report⁶;
- 1141 (3) the nature and extent of the examination to be made by the accountant of the books and accounts of a solicitor or his firm and of any other relevant documents with a view to the signing of an accountant's report⁷;
- 1142 (4) the form of an accountant's report⁸; and
- 1143 (5) the evidence, if any, which will satisfy the Authority that the delivery of an accountant's report is unnecessary and the cases where such evidence is or is not required⁹.

The rules may also include provision:

- 1144 (a) permitting a different accounting period from that specified¹⁰ in such special circumstances as may be prescribed¹¹; and
- 1145 (b) regulating any matters of procedure or incidental, ancillary or supplemental matters¹².

As from a day to be appointed¹³ the Authority may make rules requiring solicitors to provide the Authority with such reports signed by an accountant (an 'accountant's report') at such times or in such circumstances as may be prescribed by the rules¹⁴.

Under the Solicitors Accounts Rules 1998 a solicitor¹⁵ who has at any time during an accounting period held or received client money or controlled trust money¹⁶ or operated a client's own account as signatory must deliver to the Solicitors Regulation Authority¹⁷ an accountant's report for that period¹⁸.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 34(1), (2) is substituted and s 34(3)-(5), (5A), (7), (8) repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16, paras 1, 35(1), (2), (4), Sch 23 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 As to when a solicitor is exempted see PARA 850. Until a day to be appointed the provisions of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 34(1)-(3) (see the text and notes 2-7) apply to a recognised body as they apply to a solicitor: Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 5(1). As from a day to be appointed Sch 2 para 5 is substituted and Sch 2 para 5A is added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 80, 92, 93. Where rules made under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 34 are applied to recognised bodies, or to managers or employees of recognised bodies, in accordance with ss 9(2)(f), 34(9), (10) they apply in relation to a recognised body, or manager or employee, as they are applied in relation to a solicitor: see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 paras 5, 5A (prospectively substituted and added). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3.

3 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 34 refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors and the making of such rules is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

4 Solicitors Act 1974 s 34(1) (prospectively substituted: see note 1). The current rules are the Solicitors Accounts Rules 1998. See also r 47, Appendix 5, where the form of the report is set out. The report must be delivered to the Authority not more than six months, or such other period as may be prescribed, after the end of the accounting period for the purposes of that report: Solicitors Act 1974 s 37(2) (amended by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 1 para 9(a); and prospectively substituted (see note 1)). Until the contrary is proved, a certificate under the hand of the secretary of the Authority is evidence that a solicitor or a recognised body has (or has not) delivered to the Authority an accountant's report or supplied any evidence required in connection with it: Solicitors Act 1974 s 34(7) (prospectively repealed: see note 1); Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 5(2) (prospectively substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 80, 92 so that the relevant wording no longer applies). As from a day to be appointed where rules made under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 34 have effect in relation to employees of solicitors by virtue of s 34A(1) (see PARA 622), the provisions of s 34(9), (10) (see PARA 851) apply in relation to such an employee as they apply in relation to a solicitor: s 34B(6) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 36).

12 Solicitors Act 1974 s 34(5)(b) (prospectively repealed: see note 1). Without prejudice to the generality of s 34(5)(b), rules may be made requiring a solicitor in advance of delivering an accountant's report to notify the Authority of the period which is to be the accounting period for the purposes of that report: s 34(5A) (added by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 1 para 9(b); and prospectively repealed (see note 1)).

14 Solicitors Act 1974 s 34(1) (as prospectively substituted: see note 1). The rules may specify requirements to be met by, or in relation to, an accountant's report (including requirements relating to the accountant who signs the report: s 34(2) (as prospectively substituted: see note 1). Failure to deliver an accountant's report in accordance with s 34(1) may result in an additional fee being charged when applying for a practising certificate: see s 11(3), (4) (prospectively substituted); and PARA 670.

However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors and such rules is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

18 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 35. The report, which must be in the form published from time to time by the Authority, must be prepared and signed by an accountant who is qualified to make such a report by virtue of r 37: see rr 37, 47. The accountant's rights and duties must be contained within a letter of engagement: see r 38. Any change in the accountancy practice must be notified to the Authority: see r 39. The accounting records, files and other relevant documents must be examined at the solicitor's office and not that of the accountant and the accountant must examine them and make a series of checks and tests including the completion of a checklist in the form published from time to time by the Authority: see rr 40, 42, 46. The solicitor must provide the accountant with all necessary bank and building society details unless they fall within the criteria of being privileged documents: see rr 41, 45. The accountant must note in his report any deviation from the Guidelines under r 29 (see PARA 844): see r 43. However certain matters (including a detailed check on compliance with the Guidelines) are outside the accountant's remit: see r 44. Where a practice has two or more offices separate reports may be delivered and separate accounting periods may be adopted: see r 48. The Authority may waive any of rr 35-48: see r 49.

- 1158 (h) empower the Authority to take steps to ascertain whether or not the rules are being complied with¹⁶; and
- 1159 (i) contain incidental, procedural or supplementary provisions¹⁷.

854. Rules relating to indemnity.

The main rules currently in force relating to the professional indemnity of solicitors are the Solicitors' Indemnity Rules 2007¹ and the Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules 2008².

The Solicitors Indemnity Fund is established and maintained under the Solicitors' Indemnity Rules 2007³ and provides indemnity against losses arising from claims in respect of civil liability incurred in private practice⁴. Indemnity cover is provided under the rules in limited circumstances and applies in respect of any member of a practice which ceased on or before 13 August 2000⁵ and in respect of expired run-off claims⁶.

Under the Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules 2008 solicitors must take out and maintain qualifying insurance⁷. If they are unable to do so they must apply to enter the Assigned Risks Pool provided under the rules⁸. Failure to comply with the Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules 2008 may result in disciplinary action⁹.

The Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 provides that in relation to an overseas practice a solicitor must ensure that he is covered by insurance or other indemnity against professional liabilities¹⁰.

1 These rules are annexed to and continue in force under the Solicitors' Indemnity (Enactment) Rules 2007: see r 1. The Solicitors' Indemnity (Incorporated Practice) Rules 1991 also continue in force but only in respect of the indemnity periods commencing on 1 September 1991 and 1 September 1992: see the Solicitors' Indemnity (Enactment) Rules 2007 r 2.

2 The Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules 2008 came into force on 1 October 2008 and apply to any indemnity period beginning on or after that date. The rules were made by the Council of the Law Society (see r 1) but in practice are governed by the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619). The rules require solicitors, registered European lawyers, registered foreign lawyers and recognised bodies in private practice in England and Wales to take out and maintain professional indemnity insurance with qualifying insurers with effect from 1 October 2008: r 1.3. For these purposes 'solicitor' means a person who has been admitted as a solicitor and whose name is on the roll (within the meaning of the Solicitors Act 1974) and who practises as a solicitor whether or not he has in force a practising certificate as referred to in the Solicitors Act 1974 and also includes practice under the home title of a former registered European lawyer who has become a solicitor: Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules 2008 r 3.1. As to the meaning of 'registered European lawyer' see PARA 542 note 2. As to the meaning of 'registered foreign lawyer' see PARA 628 note 2. As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3.

3 The fund is administered by the Solicitors Indemnity Fund Limited: see Solicitors' Indemnity Rules 2007 r 21.

5 See the Solicitors' Indemnity Rules 2007 rr 8.1-8.2.

6 See the Solicitors' Indemnity Rules 2007 rr 8.5-8.6.

7 See the Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules 2008 rr 4-5. The Solicitors Regulation Authority provides a list of qualifying insurers on its website.

8 See the Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules 2008 rr 10-15. The Assigned Risks Pool ('ARP') is managed by the ARP Manager who will issue the ARP policy: see rr 9, 11.1. The current ARP Manager is Capita London Market Services at 40 Dukes Place, London, EC3A 7NH.

9 See the Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules 2008 rr 16-18.

10 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 15.26(1), (2)(a). The extent and amount of the insurance or indemnity need not exceed the current requirements of the Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules or any other rules made under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 37 (see PARA 853) but must be reasonable having regard to:

199 (1) the nature and extent of the risks that will be incurred in the overseas practice (see r 15.26(2)(b)(i));

200 (2) the local conditions in the relevant jurisdiction (see r 15.26(2)(b)(ii)); and 201 (3) the terms upon which insurance or other indemnity is available (see r 15.26(2)(b)(iii)).

856. Rules relating to financial services.

The Solicitors Regulation Authority¹ has rules governing the carrying on by those it regulates of activities regulated under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000². The main rules are the Solicitors' Financial Services (Scope) Rules 2001³ and the Solicitors' Financial Services (Conduct of Business) Rules 2001⁴. However relevant provisions are also contained within the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007⁵.

The Solicitors' Financial Services (Scope) Rules 2001 set out the scope of the regulated activities⁶ which may be undertaken by firms⁷ which are not regulated by the Financial Services Authority⁸. These rules set out the basic conditions to be satisfied and impose certain restrictions⁹. The rules also prohibit such a firm from carrying on certain regulated activities¹⁰.

The Solicitors' Financial Services (Conduct of Business) Rules 2001 regulate the way in which firms which are not regulated by the Financial Services Authority carry on regulated activities¹¹. The rules also apply to firms which are regulated by the Financial Services Authority in respect of their non-mainstream regulated activities¹².

1 The Law Society is a designated professional body for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XX: see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Designated Professional Bodies) Order 2001, SI 2001/1226, art 2; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 749. The fund is applicable:

216 (a) for payment of any costs, charges and expenses of establishing, maintaining, administering and applying the fund (Sch 2 para 7(a) (as so prospectively repealed));

863. Compensation grants.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The Solicitors Regulation Authority² may make a grant out of the fund for the purpose of relieving loss or hardship³ where it is satisfied:

- 1192 (1) that a person has suffered, or is likely to suffer, loss in consequence of dishonesty on the part of a solicitor or of an employee of a solicitor in connection with that solicitor's practice or purported practice or in connection with any trust⁴ of which that solicitor is or formerly was a trustee⁵; or
- 1193 (2) that a person has suffered, or is likely to suffer, hardship in consequence of failure on the part of a solicitor to account for money which has come to his hands in connection with his practice or purported practice or in connection with any trust of which he is or formerly was a trustee⁶; or
- 1194 (3) that a solicitor has suffered, or is likely to suffer, loss or hardship by reason of his liability to any of his or his firm's clients⁷ in consequence of some act or default of any of his partners or employees in circumstances where but for the liability of that solicitor a grant might have been made out of the compensation fund to some other person⁸.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions apply⁹. The Authority may make rules concerning the grant of compensation¹⁰ by the Authority in respect of loss that a person has suffered, or is likely to suffer, as a result of:

- 1204 (vii) as to the minimum and maximum grants payable in respect of a compensation claim (or a claim of a prescribed description)²⁰.

868. Registered foreign lawyers.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. On an application for registration² a foreign lawyer³ must pay to the Solicitors Regulation Authority⁴ an initial contribution to the compensation fund⁵ of such amount as the Authority may from time to time determine⁶. On each application for renewal of his registration, a registered foreign lawyer must pay to the Authority:

- 1212 (1) an annual contribution⁷; and
- 1213 (2) a further contribution to the compensation fund of such amount as the Authority may from time to time determine, but the Authority may only require such a contribution if it appears from his application that at any time during the period specified therein the registered foreign lawyer has either held or received clients' money in connection with a multi-national partnership⁸ of which he is or was a member, or that he is or was an officer at any time during that period of a recognised body⁹ which has held or received clients' money¹⁰.

Where the Authority is satisfied:

- 1214 (a) that a person has suffered or is likely to suffer loss in consequence of dishonesty on the part of a registered foreign lawyer, or of an employee of a registered foreign lawyer, in connection with the practice of the multi-national partnership of which that lawyer is or was a member or in connection with any trust of which that lawyer is or was a trustee by virtue of his being a member of that partnership¹¹;

- or
- 1216 (c) that a registered foreign lawyer has suffered or is likely to suffer loss or hardship by reason of his liability to any client of his, or of the multi-national partnership of which he is or was a member, in consequence of some act or default of any of his partners or employees in circumstances where, but for the liability of that registered foreign lawyer, a grant might have been made out of the compensation fund to some other person¹³, the Authority may make a grant out of the fund for the purpose of relieving that loss or hardship¹⁴.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹⁵. The Authority¹⁶ may make rules¹⁷ concerning the grant of compensation by the Authority in respect of loss that a person has suffered, or is likely to suffer, as a result of:

- 1217 (i) an act or omission of a registered foreign lawyer or former registered foreign lawyer¹⁸;

- 1218 (ii) an act or omission of an employee or former employee of a registered foreign lawyer or former registered foreign lawyer¹⁹;

As from a day to be appointed⁵ the Authority may make rules⁶ concerning the grant of compensation by the Authority in relation to recognised bodies⁷.

1 The Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 6 is substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 80, 94 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 The Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 refers to the Council of the Law Society or the Law Society. However in practice the body now responsible for dealing with compensation is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

3 See the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 6(1); and PARA 708. As to the compensation fund see PARA 862.

4 See the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 6(2); and PARA 708.

5 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 36(1) and the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 6 are prospectively substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 37, 94 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 As to such rules see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 36; and PARA 863 (prospectively applied by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 6(1)). Compensation rules may require contributions to be made to compensation funds and any amount so payable may be recovered as a debt due to the Authority: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 36A(2), (3); and PARA 862 (prospectively applied by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 6(2)).

7 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 36(1)(c); the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 6 and PARA 708. The power of intervention mentioned in the text refers to the Authority's powers under Sch 1 Pt 2 (see PARAS 890-894).

862-869 Compensation

Day appointed in relation to these provisions is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

(vii) Non-statutory Concepts of Required Conduct

870. Unbefitting conduct etc before 1 July 2007.

Prior to the introduction of the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007¹, where a complaint was made to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal in respect of a solicitor it was customary to allege that the solicitor had been guilty of conduct unbefitting a solicitor². Non-statutory misconduct is now likely to be considered by the Tribunal only in relation to conduct before 1 July 2007³.

For the purpose of such misconduct the conduct of a solicitor must be judged by the rules and standards of his profession, and it must be shown that he has done something which would be reasonably regarded as disgraceful or dishonourable by solicitors of good repute and competency⁴. Conduct which would be regarded as improper according to the consensus of professional, including judicial, opinion could be fairly stigmatised as such whether it violated the letter of a professional code or not⁵. Misconduct is not limited to that which is inexcusable and condemned by others in the profession and consequently includes negligence⁶.

A solicitor who discharges his professional duties with anything less than complete integrity, probity and trustworthiness must expect severe sanctions to be imposed⁷; conduct occurring before admission as a solicitor is within the scope of the Tribunal's consideration⁸. Offences involving dishonesty⁹ will almost certainly result in a solicitor being struck off¹⁰. Conviction of an offence which renders a solicitor unfit to be a member of the profession substantiates an allegation of conduct unbefitting a solicitor¹¹.

Where dishonesty has not been proved, but the solicitor's conduct has fallen short of that required, striking off may still be appropriate¹².

(viii) Liability to Third Parties

871. In general.

The Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007¹ provides a solicitor with a general obligation not to use his position to take unfair advantage of anyone either for his benefit or for that of another². It also draws together several obligations relating to the treatment of third parties as follows³.

Contacting any other party to a matter is generally prohibited and only permitted under certain limited circumstances⁴. A solicitor must fulfil an undertaking⁵ which is given in particular circumstances provided by the Code⁶. When negotiating costs payable by a third party or another firm's client, a solicitor is under an obligation to give sufficient time and information for the amount to be agreed and assessed⁷.

A solicitor may administer oaths or affirmations or take declarations but not when the solicitor or his firm is acting for any party in the matter⁸.

1 As to the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 generally see PARA 830 et seq.

3 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 10 introduction.

4 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 10.04. As to the limited circumstances see r 10.04(a)-(d).

The undertaking can be given orally or in writing and need not include the words 'undertake' or 'undertaking': r 24.01.

If a solicitor is instructed by a seller of land, other than in a sale by auction or tender, to deal with more than one prospective buyer the solicitor must immediately inform either the conveyancer of each prospective buyer or the prospective buyer if he is acting in person¹. The seller must agree to the disclosure and if he refuses to do so the solicitor must immediately stop acting in the matter². This also applies where to a solicitor's knowledge a seller of land, other than in a sale by auction or tender, deals directly with another prospective buyer (or their conveyancer) or instructs another conveyancer to deal with another prospective buyer³.

A solicitor must not act for both the seller and any of the prospective buyers⁴. Nor may a solicitor act for more than one of the prospective buyers⁵.

A solicitor, who has in the course of practice instructed a business carrying on the practice of a lawyer of another jurisdiction, must, as a matter of professional conduct, pay the proper fees for the work that lawyer does⁷. 875. Liability in contract.

Except where the court intervenes under its summary jurisdiction, a solicitor's liability to third persons¹ for acts done by him in his professional capacity is determined in accordance with the ordinary principles applicable to cases of agency². Where he contracts ostensibly as a principal without disclosing the fact that he is acting for a client, as where he contracts in his own name to purchase property, he is personally liable³, and if he has purported to act as agent so as to bind a principal but in fact without authority, he will be liable for breach of warranty of authority⁴. If, on the other hand, he acts under the authority of his client and is known to the third person to be so acting⁵, he is not, as a general rule, personally liable in matters of contract, for example, to pay the charges of a photographer⁶, witnesses' expenses⁷ or sheriff's fees⁸. A solicitor is not bound by a promise to pay given without consideration⁹, but he may be liable by custom¹⁰, or make himself liable by special contract, whether express¹¹ or to be implied from the circumstances¹², as where he asks for a particular officer to be employed to levy execution¹³, or where the transaction is a cash transaction for which it is not contemplated that the client should be liable. In particular, he is personally liable to persons who are directly employed by him and to whom he occupies the position of a principal, for example another solicitor employed as his London¹⁴ or country¹⁵ agent, a shorthand writer engaged to take notes of a trial¹⁶, or a law stationer¹⁷. He is under no legal liability to pay the fees of counsel employed by him¹⁸, and the court does not, under its summary jurisdiction, order him to do so¹⁹.

1 Liability to third persons considered here is confined to liability in contract or in tort. For the definition of what may be described as the interface between the two concepts see the judgment in White v Jones [1995] 2 AC 207, [1995] 1 All ER 691, HL; and see PARA 876 note 8.

876. Liability in tort.

A solicitor is personally liable in tort¹ where from his conduct it is clear that he has made himself a party to the tort². A solicitor acting for a client disposing of property or any interest in property for money or money's worth to a purchaser³ is liable to an action for damages by the purchaser or persons deriving title under him for any loss sustained by reason of:

- 1220 (1) the concealment of any instrument or incumbrance⁴ material to the title⁵;
or
- 1221 (2) any claim made by a person under a pedigree on which the title depends and which was falsified in order to induce the purchaser to accept the title⁶.

The client also is liable in similar circumstances⁷.

A solicitor instructed by a client to carry out a transaction to confer a benefit on an identified third person owes a duty to that person to use proper care in carrying out the instructions, and if a breach of that duty causes loss, even purely financial loss, to the third person the solicitor will be liable in negligence to him⁸. This is particularly significant in relation to the advice given by a solicitor at the request of a bank or other lender where the lender has requested that the solicitor gives independent advice as to the loan. The bank can assume that the solicitor in these circumstances has acted properly in giving the advice and need not inquire as to the details of the advice which has been given⁹. Even where there exists a conflict of interest between the solicitor's client and the other party to the transaction a duty of care may arise¹⁰.

Where a house is jointly owned and a solicitor fails to ensure that he has the authority of both parties to act in its sale, he is liable in negligence both to the party who has not in fact instructed him and to the mortgagee¹¹.

877. Criminal liability.

A solicitor, like any other person entrusted with or having received property as agent for or on account of another person, may be criminally liable for theft¹, for obtaining property by deception or a pecuniary advantage by deception², for false accounting or suppression of documents³, or for handling stolen goods⁴.

A solicitor who is liable in damages, by statutory provision⁵, for concealing or falsifying matters of title to property to induce a purchaser to accept the title offered also commits an offence⁶.

SOLICITORS/(7) PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, PRACTICE AND REDRESS/ (viii) Liability to Third Parties/878. Criminal and civil responsibility as officer of a company, etc.

878. Criminal and civil responsibility as officer of a company, etc.

A solicitor does not become an officer¹ of a company merely by being appointed solicitor to the company² although he will be such an officer if he is employed by the company at a salary on such terms as render him no longer an independent practitioner but the holder of an office under the company³. Accordingly a solicitor will not normally be liable as an officer⁴ of a company under the statutory provisions relating to malpractice before and during the liquidation of a company⁵.

A solicitor will not incur responsibility for a company's fraudulent trading merely because he has carried into effect lawful directions of the directors without having cause for suspicion⁶, although he will be criminally liable, and may also be made civilly responsible, if he was knowingly a party to the fraudulent trading⁷.

879. Personal liability of solicitor for costs; in general.

The Supreme Court has inherent jurisdiction over solicitors and may make appropriate orders in respect of costs against a solicitor personally¹. In any proceedings in any county court, the High Court and the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal² the court may disallow, or order the legal or other representative³ concerned to meet the whole of any wasted costs⁴ or such a part of them as may be determined in accordance with rules of court⁵. A solicitor may thus be liable to pay costs as an officer of the court under the inherent jurisdiction of the court, or under the statutory jurisdiction. Where the legislature has stepped in with legislation in a particular area then within that particular area the existing, inherent jurisdiction is ousted or curtailed, at any rate so far as the particular legislation is negative in character⁶.

1 See further PARA 880 et seq. As to the risk to legal representatives acting under a conditional fee agreement see Hodgson v Imperial Tobacco Ltd [1998] 2 All ER 673, [1998] 1 WLR 1056, CA; and PARA 953. The onus of proving liability for wasted costs is on the party making the application: see Stein v Blake [2000] All ER (D) 1507 (solicitor's responsibility to inform opposite party of embargo placed on client's legal aid).

2 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(1) (s 51 substituted by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 4(1)). Similarly in any criminal proceedings in the Court of Appeal, the Crown Court or a magistrates' court parallel provisions apply: see the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19A; and PARA 882. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 For these purposes, 'legal or other representative', in relation to a party to proceedings, means any person exercising a right of audience or right to conduct litigation on his behalf: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(13) (as substituted: see note 2); Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19A (added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 111). As to rights of audience and rights to conduct litigation see PARA 495 et seq. The Supreme Court Act 1981 is prospectively renamed: see note 2.

4 'Wasted costs' means any costs incurred by a party (1) as a result of any improper, unreasonable or negligent act or omission on the part of any legal or other representative or any employee of such representative; or (2) which in the light of any such act or omission occurring after they were incurred, the court considers it unreasonable to expect that party to pay: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(7) (as substituted: see note 2); Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19A (as added: see note 3). The Supreme Court Act 1981 is prospectively renamed: see note 2.

5 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(6) (as substituted: see note 2). The Supreme Court Act 1981 is prospectively renamed: see note 2. See Turner Page Music v Torres Design Associates Ltd (1998) Times, 3 August, CA; and PARA 881.

The majority of the court found that it had no jurisdiction. They held that the court was not bereft of all power to inquire (by disciplinary proceedings or an action by the client against the solicitor) into the question whether the solicitor had been guilty of serious misconduct or gross over-charging or fraud, but the court felt that the inquiry could not be by means of an application for taxation (now assessment) under s 70).

880. Inherent jurisdiction.

The inherent jurisdiction in civil and criminal proceedings appears to have developed along separate lines¹.

In criminal cases the conduct giving rise to the inherent jurisdiction is 'any conduct of a solicitor which involves a serious dereliction on the part of the solicitor of his duty to the court'².

The object of the jurisdiction is primarily to reimburse a litigant for costs incurred because of a solicitor's fault³. The costs which a solicitor would have to pay from his own pocket would be those and only those which his default had caused. Nothing is added to the figure to mark the disapproval of the court or by way of deterrence⁴.

However the Court of Appeal has found that there is also a punitive element⁵ since the solicitor has to pay a bill which would otherwise have to be met by one of the parties to the litigation. There is also necessarily an element of deterrence in that solicitors would wish to avoid the expense and adverse publicity that the exercise of the court's discretion entails.

It is only available where the conduct of the solicitor is inexcusable and such as to merit reproof'. It is evident from later civil decisions, eg Gupta v Comer [1991] 1 QB 629, [1991] 1 All ER 289, CA, that the preferred test is one of mere negligence.

3 See Weston v Central Criminal Court Courts Administrator [1977] QB 32 at 45, [1976] 2 All ER 875 at 883, CA, per Stephenson LJ. It should be noted that the inherent jurisdiction does not extend to counsel, who are not officers of the Supreme Court.

In any proceedings in the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal, the High Court and any county court¹ and in any criminal proceedings in the Court of Appeal, the Crown Court or a magistrates' court², the court may disallow or order the legal or other representative³ to meet the whole of any wasted costs⁴ or such part of them as may be determined in accordance with rules of court⁵ or regulations made by the Lord Chancellor⁶.

1 See the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(1) (substituted by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 4(1)). 3 As to the meaning of 'legal or other representative' see PARA 879 note 3.

4 As to the meaning of 'wasted costs' see PARA 879 note 4. An application for a wasted costs order is a summary procedure, which ought only to be used in simple and obvious cases, and which will generally be inappropriate for actions involving dishonesty, or breach of a solicitor's professional duty, where it is necessary to make detailed investigations of fact, resulting in complex proceedings: Turner Page Music v Torres Design Associates Ltd (1998) Times, 3 August, CA.

The regulations may provide that a legal or other representative against whom action is so taken by a magistrates' court may appeal to the Crown Court and that a legal or other representative against whom action is so taken by the Crown Court may appeal to the Court of Appeal: Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19A(2) (as so added). In exercise of the power so conferred, the Lord Chancellor has made the Costs in Criminal Cases (General) (Amendment) Regulations 1991, SI 1991/789, and the Costs in Criminal Cases (General) (Amendment) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/2408.

882. Wasted costs orders in criminal proceedings.

A wasted costs order in specified criminal proceedings¹ may provide for the whole or any part of the wasted costs² to be disallowed or ordered to be paid and the court must specify the amount of such costs³. Before making a wasted costs order the court must allow the legal or other representative⁴ and any party to the proceedings to make representations⁵. When making such an order, the court may take into account any other order as to costs in respect of the proceedings and may take the wasted costs order into account when making any other such order⁶. Where a wasted costs order has been made, the court must notify any interested party⁷.

A legal or other representative against whom the wasted costs order is made may appeal to the Crown Court, in the case of an order made by a magistrates' court, and to the Court of Appeal, in the case of an order made at first instance by the Crown Court⁸. On such an appeal the court may affirm, revoke or vary the order as it thinks fit and must notify its decision to the appellant, any interested party and the court which made the order⁹.

Where the person required to make a payment in respect of sums due under a wasted costs order fails to do so, the payment may be recovered summarily as a sum adjudged to be paid as a civil debt by order of a magistrates' court¹⁰.

1 'Wasted costs order' means any action taken by a court under the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 19A (see PARA 881); Costs in Criminal Cases (General) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1335, reg 3A (added by SI 1991/789).

When the court makes a wasted costs order, it must specify the amount to be disallowed or paid or direct a costs judge or a district judge to decide the amount of costs to be disallowed or paid¹. The court may direct that notice must be given to the legal representative's client, in such manner as the court may direct of any proceedings under this rule or of any order made under it against his legal representative². Before making a wasted costs order, the court may direct a costs judge or a district judge to inquire into the matter and report to the court³. The court may refer the question of wasted costs to a costs judge or a district judge, instead of making a wasted costs order⁴.

When a wasted costs order is contemplated a three-stage test should be applied. The first question is whether the legal representative of whom complaint was made had acted improperly, unreasonably or negligently. If he had so acted, it must then be considered whether that conduct caused the applicant to incur unnecessary costs; and finally, if unnecessary costs were so incurred, it must be decided whether in all the circumstances it is just to order the legal representative to compensate the applicant for the whole or part of those costs⁵. Demonstration of the causal link between improper, unreasonable or negligent conduct and the waste of costs is thus essential. Where such conduct is proved but no waste of costs is shown to have resulted, the case may be referred to the appropriate disciplinary body⁶ or the legal aid authorities; it is not a matter for the exercise of the wasted costs jurisdiction⁷. In general, wasted costs applications are best left until after the end of the trial⁸. Although the court might initiate the inquiry it should be slow to do so except in the most obvious case; it is normally for an aggrieved party to make an application, so that costs would then follow the event in the normal way between the parties⁹. Although no order should be made without giving the legal representative an opportunity to show cause why an order should not be made that does not mean that the burden is on the legal representative to exculpate himself¹⁰.

The jurisdiction to make a wasted costs order depends at two stages on the court's discretion: at the stage of initial application when the court is invited to give the legal representative an opportunity to show cause¹¹ and at the final stage when, even if the court is satisfied that the legal representative has acted improperly, unreasonably or negligently so as to waste costs it is not bound to make an order but must give sustainable reasons for the exercise of its discretion in that way¹².

1 CPR 48.7(4). The following applies where the court is considering whether to make an order under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(6) (court's power to disallow or (as the case may be) order a legal representative to meet, wasted costs) (see PARA 881): CPR 48.7(1). The court must give the legal representative a reasonable opportunity to attend a hearing to give reasons why it should not make such an order: CPR 48.7(2).

4 CPR 48.7(7).

5 Ridehalgh v Horsefield [1994] Ch 205, [1994] 3 All ER 848, CA. 'Improper' covers, but is not confined to, conduct which would ordinarily be held to justify striking off, suspension from practice or other serious professional penalty; 'unreasonable' describes conduct which is vexatious, designed to harass the other side rather than advance the resolution of the case and it makes no difference that the conduct is the product of excessive zeal and not improper motive; 'negligence' should be understood in an untechnical way to denote failure to act with the competence reasonably expected of ordinary members of the profession: Ridehalgh v Horsefield. On an application for wasted costs it is not necessary to prove under the negligence head negligence in the sense necessary in an action for negligence: see Saif Ali v Sydney Mitchell & Co [1980] AC 198 at 218, 220, [1978] 3 All ER 1033 at 1041, 1043, HL. A legal representative is not to be held to have acted improperly or unreasonably or negligently simply because he acted for a party who pursued a claim or defence which was plainly doomed to fail. There is a distinction between this and an abuse of the process; and if there is a doubt the legal representative is entitled to the benefit of it. In legally aided cases the court must bear in mind the peculiar vulnerability of legal representatives: see Symphony Group Plc v Hodgson [1994] QB 179 at 194, [1993] 4 All ER 143 at 154, CA. The legal representative acting as an advocate is immune from action for negligence at the suit of the client in respect of his conduct and management of the case in court and the pre-trial work immediately connected with it (see PARA 876); but if an advocate's conduct in court is improper, unreasonable or negligent he will be liable to a wasted costs order. The judge must make full allowance for the fact that an advocate in court often has to make decisions quickly and under pressure; it is only when, with all allowances made, an advocate's conduct of court proceedings is quite plainly unjustifiable that it is appropriate to make a wasted costs order against him: see Ridehalgh v Horsefield. See also Count Tolstoy-Miloslavsky v Lord Aldington [1996] 2 All ER 556, [1996] 1 WLR 736, CA (solicitor acting without a fee in a hopeless case did not justify the making of a wasted costs order).

6 As to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal see PARA 906.

7 Ridehalgh v Horsefield [1994] Ch 205, [1994] 3 All ER 848, CA. A solicitor does not abdicate his professional responsibility when he seeks the advice of counsel; he must apply his mind to the advice received. The more specialist the nature of the advice, the more reasonable it is likely to be for him to accept it: Locke v Camberwell Health Authority [1991] 2 Med LR 249, [1990] NLJR 205.

8 Fimlab Systems International Ltd v Pennington [1994] 4 All ER 673, [1995] 1 WLR 673; approved in Ridehalgh v Horsefield [1994] Ch 205, [1994] 3 All ER 848, CA.

9 Ridehalgh v Horsefield [1994] Ch 205, [1994] 3 All ER 848, CA. The procedure to be followed is to be laid down by the court so as to meet the requirements of the individual case before it. The over-riding requirements are that any procedure is to be fair and simple and as summary as fairness permits. The respondent lawyer must be very clearly told what he is said to have done wrong and what is claimed: Ridehalgh v Horsefield.

10 Ridehalgh v Horsefield [1994] Ch 205, [1994] 3 All ER 848, CA. An order should not be made unless the applicant satisfies the court that it should be. The relevant rule clearly envisages that the legal representative should not be called on to reply unless an apparently strong prima facie case has been made against him: Ridehalgh v Horsefield.

11 This is not something to be done automatically; the costs of the inquiries compared with the costs claimed will always be a relevant consideration. The discretion, like any other, is to be exercised judicially; but judges might not infrequently decide that further proceedings were not likely to be justified: Ridehalgh v Horsefield [1994] Ch 205, [1994] 3 All ER 848, CA.

12 Ridehalgh v Horsefield [1994] Ch 205, [1994] 3 All ER 848, CA. The court has a general power to order costs against a legal representative personally under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(3) even against someone not representing a party to the proceedings if that legal representative has acted improperly and unreasonably: Kleinwort Benson v De Montenegro [1994] NPC 46 per Aldous J.

884. Liability to client.

A solicitor may be ordered to indemnify his client against costs where he defends an action to which, to his knowledge, there is no defence¹; where he appeals in his own interest and not on behalf of his client²; where he improperly continues proceedings after his client becomes mentally disordered³; and where he fails to secure the correction of an error in a court order⁴. Where a solicitor institutes, defends⁵ or continues⁶ proceedings without authority he may be ordered to indemnify his alleged client against costs, that is to pay the costs of his alleged client⁷ and to pay also the costs of the other side⁸.

(i) In general

886. Introduction.

Until a day to be appointed, the Legal Services Ombudsman has responsibility for investigating allegations concerning the manner in which complaints made to any body having disciplinary powers in relation to barristers has been dealt with¹. The office was created by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990². The Ombudsman has wide-ranging powers to order the reconsideration of complaints and the payment of compensation to complainants³, and to make recommendations as to the functioning of disciplinary bodies⁴.

As from a day to be appointed these functions will vest in the Office of Legal Complaints, which is constituted under the Legal Services Act 2007⁵.

1 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 22(1) (as prospectively repealed); and PARA 424 et seq. As to the bodies having disciplinary powers in relation to barristers see PARAS 1254-1292. The Ombudsman may not investigate an issue which is being or has been determined by a disciplinary tribunal: see s 22(7) (as prospectively repealed); and PARA 426.

2 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 21 (as prospectively repealed); and PARA 424.

(ii) Duties in relation to Complaints

887. Complaint handling.

The following is the responsibility of a principal in a firm¹. The firm must have a written complaints procedure and complaints must be handled promptly, fairly and effectively in accordance with that procedure². The client must be given a copy of the complaints procedure and told in writing, at the outset, that in the event of a problem he is entitled to complain and to whom he should complain³. Once a complaint is made the person complaining must be told in writing how the complaint will be handled and within what timescales he will receive a substantive response⁴. If a principal⁵ discovers an act or omission which could give rise to a claim, he must inform his client⁶.

When a client makes a claim or notifies an intention to do so he must also be informed that independent advice should be sought⁷. If a conflict of interest has arisen the principal must stop working for the client in the matter of the claim⁸. The qualifying insurer or the Assigned Risks Pool Manager or, if appropriate, the Solicitors Indemnity Fund Ltd must be notified⁹.

Solicitors have a duty to report any serious misconduct and financial difficulties of another solicitor to the Solicitors Regulation Authority¹⁰. A solicitor also has a duty co-operate with the Authority and the Legal Complaints Service and not to hinder any person who wishes to make a complaint to those bodies about them¹¹.

1 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.05(1). If a principal can demonstrate that it was inappropriate in the circumstances to meet some or all of the requirements of r 2.05(1) he will not breach r 2.05: r 2.05(2). As to the meaning of 'principal' see PARA 676 note 12. As to the meaning of 'firm' see PARA 676 note 10.

2 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.05(1)(a).

3 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.05(1)(b), (c).

4 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.05(d). A client must not be charged for the handling of a complaint: r 2.05(3).

5 This also applies to a director of a recognised body which is a company, a member of a recognised body which is a limited liability partnership or a recognised body: see the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 20.07(1). As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3. Rule 20 also applies to an overseas practice: see r 15.20.

6 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 20.07(1).

7 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 20.07(2)(a). This does not apply if the client's loss is trivial and promptly remedied.

8 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 20.07(2)(b).

11 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 rr 20.03(1), 20.05; and PARAS 619, 632. Any request for documents and information by the Authority must be dealt with promptly: see r 20.06; and PARA 619.

TEXT AND NOTES--Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.05 amended on 31 March 2009, 31 March 2010, r 15.20 amended on 31 March 2009, r 20.04 amended on 1 July 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/888. Provision of information and documents.

(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority

888. Provision of information and documents.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Where the Solicitors Regulation Authority² is satisfied that it is necessary to do so³ it may give notice to the solicitor or his firm requiring the production or delivery to any person appointed by the Authority, at a time and place to be fixed by the Authority, of all relevant documents in the possession of the solicitor or his firm⁴.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect⁵. The Authority may by notice⁶ require a person⁷ to provide information, or information of a description, specified in the notice or to produce documents, or documents of a description, specified in the notice⁸.

Such a notice:

- 1222 (1) may specify the time and place at which, and manner and form in which, the information is to be provided or document is to be produced;
- 1223 (2) must specify the period within which the information is to be provided or the document produced;
- 1224 (3) may require the information to be provided or document to be produced to the Authority or to a person specified in the notice⁹.

The Authority may require, by notice, a person to whom a notice is given under the above provisions (or a representative of the person) to attend at a time and place specified in the notice to provide an explanation of any information provided or document produced relevant to the notice¹⁰.

The High Court on the application of the Authority may order¹¹ a person to whom the above provisions¹² do not apply to provide information, or information of a description, specified in the notice¹³, or to produce documents, or documents of a description, specified in the notice¹⁴.

It is an offence for a person in purported compliance with a requirement imposed on that person under the above provisions¹⁵ to provide information which the person knows to be false or misleading in a material particular or recklessly to provide information which is false or misleading in a material particular¹⁶.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B (added by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 ss 2, 69(5), Sch 9 para 2) is substituted and the Solicitors Act 1974 ss 44BA-44BC are added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 44 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B refers to the 'Council' (ie the Council of the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1))). However in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

3 ie for the purpose of investigating:

- 228 (1) whether there has been professional misconduct by a solicitor;
- 229 (2) whether a solicitor has failed to comply with any requirement imposed by or by virtue of the Solicitors Act 1974 or any rules made by the Authority;
- 230 (3) whether any professional services provided by a solicitor were not of the quality which it is reasonable to expect of him as a solicitor; or
- 231 (4) whether there are grounds for making, or making an application to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal for it to make, an order under s 43(2) (see PARA 927) with respect to a person who is or was employed or remunerated by a solicitor in connection with his practice (s 44B(1)(a)-(d) (as added (see note 1); and substituted by the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 7 para 11(2))).

It is an offence for a person who knows or suspects an investigation into any of the matters mentioned in heads (1)-(4) above is being or is likely to be conducted to falsify, conceal, destroy or otherwise dispose of a document which the person knows or suspects is or would be relevant to the investigation or to cause or permit the falsification, concealment, destruction or disposal of such a document: s 44BC(1) (as prospectively added). In proceedings for such an offence it is a defence for the accused to show that the accused had no intention of concealing facts disclosed by the documents from the person conducting the investigation: s 44BC(2) (as so prospectively added). A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or both or on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine or both: s 44BC(4) (as so prospectively added). As from a day to be appointed (ie the date on which the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 154(1) comes into force) the reference to 6 months is to be read as a reference to 12 months: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44BC(5) (as so prospectively added). As to the statutory maximum see PARA 553 note 6.

4 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B(1) (as added: see note 1). The Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 paras 9(2)-(12), 12-16 (see PARAS 891-894) apply to the powers conferred by s 44B(1) as they apply to the powers conferred by Sch 1 para 9(1): see s 44B(2) (as so added).

5 See note 1.

6 The Authority may give a notice under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B only if it is satisfied that it is necessary to do so for the purpose of investigating:

- 232 (1) whether there has been professional misconduct by a solicitor;
- 233 (2) whether a solicitor, or an employee of a solicitor, has failed to comply with any requirements imposed by or by virtue of the Solicitors Act 1974 or any rules made by the Authority (s 44B(3)(a) (as added and prospectively substituted: see note 1));
- 234 (3) whether a recognised body, or any of its managers or employees has failed to comply with any requirement imposed by or by virtue of the Administration of Justice Act 1985 or any rules made by the Authority and applicable to the body, manager or employee by virtue of s 9 (Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B(3)(b) (as so added and prospectively substituted));
- 235 (4) whether there are grounds for making, or making an application to the Tribunal for it to make, an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2) (see PARA 927) with respect to a person who is or was involved in a legal practice (s 44B(3)(c) (as so added and prospectively substituted)).

As to when a person is or was involved in a legal practice see s 43(1A); and PARA 927.

7 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B applies to:

- 236 (1) a solicitor;
- 237 (2) an employee of a solicitor;
- 238 (3) a recognised body;
- 239 (4) an employee or manager of, or a person with an interest in, a recognised body (s 44B(2) (as added and prospectively substituted: see note 1)).

As to the meaning of 'manager' see the Legal Services Act 2007 s 207; and PARA 369 note 17 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B(9) (as so added and prospectively substituted)). As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9; and PARA 687 note 3 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B(9) (as so added and prospectively substituted). As to a person who has an interest in a recognised body see the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 72, 109; and PARAS 1476-1477 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B(9) (as so added and prospectively substituted)). Until a day to be appointed (ie the coming into force of the Legal Services Act 2007 s 13 (see PARA 509)) the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B has effect as if the list of persons in s 44B(2) included a legal partnership: Sch 22 para 13. For this purpose 'legal partnership' means a partnership in which a qualified solicitor, a registered European Lawyer or a body recognised under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9 is permitted to practise by virtue of rules made under s 9 or the Solicitors Act 1974 s 31: Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 5 para 7 (definition applied by Sch 22 para 13).

The Authority may pay to any person such reasonable costs as may be incurred by that person in connection with the provision of any information, or production of any document, by that person pursuant to a notice under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B: s 44B(5) (as so added and prospectively substituted).

8 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B(1) (as added and prospectively substituted: see note 1). Schedule 1 paras 9(3), 13, 15, 16 (see PARAS 890-891, 894) apply in relation to the powers to obtain information conferred by s 44B: see s 44B(6) (as so added and prospectively substituted). Schedule 1 paras 9(2), (4)-(12), 12, 13, 15, 16 apply in relation to the power to obtain documents conferred by s 44B as they apply in relation to the powers conferred by Sch 1 para 9(1): see s 44B(7) (as so added and prospectively substituted). Where such powers are exercisable in relation to a person within s 44B(2) they continue to be so exercisable after the person has ceased to be such a person: s 44B(8) (as so added and prospectively substituted).

9 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B(4) (as added and prospectively substituted: see note 1).

10 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44BA(1) (as prospectively added: see note 1). The Authority may pay to any person such reasonable costs as may be incurred by that person in connection with that person's compliance with such a requirement: s 44BA(2) (as so prospectively added). Schedule 1 paras 9(3), (4), 13, 15, 16 (see PARAS 890-891, 894) apply in relation to a notice given under s 44BA: see s 44BA(3) (as so prospectively added).

11 The High Court may make such an order only if it is satisfied that it is likely that the information or document is in the possession or custody of, or under the control of, the person and that there is reasonable cause to believe that the information or document is likely to be of material significance to an investigation into any of the matters mentioned in the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B(3): s 44BB(2) (as prospectively added: see note 1). Such an order may direct the Authority to pay to a person specified in the order such reasonable costs as may be incurred by that person in connection with the provision of any information, or production of any document, by that person pursuant to the order: s 44BB(3) (as so prospectively added).

13 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 44B(4) applies in relation to an order under s 44BB as it applies in relation to a notice under s 44B: s 44BB(4) (as prospectively added: see note 1). Schedule 1 paras 9(5A), (7)-(12), 12, 13, 15, 16 apply in relation to an order under s 44BB as they apply in relation to an order under Sch 1 para 9(4): see s 44BB(5) (as so prospectively added).

As from a day to be appointed (ie the date on which the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 154(1) comes into force) the reference to six months is to be read as a reference to 12 months: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44BC(5) (as so prospectively added).

889. Investigation costs.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Where the Solicitors Regulation Authority² investigates possible professional misconduct by a solicitor, or a failure or apprehended failure by a solicitor to comply with any requirement imposed by or by virtue of the Solicitors Act 1974 or any rules made by the Authority, the Authority may direct him to pay to the Authority an amount which is calculated by the Authority as the cost to the Authority of investigating and dealing with the matter or in the opinion of the Authority represents a reasonable contribution towards that cost³.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect⁴. The Authority may make regulations⁴ prescribing charges to be paid to the Authority by solicitors⁵ who are the subject of a discipline investigation⁶.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 44C (added by the Access to Justice Act 2007 Sch 7 para 13) is substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 45 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 44C refers to the 'Society' or the 'Council' (ie the Law Society and the Council of the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

3 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44C (as added: see note 1).

4 Such regulations may:

240 (1) make different provision for different cases or purposes;

241 (2) provide for the whole or part of a charge payable under the regulations to be repaid in such circumstances as may be prescribed by the regulations: Solicitors Act 1974 s 44C(3) (as added; prospectively substituted (see note 1)).

5 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 44C (other than s 44C(2)(a)) applies in relation to an employee of a solicitor as it applies in relation to a solicitor: s 44C(5) (as added and prospectively substituted: see note 1).

6 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44C(1) (as added and prospectively substituted (see note 1)). A 'discipline investigation' is an investigation carried out by the Authority into:

242 (1) possible professional misconduct by a solicitor (s 44C(2)(a) (as so added and prospectively substituted)); or

243 (2) a failure or apprehended failure by a solicitor to comply with any requirement imposed by or by virtue of the Solicitors Act 1974 or any rules made by the Authority (s 44C(2)(b) (as so added and prospectively substituted)).

Any charge which a solicitor is required to pay under regulations under s 44C is recoverable by the Authority as a debt due to the Authority from the solicitor: s 44C(4) (as so added and prospectively substituted).

888-889 Provision of information and documents, Investigation costs

Day appointed in relation to these provisions is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/890. Circumstances in which the Solicitors Regulation Authority may intervene.

890. Circumstances in which the Solicitors Regulation Authority may intervene.

The Solicitors Regulation Authority¹ has extensive powers of intervention in a solicitor's practice², which it may exercise where:

- 1225 (1) the Authority has reason to suspect dishonesty³ on the part of a solicitor, an employee of a solicitor or the personal representatives of a deceased solicitor in connection with that solicitor's practice or with any trust⁴ of which that solicitor is or formerly was a trustee⁵;
- 1226 (2) the Authority considers that there has been undue delay on the part of the personal representatives of a deceased solicitor who immediately before his death was practising as a sole solicitor⁶ in connection with that solicitor's practice or in connection with any controlled trust⁷;
- 1227 (3) the Authority is satisfied that a solicitor has failed to comply with rules relating to professional practice, conduct and discipline⁸, accounts rules or trust accounts rules⁹, or with indemnity rules¹⁰ requiring solicitors to take out insurance¹¹;
- 1228 (4) a solicitor has been adjudged bankrupt or has made a composition or arrangement with his creditors¹²;
- 1229 (5) a solicitor has been committed to prison in any civil or criminal proceedings¹³;
- 1230 (6) the Authority is satisfied that a sole solicitor is incapacitated by illness or accident to such an extent as to be unable to attend to his practice¹⁴;
- 1231 (7) a solicitor lacks capacity¹⁵ to act as a solicitor and certain powers¹⁶ under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 are exercisable in relation to him¹⁷;
- 1232 (8) the name of a solicitor has been removed from or struck off the roll or a solicitor has been suspended from practice¹⁸;
- 1233 (9) the Authority is satisfied that a sole solicitor has abandoned his practice¹⁹;
- 1234 (10) the Authority is satisfied that a sole solicitor is incapacitated by age to such an extent as to be unable to attend to his practice²⁰;
- 1235 (11) any power conferred by these provisions²¹ has been exercised in relation to a sole solicitor by virtue of head (1) and he has acted as a sole solicitor within the period of 18 months beginning with the date on which it was so exercised²²;
- 1236 (12) the Authority is satisfied that a person has acted as a solicitor at a time when he did not have a practising certificate which was in force²³;
- 1237 (13) the Authority is satisfied that a solicitor has failed to comply with any condition, subject to which his practising certificate was granted or otherwise has effect, to the effect that he may act as a solicitor only in certain circumstances²⁴;
- 1238 (14) a complaint is made to the Authority that there has been undue delay on the part of a solicitor in connection with any matter in which he or his firm was instructed on behalf of a client²⁵ or with any controlled trust²⁶, and the solicitor fails within eight days of being invited in writing to do so by the Authority²⁷ to give an explanation which the Authority regards as satisfactory²⁸;
- 1239 (15) as from a day to be appointed, the Authority has reason to suspect dishonesty on the part of a solicitor in connect with the business of any person of whom the solicitor is or was an employee or of any body of which the solicitor is or was a manager or any business which is or was carried on by the solicitor as a sole trader²⁹;

1240 (16) as from a day to be appointed, the Authority is satisfied that it is necessary to exercise certain powers³⁰ in relation to a solicitor to protect the interests of clients (or former or potential clients) of the solicitor or his firm or the interests of the beneficiaries of any trust of which the solicitor is or was a trustee³¹.

Where the powers of intervention are exercisable in relation to a solicitor, they continue to be exercisable after his death or after his name has been removed from or struck off the roll³².

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 refers to the 'Society' or until a day to be appointed the 'Council' (ie the Law Society and the Council of the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)): see Sch 1 (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

2 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 35, Sch 1 Pt II (paras 5-16); and PARA 891 et seq. The Authority may do all things which are reasonably necessary for the purpose of facilitating the exercise of its powers under Sch 1: Sch 1 para 16. The powers of intervention so conferred are also exercisable in relation to a recognised body and its business in certain circumstances: see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9(6), Sch 2 paras 32-34; and PARA 718. As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3. When hearing a challenge to an intervention into a solicitor's practice, the court is not confined only to a review of the decision to intervene, but also whether the grounds for the intervention had been made out and still existed, and if so, whether on the material before the court the intervention should continue: see Law Society of England and Wales v Share [2008] All ER (D) 361 (Jul).

3 In this context the word 'dishonesty' is wide enough to cover the making of fictitious entries in a solicitor's records, even though causing no financial loss to anyone: Re a Solicitor (No 52700 of 1995) (1995) Times, 11 July. There is no requirement for the solicitor to be given particulars of the suspected dishonesty at the time that a notice of intervention is served: Giles v Law Society (1995) Times, 20 October, CA. When deciding the issue of dishonesty it is necessary for the Tribunal to determine whether the solicitor had acted dishonestly by the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest people and whether he was aware that by those standards he was acting dishonestly: see Bryant v Law Society [2007] EWHC 3043 (Admin) [2007] All ER (D) 379 (Dec).

4 As to the meaning of 'trust' see PARA 835 note 4.

5 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1(1)(a). As from a day to be appointed Sch 1 para 1(1)(a) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(2)(a)(ii) so that it applies to a solicitor's practice or former practice or in connection with any trust of which that solicitor is or formerly was a trustee or that employee is or was a trustee in his capacity as such an employee. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 'Sole solicitor' means a solicitor who is the sole principal in a practice: Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1).

7 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1(1)(b). As from a day to be appointed the word 'trust' is substituted for the words 'controlled trust' by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(2)(c)(i). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the meaning of 'controlled trust' see PARA 835 note 8.

10 Ie rules made by virtue of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 37(2)(c) (see PARA 853).

11 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1(1)(c) (amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 7 para 6). Until a day to be appointed the powers of intervention are only exercisable under head (3) in the text if the Authority has given the solicitor written notice that it is satisfied that he has failed to comply with specified rules and also that the powers conferred by Sch 1 Pt II are accordingly exercisable in his case: Sch 1 para 1(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

13 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1(1)(e).

14 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1(1)(ee) (added by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 8, Sch 1 para 13(1), (2)). As from a day to be appointed head (6) in the text is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(2)(e)(ii) and will also apply when the Authority is satisfied that a sole solicitor is incapacitated by injury to such an extent as to be unable to attend to his practice. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

15 As to the meaning of 'lacks capacity' see the Mental Capacity Act 2005; MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 641.

16 The powers under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 ss 15-20, or s 48 (see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARAS 751, 756-760.

19 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1(1)(h) (added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 91(1)). As from a day to be appointed the word 'sole' is omitted from head (9) in the text by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(2)(f)(ii), Sch 23. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

24 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1(1)(l) (added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 91(1)). The certain circumstances mentioned in the text refer to:

244 (1) in employment which is approved by the Authority in connection with the imposition of that condition (Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1(1)(l)(i) (as so added));

245 (2) as a member of a partnership which is so approved (Sch 1 para 1(1)(l)(ii) (as so added));

246 (3) as an officer of a body recognised by the Authority under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9 and so approved (Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1(1)(l)(iii) (as so added)); or 247 (4) in any specified combination of those ways (Sch 1 para 1(1)(l)(iv) (as so added)).

As from a day to be appointed the words 'a manager' are substituted for the words 'an officer' in head (3) by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(2)(h)(ii). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the meaning of 'manager' see the Legal Services Act 2007 s 207; and PARA 369 note 17 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1A (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(2)(j))).

25 As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 835 note 6.

26 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 3(a). As from a day to be appointed Sch 1 para 3(a) is substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(3)(b) to apply where the Authority is satisfied that there has been undue delay:

248 (1) on the part of a solicitor in connection with any matter in which the solicitor or his firm is or was acting on behalf of a client or with any trust (Sch 1 para 3(a)(i)); or 249 (2) on the part of an employee of a solicitor in connection with any trust of which the employee is or was a trustee in his capacity as such an employee (Sch 1 para 3(a)(ii)).

In the circumstances described in head (14) in the text, powers are not exercisable under Sch 1 para 5 (High Court order restricting payments), or Sch 1 para 10 (High Court order to divert mail): Sch 1 paras 5(4), 10(3).

27 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 3(b).

890-893 Circumstances in which the Solicitors Regulation Authority may intervene ... Other powers of intervention

Amendments made by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77 in force 31 March 2009: SI 2009/3250.

890 Circumstances in which the Solicitors Regulation Authority may intervene

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/891. Taking possession of solicitor's documents.

891. Taking possession of solicitor's documents.

Where the powers of intervention are exercisable in relation to a solicitor¹, the Solicitors Regulation Authority² may give notice to the solicitor or his firm³ requiring the production or delivery to any person appointed by it and at a fixed time and place of all documents in the possession of the solicitor or his firm in connection with his practice or any controlled trust⁴ or, where the powers are exercisable because of a complaint of the solicitor's delay⁵, of all such documents in connection with the trust⁶ or other matters to which the complaint relates, whether or not they relate also to other matters⁷.

On the application of the Authority, the High Court may order a person required to produce or deliver such documents to produce or deliver them to any person appointed by the Authority at a specified time and place and authorise him to take possession of them on behalf of the Authority⁸, and, on the application of the Authority, the High Court may make a similar order with respect to a person other than the solicitor or his firm where it is satisfied and has reason to suspect that such documents have come into the possession of that other person⁹.

Upon taking possession of any such documents the Authority must serve upon the solicitor or his personal representatives, and upon any other person from whom they were received on the Authority's behalf or from whose premises they were taken, a notice that possession has been taken on the date specified in the notice¹⁰, and within eight days thereafter¹¹ a person upon whom such a notice has been served, on giving not less than 48 hours' notice to the Authority, may apply to the High Court for an order directing the Authority to deliver the documents to such person as the applicant may require¹².

The Authority is also empowered to apply to the High Court for orders in respect of the disposal or destruction of documents coming into its possession pursuant to the exercise of these powers¹³.

1 As to when the powers of intervention are exercisable see PARA 890.

2 The Solicitors Act 1074 Sch 1 para 9 refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

3 For these purposes, references to the solicitor or his firm include, in any case where the solicitor has died, his personal representatives: Solicitors Act 1974 s 35, Sch 1 para 4(2).

4 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(1)(a). As from a day to be appointed Sch 1 para 9(1)(a) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(9)(a)(i) and instead applies to all the documents in the possession or under the control of the solicitor or his firm in connection with his practice or former practice or with any trust of which the solicitor is or was a trustee. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the meaning of 'controlled trust' see PARA 835 note 8. The person appointed by the Authority may take possession of the documents on its behalf: Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(2). The Authority may do all things reasonably necessary to facilitate the exercise of its power: Sch 1 para 16. If any person having possession (or as from a day to be appointed, control) of any such documents refuses, neglects or otherwise fails to comply with these provisions, he is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: Sch 1 para 9(3) (amended by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46; and prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 1 para 77(9)(c)). Where an offence under the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 committed by a body corporate is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of, or to be attributable to any neglect on the part of, any director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate or any person who was purporting to act in any such capacity, he, as well as the body corporate, is guilty of that offence and is liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly: Sch 1 para 14. As to the standard scale see PARA 571 note 1. The power to seize documents must be exercised with care and 'fair balance': Holder v Law Society [2003] EWCA Civ 39, [2003] 3 All ER 62, [2003] 1 WLR 1059. As from a day to be appointed in the case of a document which consists of information which is stored in electronic form, a requirement imposed by a notice under the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(1) or an order under Sch 1 para 9(4) or (5) is a requirement to produce or deliver the information in a form in which it is legible or from which it can readily be produced in a legible form: Sch 1 para 9(5A) (added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(9)(e)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5 le under the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 3: see PARA 890.

6 As to the meaning of 'trust' see PARA 835 note 4.

7 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(1)(b). As from a day to be appointed Sch 1 para 9(1)(b) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 77(9)(b)(i) and instead relates to all such documents of the solicitor or his firm in connection with the trust or other matters of which the Authority is satisfied whether or not they relate also to other matters. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See also note 4.

8 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(4). See also note 7. The person against whom the Authority is seeking an order must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5).

9 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(5). As from a day to be appointed Sch 1 para 9(5) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(9)(d) and applies where there is reason to suspect that such documents have come into the possession or under the control of that other person. For the procedure on the application see PARA 894. On making an order under these provisions or at any later time the court may, on the application of the Authority, authorise a person appointed by the Authority to enter any premises (using such force as may be reasonably necessary) to search for and take possession of any documents to which the order relates and, as from a day to be appointed, any property in the possession of or under the control of the solicitor or his firm or, in the case of an order under Sch 1 para 9(5), which was in the possession or under the control of such a person and has come into the possession or under the control of the person in respect of whom the order is made, which the Authority reasonably requires for the purpose of accessing information contained in such documents, and to use property obtained under these provisions for that purpose: Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(6) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(9)(g)). Unless restricted by an order on an application under the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(8) or (10) (see the text and notes 12-13), the Authority may take copies of or extracts from documents in its possession and require any person to whom documents are to be delivered to give an undertaking to supply copies or extracts: Sch 1 para 9(12). The powers conferred by Sch 1 in relation to documents are exercisable notwithstanding any lien on them or right to their possession: Sch 1 para 12. The person against whom the Authority is seeking an order must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5).

10 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(7). As from a day to be appointed Sch 1 para 9(7), (8), (10) are amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(9)(h)-(j) to refer to documents or other property. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

11 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(9) (prospectively amended: see note 10).

12 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(8) (prospectively amended: see note 10). On the application the court may make such order as it thinks fit: Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(11). As to the procedure on such applications see PARA 894. The Solicitors Regulation Authority must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5). The CPR 67.4(5) refers to the Law Society but in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority.

13 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 9(10) (prospectively amended: see note 10). On such an application the court may make such order as it thinks fit: Sch 1 para 9(11). For the procedure see PARA 894. The person from whom the Authority took possession of the documents which it wishes to dispose of or destroy must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5).

SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/892. Control of solicitor's bank accounts.

892. Control of solicitor's bank accounts.

Where the powers of intervention are exercisable in relation to a solicitor¹, the High Court, on the application of the Solicitors Regulation Authority², may order that no payment is to be made without the leave of the court by any person, whether or not named in the order, of any money held by him (in whatever manner and whether it was received before or after the making of the order) on behalf of the solicitor or his firm³. No such order may take effect in relation to any person until the Authority has served a copy upon him, whether or not he is named in it⁴; and no person is treated as having disobeyed such an order by making a payment of money if he satisfies the court that he exercised due diligence to ascertain whether it was money to which the order related but nevertheless failed to ascertain that the order related to that money⁵.

The Authority may pass a resolution to the effect that any specified sums of money⁶ and the right to recover or receive them are to vest in the Authority, in which event all such sums vest accordingly, whether received by the person holding them before or after the Authority's resolution, and are held by the Authority on trust to exercise in relation to them the powers conferred on the Authority⁷ and otherwise upon trust for the persons beneficially entitled to them⁸.

The Authority must serve on the solicitor or on his firm and on any other person having possession of sums of money to which the Authority's resolution relates a certified copy of the resolution and a notice prohibiting the payment out of any such sums of money⁹. Within eight days of the service of this notice, the person on whom it was served, on giving not less than 48 hours' written notice to the Authority and, where appropriate, to the Authority's solicitor, may apply to the High Court for an order directing the Authority to withdraw the notice¹⁰. If the court makes such an order, it has power also to make such other order with respect to the matter as it thinks fit¹¹.

If the Authority takes possession of any sum of money to which these provisions apply¹², it must pay it into a special account in the name of the Authority or of a person nominated on its behalf, or into the client account of a solicitor nominated on its behalf, and any such person or solicitor is to hold that sum on trust to permit the Authority to exercise any of its powers in relation to it¹³, and thereafter on trust for the persons beneficially entitled to it¹⁴. A bank or other financial institution at which such a special account is kept is, however, under no obligation to ascertain whether it is being dealt with properly¹⁵.

Without prejudice to any of the above provisions, if the High Court is satisfied, on an application by the Authority, that there is reason to suspect that any person holds money on behalf of the solicitor or his firm, the court may require that person to give the Authority information as to any such money and the accounts in which it is held¹⁶.

1 As to when the powers are exercisable see PARA 890. As to the application of these provisions in the case of a recognised body see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 14 (prospectively repealed); and PARAS 694, 710. As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3.

2 The Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 refers to the 'Society' or until a day to be appointed the 'Council' (ie the Law Society and the Council of the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

3 Solicitors Act 1974 s 35, Sch 1 para 5(1). For these purposes, references to the solicitor or his firm include in any case where the solicitor has died, his personal representatives: Sch 1 para 4(2). Now, at any time after an application has been issued for an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 5, the court may, on an application, make an interim order under Sch 1 para 5 to have effect until the hearing of the application, and order the defendant, if he objects to the order being continued at the hearing, to file and serve written evidence showing cause why the order should not be continued: CPR 67.4(6). If the application under Sch 1 para 5 relates to money held on behalf of an individual solicitor, the solicitor must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5). If the application under Sch 1 para 5 relates to money held on behalf of a firm, every partner in the firm must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5). If the application under Sch 1 para 5 relates to money held on behalf of a limited liability partnership or other corporation, the partnership or other corporation must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5). The Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 5 does not apply where the powers conferred by Sch 1 Pt II are exercisable by virtue of Sch 1 para 3 (see PARA 890): Sch 1 para 5(4).

4 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 5(2). In the case of a bank or other financial institution, the Authority must indicate at which of its branches the Authority believes that the money to which the order relates is held: Sch 1 para 5(2) (amended by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 8, Sch 1 para 13(1), (3)).

5 See the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 5(3).

6 These provisions apply:

250 (1) where the powers so conferred are exercisable by virtue of the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 1 (see PARA 890), to all sums of money held by or on behalf of the solicitor or his firm in connection with his practice or with any trust of which he is or was formerly a trustee (Sch 1 para 6(2)(a));

251 (2) where they are exercisable on the death of a sole solicitor, to all sums of money held in any client account (Sch 1 paras 2, 6(2)(b)); and 252 (3) where they are exercisable by reason of the solicitor's delay, to all sums of money held by or on behalf of the solicitor or his firm in connection with the trust or other matter to which the complaint relates (Sch 1 paras 3, 6(2)(c)).

As to the meaning of 'trust' see para 835 note 4; as to the meaning of 'sole solicitor' see para 890 note 7; and as to the meaning of 'client account' see PARA 838 note 3.

As from a day to be appointed the following apply. Head (1) is amended and applies where the powers are exercisable by virtue of Sch 1 para 1 to all sums of money held by or on behalf of the solicitor or his firm in connection with his practice or former practice, any trust of which he is or formerly was a trustee or any trust of which a person who is or was an employee of the solicitor is or was a trustee in the person's capacity as such an employee: see the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 6(2)(a) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(5)(b)). The following applies to any right to recover or receive debts due to the solicitor or his firm in connection with his practice or former practice: Sch 1 para 6A(2) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(6)). Without prejudice to the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 5, if the Authority passes a resolution to the effect that any rights to which Sch 1 para 6A applies must vest in the Authority, those rights must vest accordingly: Sch 1 para 6A(1) (as so prospectively added). Any sums recovered by the Authority by virtue of the exercise of rights vested under Sch 1 para 6A(1) must vest in the Authority and be held by it on trust to exercise in relation to them the powers conferred by Sch 1 Pt II and, subject to those powers and to rules under Sch 1 para 6B, upon trust for the persons beneficially entitled to them: Sch 1 para 6B(3) (as so prospectively added). The Authority must serve on the solicitor or his firm, and any person who owes a debt to which the order applies, a certified copy of the Authority's resolution: Sch 1 para 6B(4) (as so prospectively added). The Authority may make rules governing its treatment of sums vested in it under Sch 1 para 6 or 6A(3): Sch 1 para 6B (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(6)). The rules may in particular make provision in respect of cases where the Authority, having taken such steps to do so as are reasonable in all the circumstances of the case, is unable to trace the person or persons beneficially entitled to any sum vested in the Authority under Sch 1 para 6 or para 6A(3) (including provision which requires amounts to be paid into or out of compensation funds (within the meaning of s 36A)) (as so prospectively added).

At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

7 The powers conferred by the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 Pt II and as from a day to be appointed to rules under Sch 1 para 6B (see PARA 892): Sch 1 para 6(1) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(5)(a)(iii)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 6(1). These powers in relation to sums of money are exercisable notwithstanding any lien on them or right to their possession: Sch 1 para 12. This is without prejudice to Sch 1 para 5 (see PARA 892).

9 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 6(3). If any person on whom such a notice has been served pays out sums of money at a time when such payment is prohibited by the notice, he is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: Sch 1 para 6(6) (amended by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46). As to offences by bodies corporate see PARA 891 note 4. As to the standard scale see PARA 571 note 1.

10 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 6(4) (amended by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 1 para 13(1), (4)). The Solicitors Regulation Authority must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5). The CPR 67.4(5) refers to the Law Society but in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority.

11 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 6(5). See Sritharan v Law Society [2005] EWCA Civ 476, [2005] 4 All ER 1105, [2005] 1 WLR 2708.

16 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 8. As from a day to be appointed Sch 1 para 8 is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(8) to allow the court to require a person to give the relevant information where there is reason to suspect that that person has information which is relevant to identifying any money held by or on behalf of the solicitor or his firm. The person against whom the Authority is seeking an order must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5).

890-893 Circumstances in which the Solicitors Regulation Authority may intervene ... Other powers of intervention

Amendments made by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77 in force 31 March 2009: SI 2009/3250.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/893. Other powers of intervention.

893. Other powers of intervention.

If the solicitor or his personal representative is a trustee of a controlled trust¹, the Solicitors Regulation Authority² can apply to the High Court for an order for the appointment of a new trustee in substitution for him³.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect⁴. Where the powers of intervention are exercisable in relation to a solicitor⁵, the High Court, on the application of the Authority, may from time to time order that, for such time not exceeding 18 months as the court thinks fit, postal packets⁶ addressed to the solicitor or his firm⁷ at any place or places mentioned in the order are to be directed to the Authority or any person appointed by the Authority at any other address mentioned in the order, and the Authority or that person may take possession of any such packets received at that address⁸.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions apply⁹. The High Court, on the application of the Authority, may from time to time make an order (a 'communications redirection order') that specified communications¹⁰ to the solicitor or his firm are to be directed, in accordance with the order, to the Authority or any person appointed by the Authority¹¹. A communications redirection order has effect for such time not exceeding 18 months as is specified in the order¹². Where a communications redirection order has effect, the Authority or the person appointed by the Authority may take possession or receipt of the communications redirected in accordance with the order¹³. Where a communications redirection order is made, the Authority must pay to, in the case of an order relating to postal packets, the postal operator¹⁴ concerned and, in any other case, the person specified in the order, the like charges (if any) as would have been payable for the redirection of the communications to which the order relates if the addressee had permanently ceased to occupy or use the premises or other destination of the communications and had applied to the postal operator or the specified person (as the case may be) to redirect the communications to him as mentioned in the order¹⁵. The High Court may, on the application of the Authority, authorise the Authority, or a person appointed by it, to take such steps as may be specified in the order in relation to any website purporting to be or have been maintained by or on behalf of the solicitor or his firm if the High Court is satisfied that the taking of those steps is necessary to protect the public interest or the interests of clients (or potential or former clients) of the solicitor or his firm¹⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'controlled trust' see PARA 835 note 8. As from a day to be appointed the word 'trust' is substituted for the words 'controlled trust' by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(11). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 The Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 paras 10, 11 refer to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

3 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 11(1). The Trustee Act 1925 has effect in relation to the appointment of a new trustee under these provisions as it has effect in relation to an appointment under s 41 (see TRUSTS vol 48 (2007 Reissue) PARA 849 et seq): Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 11(2). The trustee whom the Authority is seeking to replace and, if he is a co-trustee, the other trustees of the trust, must be made defendants to the application: CPR 67.4(5).

4 The Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10 is substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 77(10) as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5 As to when the powers are exercisable see PARA 890. Powers in respect of mail are not exercisable on a complaint in respect of delay on the solicitor's part: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 35, Sch 1 para 10(3).

6 'Postal packet' means a letter, parcel, packet or other article transmissible by post: Postal Services Act 2000 s 125(1) (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10(1) (amended by SI 2001/1149)).

7 For these purposes, references to the solicitor or his firm include, in any case where the solicitor has died, his personal representatives: Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 4(2).

8 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10(1). Where such an order is made the Authority must pay any redirection charges: see Sch 1 para 10(2). The Authority may apply for an order as to the disposal or destruction of any such documents in its possession (see Sch 1 para 9(10)); and may take copies or extracts from them (see Sch 1 para 9(12)). If the application relates to postal packets addressed to an individual solicitor, the solicitor must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5). If the application relates to postal packets addressed to a firm, every partner in the firm must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5). If the application relates to postal packets addressed to a limited liability partnership or other corporation, then the partnership or other corporation must be made a defendant to the application: CPR 67.4(5).

9 See note 4.

10 'Specified communications' means communications of such description as are specified in the order: Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10(3)(a) (as prospectively substituted). The descriptions of communications which may be so specified include communications in the form of a postal packet, electronic communications, and communications by telephone: Sch 1 para 10(3)(b) (as so prospectively substituted).

11 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10(1), (2) (as prospectively substituted). Sch 1 para 10 does not apply where the powers conferred by Sch 1 Pt II are exercisable by virtue of Sch 1 para 3: Sch 1 para 10(9) (as so prospectively substituted).

12 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10(4) (as prospectively substituted).

13 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10(5) (as prospectively substituted).

14 As to the meaning of 'postal packet' see note 6 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10(8) (as prospectively substituted)). 'Postal operator' means a person who provides the service of conveying postal packets from one place to another by post or any of the incidental services of receiving, collecting, sorting and delivering such packets: Postal Services Act 2000 s 125(1) (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10(8) (as so prospectively substituted)).

16 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1 para 10(7) (as prospectively substituted).

Proceedings in the High Court under the intervention provisions¹ must be brought in the Chancery Division². The proceedings must also be brought by Part 8 claim form³. Where proceedings are brought under certain provisions⁴ the court will give directions and fix a date for the hearing immediately upon issuing the claim form⁵.

Subject to any order for the payment of costs that may be made on such an application to the court, any costs incurred by the Solicitor Regulation Authority⁶, including the costs of any person exercising powers on its behalf, must be paid by the solicitor or his personal representatives and are recoverable from him or them as a debt owing to the Authority⁷.

As from a day to be appointed, the High Court, on the application of the Authority, may order a former partner of the solicitor to pay a specified⁸ proportion of the costs mentioned above⁹.

TEXT AND NOTES 8, 9--Day appointed is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/895. Redress for inadequate professional services.

895. Redress for inadequate professional services.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions apply¹. Where it appears to the Legal Complaints Service (the 'LCS')² that the professional services provided by a solicitor in connection with any matter in which he or his firm have been instructed by a client³ have, in any respect, not been of the quality that could reasonably have been expected of him as a solicitor, the LCS may, if it thinks fit, take one or more of the following steps⁴. Those steps are:

- 1241 (1) determining that the costs⁵ to which the solicitor is entitled in respect of those services be limited to such amount as may be specified in the determination and directing him to comply, or to secure compliance, with such one or more permitted requirements⁶ as appear to the LCS to be necessary to give effect to its determination⁷;
- 1242 (2) directing the solicitor to secure the rectification, at his expense or that of his firm, of any such error, omission or other deficiency arising in connection with the matter as the LCS may specify⁸;
- 1243 (3) directing the solicitor to pay such compensation to the client as the LCS sees fit to specify⁹;
- 1244 (4) directing the solicitor to take, at his expense or that of his firm, such other action in the interests of the client as the LCS may specify¹⁰.

The LCS must not, however, take any of these steps unless it is satisfied that it would be appropriate to do so in all the circumstances of the case¹¹.

If a solicitor fails to comply with a direction so given by the LCS any person may make a complaint in respect of that failure to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal, but no other proceedings whatsoever may be brought in respect of such failure¹². Where the Tribunal is considering, or has considered, an application or complaint with respect to a solicitor and it is of the opinion that the LCS should consider whether to take any of the steps set out in heads (1) to (4) above with respect to that solicitor, it must inform the LCS¹³.

The LCS may, by regulations made with the concurrence of the Secretary of State and the Master of the Rolls, make provision for the payment of such fee as may be prescribed by any client with respect to whom the LCS is asked to consider whether to take any of the steps set out above¹⁴. The fee must be repaid to the client if the LCS takes any of the steps in the matter with respect to which the fee was paid¹⁵. The LCS may also direct a solicitor in respect of whom it has taken any of those steps to pay to the LCS the amount of the fee so repayable by the LCS to the client¹⁶, and an amount calculated as the cost to it of dealing with the complaint, or which in the LCS's opinion represents a reasonable contribution towards that cost¹⁷.

These provisions also apply, with certain exceptions, to inadequate professional services provided by a recognised body¹⁸.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 37A and Sch 1A (as added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 15) are repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 78, Sch 23 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 The Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1A refers to the 'Council' (ie the Council of the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1)). However in practice the body currently responsible for such matters is the Legal Complaints Service (see PARA 632 et seq). 'Charter' means the Royal Charter dated 26 February 1845, whereby the Society was incorporated, together with the Royal Charters supplemental to it dated respectively 26 November 1872, 4 June 1903, 2 June 1909 and 10 March 1954: Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1).

3 As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 835 note 6.

4 Solicitors Act 1974 s 37A, Sch 1A para 1(1) (as added: see note 1). There is, however, no statutory definition of 'inadequate professional services' for these purposes. In determining whether in any case it is appropriate to take any of the steps the LCS may have regard to:

253 (1) the existence of any remedy that could reasonably be expected to be available to the client in civil proceedings (Sch 1A para 1(3)(a) (as so added)); and 254 (2) whether it would be reasonable to expect the client to begin proceedings seeking any such remedy where the client has not done so (Sch 1A para 1(3)(b) (as so added)).

The power of the LCS to take any such steps is not confined to cases where the client may have a cause of action against the solicitor for negligence: Sch 1A para 2(3) (as so added).

The LCS's powers under Sch 1A (as so added) are exercisable in relation to a person even though his name has been removed from or struck off the roll, and references to a solicitor in Sch 1A (as so added) so far as they relate to the exercise of those powers are to be construed accordingly: Sch 1A para 9 (as so added).

5 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 835 note 6.

6 The permitted requirements are:

255 (1) that the whole or part of any amount already paid by or on behalf of the client in respect of the costs be refunded (Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1A para 2(2)(a) (as added: see note 1));

256 (2) that the whole or part of the costs be remitted (Sch 1A para 2(2)(b) (as so added));

257 (3) that the right to recover the costs be waived, whether wholly or to any specified extent (Sch 1A para 2(2)(c) (as so added)).

7 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1A para 2(1)(a) (as added: see note 1). Where the LCS has given a direction under Sch 1A para 2(1)(a) (as so added) then:

258 (1) for the purposes of any assessment of a bill covering those costs the amount charged by the bill in respect of those costs is deemed to be limited to the amount specified in the LCS's determination (Sch 1A para 4(1)(a) (as so added)); and

259 (2) where a bill covering those costs has not been assessed, then, for the purposes of the recovery of those costs (by whatever means and notwithstanding any statutory provision or agreement), the client is deemed to be liable to pay in respect of them only the amount specified in the LCS's determination (Sch 1A para 4(1)(b) (as so added)).

Where a bill covering those costs has been assessed, the LCS's direction under Sch 1A para 2(1)(a) (as so added) ceases to have effect so far as relating to those costs: Sch 1A para 4(2) (as so added). As to the assessment of costs see PARA 967 et seq.

8 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1A para 2(1)(b) (as added: see note 1).

9 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1A para 2(1)(c) (as added: see note 1). The amount of compensation specified must not exceed £15,000: Sch 1A para 3(1) (as so added; amended by SI 2005/2749). The Secretary of State, after consultation with the LCS, may by order made by statutory instrument substitute such other sum as he considers appropriate: Sch 1A para 3(2) (as so added; amended by SI 2003/1887).

10 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1A para 2(1)(d) (as added: see note 1).

11 Solicitors Act 1974 Sch 1A para 1(2) (as added: see note 1).

SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/896. Disciplinary powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority.

896. Disciplinary powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The following apply where the Solicitors Regulation Authority² is satisfied that a solicitor or an employee of a solicitor has failed to comply with a requirement imposed by or by virtue of the Solicitors Act 1974 or any rules made by the Authority³, or that there has been professional misconduct by a solicitor⁴. The Authority may give the person a written rebuke⁵, direct the person to pay a penalty not exceeding £2,000⁶, or both⁷. The Authority may publish details of any such action it has taken if it considers it to be in the public interest to do so⁸.

A person may appeal⁹ against:

- 1245 (1) a decision by the Authority to rebuke that person¹⁰ if a decision is also made to publish details of the rebuke¹¹;
- 1246 (2) a decision by the Authority to impose a penalty on that person¹² or the amount of that penalty¹³;
- 1247 (3) a decision by the Authority to publish details¹⁴ of any action taken against that person¹⁵.

On such an appeal, the Tribunal has power to make such order as it thinks fit, and such an order may in particular:

- 1248 (a) affirm the decision of the Authority¹⁶;
- 1249 (b) revoke the decision of the Authority¹⁷;
- 1250 (c) in the case of a penalty¹⁸, vary the amount of the penalty¹⁹;
- 1251 (d) in the case of a solicitor, contain certain provisions²⁰;
- 1252 (e) in the case of an employee of a solicitor, contain certain provisions²¹;
- 1253 (f) make such provision as the Tribunal thinks fit as to payment of costs²².

An appeal from the Tribunal lies to the High Court, at the instance of the Authority or the person in respect of whom the order of the Tribunal was made²³ and the High Court has power to make such order on an appeal as it may think fit²⁴. Any decision of the High Court on an appeal under the above provisions is final²⁵.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 ss 44D, 44E are added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 46 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 The Solicitors Act 1974 refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

5 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44D(2)(a).

6 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44D(2)(b). A penalty imposed under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44D(2) does not become payable until the end of the period during which an appeal against the decision to impose the penalty, or the amount of the penalty, may be made under s 44E or if such an appeal is made, such time as it is determined or withdrawn: s 44D(5). A penalty payable under s 44D may be recovered as a debt due to the Authority, and is to be forfeited to Her Majesty: s 44D(9). The amount of penalty may be amended by the Lord Chancellor by order after consultation: see s 44D(10)-(11).

7 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44D(2). Where the Authority takes action against a person directing them to pay a penalty under s 44D(2) or decides to publish details of any action taken it must notify the person in writing that it has done so: s 44D(4). The Authority must make rules:

262 (1) prescribing the circumstances in which the Authority may decide to take action under s 44D(2) (s 44D(7)(a));

263 (2) about the practice and procedure to be followed by the Authority in relation to such action (s 44D(7)(b));

264 (3) governing the publication under s 44D(3) of details of action taken under s 44D(2) (s 44D(7)(c)); and the Authority may make such other rules in connection with the exercise of its powers under s 44D as it considers appropriate: s 44D(7). Before making such rules, the Authority must consult the Tribunal: s 44D(8).

Section 44D is without prejudice to any power conferred on the Authority or any other person to make an application or complaint to the Tribunal: s 44D(13).

8 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44D(3). The Authority may not publish under s 44D(3) details of any action under s 44D(2):

265 (1) during the period within which an appeal against the decision to take the action, the amount of the penalty, or the decision to publish the details, may be made under s 44E (s 44D(6)(a)); or

266 (2) if such an appeal has been made, until such time as it is determined or withdrawn (s 44D(6)(b)).

9 The provisions of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 46(9)(b), (10)(a), (b), (11), (12) (Tribunal rules about procedure for hearings etc) apply in relation to appeals under s 44E as they apply in relation to applications or complaints, except that s 46(11) is to be read as if for 'the applicant' to 'application' there were substituted 'any party to the appeal': s 44E(2). Rules under s 46(9)(b) may, in particular, make provision about the period during which an appeal under this section may be made: s 44E(3).

897. Disciplinary jurisdiction overseas.

In territories overseas the position at common law is that the power of suspending from or disqualifying for practice is the corollary of the power of admitting to practice; accordingly it is exercisable, subject to local legislation, by the judges just as is the power of admission¹. In exercising this jurisdiction a judge exercises a disciplinary power² and does not sit as a court, although he is bound to act judicially and his decision is subject to appeal to Her Majesty in Council³. Where deceit or moral turpitude is alleged a high standard of proof is required⁴.

Practice carried on by an English solicitor as such from an office outside England and Wales is regulated by certain provisions of the Solicitors' Code of Practice 2007⁵.

NOTE 5--Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 15 amended on 31 March 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/898. Refusal of practising certificate or issue subject to conditions.

898. Refusal of practising certificate or issue subject to conditions.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. In certain cases the Solicitors Regulation Authority² may in its discretion grant or refuse an application for a practising certificate, or issue a certificate subject to such terms and conditions as it may think fit³. The discretion arises where a solicitor applies for a practising certificate:

- 1254 (1) for the first time⁴; or
 - 1255 (2) not having held a practising certificate free of conditions since the date of his admission⁵; or
 - 1256 (3) when, on what would be the commencement date for the certificate, if it were granted, a period of 12 months or more will have elapsed since he held a practising certificate in force⁶; or
 - 1257 (4) after the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal has ordered a penalty or costs to be paid by him or that he be reprimanded⁷; or
 - 1258 (5) after he has been invited by the Solicitors Regulation Authority to give an explanation in respect of any matter relating to his conduct and has failed to give an explanation in respect of that matter which the Authority regards as sufficient and satisfactory and has been so notified in writing⁸; or
 - 1259 (6) when he has been required⁹ to deliver an accountant's report to the Authority and has not delivered it within the statutory¹⁰ period¹¹; or
 - 1260 (7) when, having been suspended from practice, the period of his suspension has expired¹²; or
 - 1261 (8) when having had his name removed from or struck off the roll it has been restored to the roll¹³; or
 - 1262 (9) while he is an undischarged bankrupt¹⁴; or
 - 1263 (10) after having been adjudged bankrupt and discharged or after having entered into a composition with his creditors or a deed of arrangement for their benefit¹⁵; or
 - 1264 (11) while he lacks capacity¹⁶ to act as a solicitor and certain powers¹⁷ are exercisable in relation to him¹⁸; or
 - 1265 (12) after having been committed to prison in civil or criminal proceedings¹⁹; or
 - 1266 (13) after having had given against him any judgment which involves the payment of money and not a judgment:
- 524
- 44. (a) limited to the payment of costs; or
 - 45. (b) as to the whole effect of which upon him he is entitled to indemnity or relief from some other person; or
 - 46. (c) evidence of the satisfaction of which has been produced to the Authority²⁰.
- 525

In any cases where any of these circumstances exist the solicitor must, unless the Authority or the Master of the Rolls otherwise orders, give to the Authority at least six weeks' notice of intention to apply for a practising certificate²¹. If in any such case the Authority decides to issue a certificate subject to conditions, it may if it thinks fit postpone the issue of the certificate pending the hearing and determination of any appeal against its decision²².

The Authority may not refuse an application by a solicitor for a practising certificate in a case where a discretion is exercisable by reason only that he is applying for the first time or that he has not held a practising certificate free from conditions since the date of his admission²³. In such cases as are mentioned in heads (9), (12) and (13) above where an appeal has been made to the appropriate court against the order or judgment in question, the Authority must not refuse an application before the determination of that appeal unless in the Authority's opinion the proceedings on that appeal have been unduly protracted by the appellant or are unlikely to be successful²⁴.

Where a discretion becomes exercisable by reason of any of the circumstances mentioned in heads (4) to (8), (10), (12) or (13) above, then, as soon as a certificate has been issued to the applicant free of conditions, the facts which gave rise to the discretion cease to operate so as to require him to give extended notice of application or so as to vest any discretion in the Authority²⁵.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 ss 12, 12A are repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 13, Sch 23 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 12(4)(a), (b). As to the imposition of conditions on existing practising certificates see PARA 899. 898-905 Refusal of practising certificate or issue subject to conditions ... Power to make rules providing for appeals to go to the Tribunal

Day appointed in relation to these provisions is 1 July 2009: SI 2009/1365.

898-899 Refusal of practising certificate or issue subject to conditions, Conditions imposed on current practising certificates

Certain functions under provisions mentioned in these paragraphs are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/899. Conditions imposed on current practising certificates.

899. Conditions imposed on current practising certificates.

The Solicitors Regulation Authority¹ may direct that any solicitor's practising certificate for the time being in force (the 'current certificate') has effect subject to such conditions as it thinks fit². However a solicitor in whose case a direction is given imposing such conditions may appeal³.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect⁴. The power to give such a direction in the case of any solicitor is exercisable by the Authority at any time during the period for which the current certificate is in force if:

- 1267 (1) in the event of an application for a practising certificate being made by him at that time, the provisions⁵ relating to the issue of a practising certificate subject to conditions would have effect in relation to him by reason of certain circumstances⁶; or
- 1268 (2) he has entered into a composition with his creditors or a deed of arrangement for the benefit of his creditors; or
- 1269 (3) he has been charged with, or convicted of, an offence involving dishonesty or deception or an indictable offence⁷.

The conditions specified in a direction under these provisions have effect as from the time when the solicitor concerned is notified of the Authority's decision to give the direction⁸; but the Authority may, if it thinks fit, provide in such a direction that the conditions specified in it are not to have effect pending the hearing and determination of any appeal⁹ against the decision to give the direction¹⁰.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹¹. The power to give such a direction¹² is exercisable in relation to a solicitor at any time during the period for which the solicitor's current certificate is in force if the Authority grants a sole solicitor endorsement¹³ or it appears to the Authority that the case is of a prescribed¹⁴ description¹⁵. A solicitor who holds a practising certificate subject to a condition so imposed which prohibits that solicitor from taking any steps specified in the condition, except with the approval of the Authority, may appeal to the High Court against any decision by the Authority to refuse to approve the taking of any step for the purposes of that condition¹⁶. On an appeal under these provisions the High Court may:

- 1270 (a) affirm the decision of the Authority;
- 1271 (b) direct the Authority to approve the taking of one or more steps for the purposes of the condition;
- 1272 (c) make such other order as the High Court thinks fit¹⁷.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 13A (as added by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 5) refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body responsible for issuing practising certificates is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

2 Solicitors Act 1974 s 13A(1) (as added: see note 1). Until a day to be appointed the Solicitors Act 1974 s 12(4A) (see PARA 898) applies for the purposes of s 13A(1) as it applies for the purposes of s 12(4)(b): s 13A(8) (as so added; prospectively substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 16(6)). As from a day to be appointed the provisions of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 10(4), (5) apply for the purposes of s 13A(1) as they apply for the purposes of s 10: s 13A(8) (as so prospectively substituted).

3 Such an appeal is made to the Master of the Rolls within one month of being notified: Solicitors Act 1974 s 13A(6) (as added: see note 1). On an appeal under s 13A(6) the decision may be affirmed, or the appellant's current certificate may have effect subject to conditions, the direction may be revoked or such other order may be made: see s 13A(7) (as so added). However as from a day to be appointed such an appeal is instead to be made to the High Court and s 13A(6), (7) are accordingly amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 16(3). Furthermore the Authority may make rules providing that appeals under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 13A(6) lie to the Tribunal and not to the High Court: see s 49A(1), (2)(b) (not yet in force); and PARA 905. The decision of the High Court on an appeal under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 13A(6) is final: s 13A(7A) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 16(5)) At the date at which this volume states the law no such days had been appointed. As to appeals to the Master of the Rolls see the Master of the Rolls (Appeals and Applications Regulations) 2001; and PARA 918.

4 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 13A(2), (3) is substituted and s 13A(4), (5) repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 16(2). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 13A(8)-(12) is added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 16(5)-(7).

898-905 Refusal of practising certificate or issue subject to conditions ... Power to make rules providing for appeals to go to the Tribunal

Day appointed in relation to these provisions is 1 July 2009: SI 2009/1365.

898-899 Refusal of practising certificate or issue subject to conditions,
Conditions imposed on current practising certificates

Certain functions under provisions mentioned in these paragraphs are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/900. Appeal against refusal of practising certificate.

900. Appeal against refusal of practising certificate.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Where an application for a practising certificate² is duly made to the Solicitors Regulations Authority³ otherwise than in a case where the Authority has a discretion in respect of its issue⁴ and the Authority refuses or neglects to issue a certificate, the applicant may apply to the High Court or to any judge of that court, or to the Master of the Rolls, who may make such an order as may be just, including an order for the payment of costs by or to the Authority or the applicant⁵.

In a case where the Authority has a discretion in respect of the issue of a practising certificate and the Authority either refuses to grant a certificate or decides to issue a certificate subject to a condition, the applicant may appeal to the Master of the Rolls within one month of being notified of the decision⁶. On such an appeal, the Master of the Rolls may:

- 1273 (1) affirm the decision of the Authority; or
- 1274 (2) direct the Authority to issue a certificate to the applicant free from conditions or subject to such conditions, other than training conditions⁷ or indemnity conditions⁸, as he thinks fit; or
- 1275 (3) direct the Authority not to issue a certificate; or
- 1276 (4) if a certificate has been issued, by order suspend it; or
- 1277 (5) make such other order as he thinks fit⁹.

Where the Authority issues a practising certificate subject to a training condition or indemnity condition¹⁰ the applicant may appeal within one month of being notified of the decision to the Master of the Rolls¹¹, who may:

- 1278 (a) affirm the decision of the Authority; or
- 1279 (b) direct the Authority to issue a certificate to the applicant free from conditions; or
- 1280 (c) if regulations¹² specify a number of training conditions or indemnity conditions, direct the Authority to issue a certificate to the applicant subject to a different training condition or indemnity condition from that subject to which it was originally issued¹³.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹⁴. A person who makes an application for a practising certificate¹⁵ may appeal to the High Court against a decision to refuse the application for a practising certificate, if the application included an application for a sole solicitor endorsement, a decision to refuse the application for the endorsement, or a decision to impose a condition on a practising certificate issued in consequence of the application¹⁶. On such an appeal the High Court may:

- 1281 (i) affirm the decision of the Authority;
- 1282 (ii) direct the Authority to make a sole solicitor endorsement on the applicant's practising certificate and to issue that certificate subject to such conditions (if any) as the High Court may think fit;

- 1283 (iii) direct the Authority to issue a certificate to the applicant free from conditions or subject to such conditions as the High Court may think fit;
- 1284 (iv) direct the Authority not to issue a certificate;
- 1285 (v) if a certificate has been issued, by order suspend it;
- 1286 (vi) if the certificate has been endorsed with a sole solicitor endorsement, by order suspend the endorsement; or
- 1287 (vii) make such other order as the High Court thinks fit¹⁷.

A person who holds a practising certificate subject to a condition prohibiting him from taking specified steps without the approval of the Authority¹⁸ may appeal to the High Court against any decision by the Authority to refuse to approve the taking of any step for the purposes of that condition¹⁹. On such an appeal the High Court may:

- 1288 (A) affirm the decision of the Authority;
- 1289 (B) direct the Authority to approve the taking of one or more steps for the purposes of a condition²⁰; or
- 1290 (C) make such other order as the High Court thinks fit²¹.

The High Court may make such order as it thinks fit as to payment of costs and the decision of the High Court on an appeal under the above provisions is final²².

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary and Regulatory Powers of the Solicitors Regulation Authority/901. Suspension of practising certificate; in general.

901. Suspension of practising certificate; in general.

An order of the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal or the High Court suspending a solicitor from practice suspends the solicitor's practising certificate from the relevant date of or referred to in the order, and an adjudication in bankruptcy suspends the practising certificate immediately¹.

Where the Solicitors Regulation Authority² has exercised:

- 1291 (1) its power to vest specified sums of money in itself³; or
- 1292 (2) the power to take possession of solicitor's documents⁴, in a case where Authority suspects dishonesty on the part of a solicitor⁵, or is satisfied that a solicitor has failed to comply with the accounts rules (or as from a day to be appointed the rules as to professional practice, conduct and discipline)⁶, or where the solicitor has been committed to prison in any civil or criminal proceedings⁷, the practising certificate of that solicitor is immediately suspended⁸. The suspension does not, however, apply to the solicitor if the Authority so directs⁹. Alternatively, if the Authority gives a direction to that effect, the solicitor may continue to act in relation to any matter specified in the direction as if his practising certificate had not been so suspended, but subject to any conditions which the Authority may see fit to impose¹⁰.

The suspension of a practising certificate continues until the certificate expires, and where on the replacement date for a certificate, it is suspended, it will expire on that date¹¹. The suspension of a practising certificate by reason of a bankruptcy order terminates if the order is annulled and an office copy of the annulment order has been served upon the Authority¹². The Authority may inspect the file of proceedings in bankruptcy¹³.

Where a solicitor's practising certificate is suspended by order¹⁴ or because of the solicitor's bankruptcy¹⁵, the Authority must publish notice of the suspension and enter a note of it against the solicitor's name in the roll¹⁶.

During suspension the certificate is deemed not to be in force¹⁷, and the solicitor is accordingly deemed to be an unqualified person¹⁸.

902. Suspension of sole solicitor endorsement; in general.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions apply¹. The making by the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal or by the court of an order suspending a solicitor from practice as a sole solicitor must operate to suspend any sole solicitor endorsement² of that solicitor for the time being in force³.

Where a sole solicitor endorsement is suspended, it expires on such date as may be prescribed by regulations⁴. Under certain circumstances⁵ where a solicitor's sole solicitor endorsement is suspended the solicitor may at any time before the endorsement expires apply to the Solicitors Regulation Authority⁶ to terminate the suspension⁷. Where a solicitor's sole solicitor endorsement is so suspended⁸ the Authority must forthwith cause notice of that suspension to be published and a note of it to be entered against the name of the solicitor on the roll⁹.

Where any suspension is terminated by virtue of s 16(4) or (5), as applied by s 17B(3) the Authority must forthwith cause a note of that termination to be entered against the name of the solicitor on the roll and, if so requested in writing by the solicitor, a notice of it to be published: s 17B(5).

Suspension of practising certificate where solicitor convicted of fraud or serious crime.

903. Suspension of practising certificate where solicitor convicted of fraud or serious crime.

Where a solicitor has been convicted of an offence involving dishonesty or deception or an indictable offence, and the Solicitors Regulation Authority¹ has made an application to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal² with respect to him, the Authority may direct that the solicitor's practising certificate be suspended for a specified period not exceeding six months³. The suspension will cease to have effect if, before the specified period expires, the Tribunal determines the Authority's application, the conviction is quashed or set aside, or the Authority withdraws its application to the Tribunal⁴. Where the specified period comes to an end without any of the preceding events having occurred, the Authority may direct that the suspension be continued for another specified period not exceeding six months⁵.

A solicitor may appeal to the Master of the Rolls against a direction under these provisions within one month of being notified of it⁶. On such an appeal, the Master of the Rolls may affirm the suspension, direct that the appellant's certificate is not to be suspended but have effect subject to conditions, revoke the direction, or make such other order as he thinks fit⁷.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 13B (as added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 94(3)) refers to the 'Law Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). As from a day to be appointed s 13B(1), (6) are amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 17(a), (b) so that the Authority may also direct that a sole solicitor endorsement be suspended, and nothing in the Solicitors Act 1974 is to be taken as in any way affecting the Tribunal's power to suspend a solicitor from practice or from practice as a sole solicitor. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

- 1293 (1) an order²; or
- 1294 (2) the solicitor's bankruptcy³; or
- 1295 (3) his suspension from practice by an order of the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal or the High Court⁴ and the period of that suspension expires before the replacement date of the certificate⁵; or

On such an application, the Authority may in its discretion by order terminate the suspension unconditionally or subject to such conditions as it thinks fit⁹ or it may refuse the application¹⁰. If it refuses the application or terminates the suspension subject to conditions, the solicitor may appeal against the Authority's decision to the Master of the Rolls¹¹, who may either affirm the decision¹² or terminate the suspension unconditionally or subject to such conditions as he thinks fit¹³.

When suspension has been terminated by annulment of a bankruptcy order and service upon the Authority of an office copy of the annulment order¹⁴, or terminated by the Authority on the solicitor's application¹⁵, or by the Master of the Rolls on appeal¹⁶, the Authority must forthwith enter a note of the termination against the solicitor's name in the roll¹⁷ and, if the solicitor so requests in writing, publish a notice of it¹⁸.

Power to make rules providing for appeals to go to the Tribunal

Day appointed in relation to these provisions is 1 July 2009: SI 2009/1365.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. (iv) Disciplinary Proceedings before the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal

906. The Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal.

The Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal¹ hears applications and complaints made by virtue of any provision of the Solicitors Act 1974 except so far as other provision is made by that Act or by regulations made under it². The Tribunal may do anything calculated to facilitate, or incidental or conducive to, the carrying out of any of its functions³. The Tribunal may make rules about the procedure and practice to be followed in relation to the making, hearing and determination of applications and complaints⁴. The Tribunal has jurisdiction to hear and determine any legal aid complaint relating to the conduct of a solicitor and made to the Tribunal by or on behalf of the Solicitors Regulation Authority⁵. It also has jurisdiction to hear certain applications and complaints⁶ relating to recognised bodies⁷.

For the purposes of any application or complaint made to the Tribunal under the Solicitors Act 1974, the Tribunal may administer oaths, and the applicant or complainant and any person with respect to whom the application or complaint is made⁸ may issue writs of subpoena ad testificandum and duces tecum⁹.

1 As to the constitution of the Tribunal see PARA 629 et seq.

2 Solicitors Act 1974 s 46(1). As to jurisdiction, the Tribunal has found: (1) that a solicitor may be struck off the roll for misconduct outside the jurisdiction of the courts of England and Wales (in this case, Hong Kong) because his conduct must be above suspicion and there was no indication that his behaviour here would be any different from that abroad (Re Oliver, Decision 4368 (1989) 86 LS Gaz (26 July) 62); and (2) it is not appropriate for the Tribunal to hear test cases to determine the construction of rules of conduct where these involve the anxiety attendant upon disciplinary proceedings being suffered by a solicitor (Re A Solicitor, Decision 4373 (1989) 86 LS Gaz (26 July) 64). As to the jurisdiction of the Tribunal generally see PARA 907. The Tribunal must meet not less than once in each calendar year and must publish an annual report: see the Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, r 3(4).

3 Solicitors Act 1974 s 46(5A) (added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 47(3)).

4 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 46(9)(b); and PARA 629.

5 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 43(1). In the Solicitors Act 1974 s 46(7)-(11) any reference to a complaint or to a complaint made to the Tribunal under the Solicitors Act 1974 is to be construed as including a reference to a legal aid complaint or to a legal aid complaint made to the Tribunal under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 43 (see PARA 909): s 43(2).

6 Ie including any such application as is mentioned in the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 11(1) (see PARA 926) or Sch 2 para 21(1) (see PARA 699) or any such complaint as is mentioned in Sch 2 para 13(3) (see PARA 895) or Sch 2 para 16(1) (see PARA 712): Sch 2 para 17(1)(a). As from a day to be appointed Sch 2 para 17(1)(a) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 105, Sch 23 to apply to applications as is mentioned in the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 21(1) or any such complaint as is mentioned in Sch 2 para 16(1), (1A). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

7 Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 17(1)(c). In the Solicitors Act 1974 s 46(7)-(11), any reference to an application or complaint made under that Act is to be construed as including a reference to any such application or complaint as made under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2: Sch 2 para 17(1)(b). As from a day to be appointed the Tribunal also has jurisdiction to hear certain applications and complaints relating to the manager or employee of a recognised body: see Sch 2 para 17(1)(c) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 105). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 Or in the case of an application under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(1)(b) (see PARA 907), any of the parties to the application.

- 1304 (2) to require a solicitor to answer allegations contained in an affidavit²;

- 1309 (7) as from a day to be appointed, by a solicitor who has been suspended from practice as a sole solicitor for an unspecified period, by order of the Tribunal, for the termination of that suspension⁸, must be made to the Tribunal⁹.

In addition to hearing and determining such applications, the Tribunal also hears and determines applications made by or on behalf of the Solicitors Regulation Authority¹⁰ in respect of solicitors' employees and consultants¹¹. In respect of orders made on such applications there is a right of appeal to the High Court¹².

1 Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(1)(a) (s 47(1), (2) substituted by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 92(1), (2)). An adverse application against a solicitor may be distinguished from a permissive application; the former is an application to strike a solicitor's name off the roll, and the latter is an application by a solicitor that his name be removed from the roll, and is made to the Solicitors Regulation Authority: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 8(1); and PARA 663. See note 10.

2 Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 1). 9 Solicitors Act 1974 s 46(1) (as substituted: see note 1). As to the orders which may be made see s 47(2); and PARA 909. However nothing in s 47(1) affects any jurisdiction over solicitors exercisable by the Master of the Rolls or by any judge of the High Court by virtue of s 50 (see PARA 745): s 47(1) (as so substituted).

10 The Solicitors Act 1974 refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors and the making of such rules is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iv) Disciplinary Proceedings before the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal/908. Applications to the Tribunal.

908. Applications to the Tribunal.

An application¹ to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal² in respect of any allegation or complaint made in respect of a solicitor³, a recognised body⁴, a registered European lawyer⁵ or a registered foreign lawyer⁶ must be in the form as set out in the Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007⁷.

In the case of an application by a person other than the Solicitors Regulation Authority, the Tribunal may, before or after certification of a case to answer, adjourn the matter for a period not exceeding three months to enable the Authority to carry out its own investigations and, if it thinks fit, initiate its own application or by agreement with the applicant, undertake the application⁸.

The applicant may file supplementary statements with the clerk containing additional facts or matters on which the applicant seeks to rely or further allegations and facts or matters in support of the application⁹. Without prejudice to any further application which may be made, no supplementary statement must, unless by order of the Tribunal, be filed later than 12 months after the date of the application or less than 30 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the application¹⁰.

1 'Application' means an application made under the Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588: r 2(1).

2 As to the applications which may be made see PARAS 907, 923. An application to require a solicitor to answer allegations contained in an affidavit may be treated as an application to strike the name of the solicitor off the roll on the grounds of the matters alleged: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 55; and PARA 907.

3 References in the Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, to solicitors include where appropriate former solicitors: r 2(2).

5 The Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, refer to the 'Law Society'. However in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority. As to the meaning of 'registered European lawyer' see PARA 542 note 2.

6 As to the meaning of 'registered foreign lawyer' see PARA 628 note 2.

7 Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, r 5(1). The application must be supported by a statement setting out the allegations and the facts and the matters supporting the application and each allegation contained in it: r 5(2). The application, the statement and any documents exhibited with them must be delivered to the clerk together with five additional copies and a further copy for any second or further respondent: r 5(3). 'Statement' means a written statement (including a witness statement) containing a statement of truth: r 2(1).

9 Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, r 7(1). Any supplementary statement containing further allegations against the respondent must be treated as though it were an application for the purposes of rr 5(3), 6(1)-(3), (5) (see PARA 911): r 7(1).

909. Powers of the Tribunal.

Subject to certain exceptions¹, on the hearing of any application² or complaint made to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal³ the Tribunal may order:

- 1310 (1) the striking off the roll of the name of the solicitor to whom the application or complaint⁴ relates⁵;
- 1311 (2) the suspension of that solicitor from practice, either indefinitely or for a specified period⁶;
- 1312 (3) the payment by that solicitor of a penalty not exceeding £5,000⁷, which is forfeit to Her Majesty⁸;
- 1313 (4) in the specified circumstances⁹, the exclusion of that solicitor from providing representation funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service, either permanently or for a specified period¹⁰;
- 1314 (5) the termination of that solicitor's unspecified period of suspension from practice¹¹;
- 1315 (6) the restoration to the roll of the name of a former solicitor whose name has been struck off the roll and to whom the application relates¹²;
- 1316 (7) in the case of a former solicitor whose name has been removed from the roll, a direction prohibiting the restoration of his name to the roll except by order of the Tribunal¹³;
- 1317 (8) in the case of an application by a former solicitor in respect of whom a direction such as is mentioned in head (7) above has been given, the restoration of the applicant's name to the roll¹⁴;
- 1318 (9) the payment by any party of costs or a contribution towards costs of such amount as the Tribunal considers reasonable¹⁵.

As from a day to be appointed the Tribunal may also make the following orders:

- 1319 (a) the revocation of that solicitor's sole solicitor endorsement¹⁶ (if any)¹⁷;
- 1320 (b) the suspension of that solicitor from practice as a sole solicitor indefinitely or for a specified period¹⁸;
- 1321 (c) the termination of that solicitor's unspecified period of suspension from practice as a sole solicitor¹⁹.

On the hearing of a legal aid complaint against a solicitor the Tribunal may, if it thinks fit and whether or not it makes any other order on the hearing, order that any costs otherwise payable by the Legal Services Commission in connection with services provided by the solicitor as part of the Community Legal Service or Criminal Defence Service must be reduced or cancelled²⁰.

On proof of the commission of an offence with respect to which express provision is made by provision of the Solicitors Act 1974, the Tribunal must, without prejudice to its power of making an order as to costs, impose the punishment specified in that provision²¹.

16 para 49(b)). The Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal, in assessing the penalty for delay in handling professional business where the respondent to the proceedings has previously been formally rebuked in respect of the delay by the conduct committee, is entitled to have regard to the total period of delay and is not restricted to consideration of the period after the respondent was rebuked: Re Alun Thomas Richards, Decision 5220 (1993) 90 LS Gaz (20 October) 41, Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal. As to the Tribunal see PARA 906.

2 le any application other than an application under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43 (see PARA 926 et seq).

3 Unless there are exceptional circumstances, the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal should impose conditions itself, and not leave it to the Solicitors Regulation Authority: R (on the application of Camacho) v Law Society [2004] EWHC 1675 (Admin), [2004] 4 All ER 126, sub nom Camacho v Law Society [2004] All ER (D) 170 (Jul), DC.

4 Any reference in the Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(2) to a complaint or to a complaint made to the Tribunal under the Solicitors Act 1974 is to be construed as including a reference to a legal aid complaint or a legal aid complaint made to the Tribunal under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 43: s 43(2).

5 Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(2)(a) (substituted by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 92(1), (2)). As to the roll see PARA 621. Where a solicitor has been convicted of an offence involving fraud, or where there has been misappropriation of clients' money, the striking of the solicitor's name off the roll will almost certainly be ordered. However, suspension and striking off are inappropriate penalties where the solicitor has not acted dishonestly: Re A Solicitor (1976) 120 Sol Jo 353, DC. A solicitor should not be struck off for practising without a practising certificate as there would then be no suitable penalty left for more serious offences: Re A Solicitor (1976) 120 Sol Jo 117, DC. In considering the penalty regard must be had to the extent to which the existence of the standard of conduct laid down by the Tribunal was known and accepted at the time of default: see Re A Solicitor [1975] QB 475, [1974] 3 All ER 853, DC (need for independent advice). As to the consideration by the Tribunal of background information advanced in mitigation see Yerolemou v Law Society [2008] EWHC 682 (Admin), [2008] All ER (D) 136 (Mar).

6 Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 5).

7 Until a day to be appointed the penalty must not exceed £5,000 but if it appears to the Secretary of State that there has been a change in the value of money since the relevant date, he may by order made by statutory instrument (subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament) substitute for this sum such other sum as appears to him to be justified by the change: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(2)(c), (4) (s 47(2) as so substituted; s 47(4), (5) added by the Administration of Justice Act 1982 s 56; and s 47(2)(c) prospectively amended and s 47(4), (5) prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 49(d), Sch 23). 'Relevant date' means (1) in relation to the first such order, 1 January 1983; and (2) in relation to each subsequent order, the last occasion when the sum so specified was altered: Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(5) (as so added and prospectively repealed). In exercise of the power so conferred, the Lord Chancellor made the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal (Increase in Penalty) Order 1990, SI 1990/1011, superseded by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 92(2). At the date at which this volume states the law, no further order increasing the amount of the penalty has been made.

274 (2) a person seeking restoration to the register of European lawyers or the register of foreign lawyers if his name has been removed from either register;

275 (3) by a solicitor, registered foreign lawyer or registered European lawyer seeking the termination of an indefinite period of suspension from practice imposed by the Tribunal, must be made in the form as set out in the Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, Schedule, Form 4: see r 9(1)(a), (2).

The Solicitors Regulation Authority must be a respondent to every application to which r 9 applies: r 9(3). The applicant must serve on the Authority a copy of the application and a statement in support of the application: r 9(4). As to the service of documents under r 9 see r 10; and PARA 911 note 8. The Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, refer to the Law Society. 21 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(3). This power is expressed to be without prejudice to the Tribunal's power to award costs: s 47(3). An order of the Tribunal is to be regarded as a punishment: see Re A Solicitor [1956] 3 All ER 516, [1956] 1 WLR 1312, DC. Where on the hearing of any application or complaint the Tribunal is satisfied that more than one allegation is proved against the person to whom the application or complaint relates, it may impose a separate penalty, by virtue of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 47(2)(c) (see head (3) in the text), with respect to each allegation: s 47(3A) (added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 92(4)). As to the influence of a local society in suggesting an appropriate penalty see Re Joe Gary Newman, Decision 5287 (1994) 91 LS Gaz (8 June) 28, Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal. As from a day to be appointed, for the avoidance of doubt, nothing in the Solicitors Act 1974 s 47 permits the Tribunal to make an order requiring redress to be made in respect of any act or omission of any person: s 47(3B) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 49(g)).

910. Exclusion of solicitor from providing services funded by the Legal Services Commission.

An order of the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal¹ may make provision for the exclusion of a solicitor from providing representation² where the Tribunal determines that there is good reason for doing so arising out of³:

- 1322 (1) his conduct, including conduct in the capacity of agent for another solicitor, in connection with the provision for any person of services funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Community Legal Service or Criminal Defence Service⁴; or
- 1323 (2) his professional conduct generally⁵.

Where the Tribunal makes any such order as is referred to above in the case of a solicitor who is a member of a firm of solicitors, the Tribunal may, if it thinks fit, order that any other person who is for the time being a member of the firm is to be excluded, either permanently or for a specified period, from providing representation funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Community Legal Service or the Criminal Defence Service⁶; but it may not do so unless an opportunity is given to the person to be so excluded to show cause why the order should not be made⁷. Similar provision is made in respect of an officer⁸ or employee of a recognised body⁹.

Any person excluded from providing representation funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Community Legal Service or the Criminal Defence Service by an order under these provisions may make an application to the Tribunal for an order terminating his exclusion from such work¹⁰.

911. Preliminary consideration of an application.

Certain applications¹ must be considered by a solicitor member of the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal² who must certify whether there is a case to answer³. If the solicitor member is minded not to certify that there is a case to answer or, in his opinion, the case is one of doubt or difficulty, the application must be considered by a panel of three members of the Tribunal, at least one of whom must be a solicitor member and one a lay member⁴.

If a solicitor member or a panel decides not to certify that a case to answer is established⁵, the application must be dismissed without formal order unless any party to the proceedings requires otherwise⁶.

If it is certified that there is a case to answer, a clerk must serve the application, the statement and any documents exhibited with them on each respondent⁷.

Any statement, notice or document other than one which is required to be served in accordance with r 10(1) may be served in accordance with r 10(1): r 10(2). In the case of a solicitor, any statement, notice or other document required to be served under the Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, may be served by leaving it at the address shown as his place of business in the register kept under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 9 or by any of the methods mentioned in CPR 6.2(a)-(d) (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 139): Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, r 10(3) Any application, statement, notice or other document served in accordance with r 10(1) is deemed served on the second working day following the day on which it is delivered, posted or transmitted: r 10(4). SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iv) Disciplinary Proceedings before the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal/912. Procedure before the hearing.

912. Procedure before the hearing.

A clerk may give any directions deemed necessary or appropriate for the hearing of any matter brought before the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal¹ and may appoint a time and place for the review of the progress of the matter and must notify the parties of the date, time and place of any such review².

A clerk may refer to the Tribunal any matter for a decision or directions and the Tribunal may itself or on the application of any party make an order on such terms as to the Tribunal appear just:

- 1324 (1) to give consent to the withdrawal of an application or allegation in respect of which a case to answer has been certified³;
- 1325 (2) to adjourn any hearing listed for directions or for a substantive hearing⁴;
- 1326 (3) to agree to the amendment of any application or allegation or the correction of any matter⁵;
- 1327 (4) to make any directions which appear necessary or appropriate to secure the timely hearing of the matter⁶.

No application or allegation in respect of which a case to answer has been certified may be withdrawn without the consent of the Tribunal⁷.

Unless the Tribunal has made directions in respect of the hearing, a clerk must appoint a date for the hearing by the Tribunal and give notice of the date to the parties⁸ and arrange for the hearing date to be published in the Daily Cause List of the High Court⁹.

Subject to the following every hearing must take place in public¹⁰. Any party to an application and any person who claims to be affected by it may seek an order from the Tribunal that the hearing or part of it be conducted in private on the grounds of exceptional hardship or exceptional prejudice, to a party, a witness or any person affected by the application¹¹. If it is satisfied that those grounds are met, the Tribunal must conduct the hearing or part of it in private and make such order as appears to it to be just and proper¹².

Without prejudice to r 11(1), directions may be made about documentation, inspection, statements, skeleton arguments and the place or time of any hearing: r 11(2). Any hearing under this rule must be held in public unless r 12(4) or 12(5) applies: r 11(5).

The Tribunal may, before or during a hearing, direct that the hearing or part of it be held in private if the Tribunal is satisfied that it would have granted an application under r 11(4) had one been made or in the Tribunal's view a hearing in public would prejudice the interests of justice: r 11(6).

913. Evidence.

The Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal may in its discretion, in respect of a whole case or of any particular fact or facts, proceed and act upon evidence¹ given by statement². Every statement upon which any party proposes to rely must be filed with the clerk and served on all other parties to the application in question no later than 21 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the application together with a notice³.

Any party on whom such a notice has been served and who requires the attendance, at the hearing, of the witness in question must, no later than nine days before the date of the hearing require, in writing, the other party to produce the witness at the hearing⁴.

If no party requires the attendance of a witness the Tribunal may accept the statement in question in evidence⁵. However if a witness who has been required to attend a hearing in accordance with these provisions fails to do so, the onus is on the party seeking to rely on the statement of that witness to show why the statement should be accepted in evidence⁶.

If any party intends to call as a witness any person who has not produced a statement, he must, no later than ten days before the date fixed for the hearing, notify the clerk and any other party to the proceedings of his intention and forthwith serve a copy of a written proof of evidence on the other party and lodge five copies of the proof with the clerk⁷.

In any proceedings before the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal which relate to the decision of another court or tribunal, the following apply if it is proved that the decision relates to the relevant party to the application⁸.

A conviction for a criminal offence may be proved by the production of a certified copy of the certificate of conviction relating to the offence and proof of a conviction must constitute evidence that the person in question was guilty of the offence⁹. The findings of fact upon which that conviction was based must be admissible as conclusive proof of those facts save in exceptional circumstances¹⁰.

The finding of and penalty imposed by any tribunal in or outside England and Wales exercising a professional disciplinary jurisdiction may be proved by producing a certified copy of the order, finding or note of penalty in question and the findings of fact upon which the finding in question was based must be admissible as proof but not conclusive proof of the facts in question¹¹.

The judgment of any civil court in any jurisdiction may be proved by producing a certified copy of the judgment and the findings of fact upon which that judgment was based must be admissible as proof but not conclusive proof of those facts¹².

¹ The Civil Evidence Acts 1968 and 1972 (see generally CIVIL PROCEDURE) apply in relation to proceedings before the Tribunal in the same manner as they apply in relation to civil proceedings: Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, r 13(1). Any notice given pursuant to those Acts must be given not less than 21 days before the date fixed for the hearing of an application; and any counter-notice must be given not less than ten days before the date fixed for the hearing: r 13(2), (3). No later than 28 days before the date fixed for the hearing of an application, the applicant may, by written notice, require any other party to the application to indicate to him, no later than the date on which the period of 14 days from the date of the giving of the notice expires, which of any facts set out in the statement submitted in support of the application are in dispute: r 13(4). Failure to reply to such a notice is material only in relation to the question of costs: r 13(5). Any party to an application may, by written notice, not later than nine days before the date fixed for the hearing, request any other party to agree that any document may be admitted as evidence. If any other party desires to challenge the authenticity of a document which is the subject of r 13(6), he must no later than the date on which the period of six days beginning with the date on which the notice was served, give notice that he does not agree to the admission of the document and that he requires that its authenticity be proved at the hearing: r 13(7). If the recipient of a notice given under r 13(6) does not give a notice in response within the period mentioned in r 13(7), he must be deemed to have admitted the document unless otherwise ordered by the Tribunal: r 13(8). A party to an application may, pursuant to the Solicitors Act 1974 s 46(11) (see PARA 906), require the attendance at the hearing of any person or the production of any document relevant to the proceedings and any summons for that purpose must be in Form 5 in the Schedule to the Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588: r 13(9). At the discretion of the Tribunal, the strict rules of evidence must not apply at a hearing before the Tribunal: r 13(10). As to the meaning of 'application' see PARA 908 note 1.

914. Hearings and findings.

The hearing of an application¹ must take place at such time and place as is considered by the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal to be appropriate and convenient². If the Tribunal is satisfied that notice of the hearing was served on the respondent in accordance with the Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007³ the Tribunal has power to hear and determine an application notwithstanding that the respondent fails to attend in person or is not represented at the hearing⁴.

At the conclusion of the hearing, the Tribunal must make a finding as to whether any or all of the allegations in the application have been substantiated whereupon a clerk must inform the Tribunal whether in any previous disciplinary proceedings before the Tribunal allegations were found to have been substantiated against the respondent⁵. The respondent is entitled to make submissions by way of mitigation in respect of any sanction (including any order for costs) which the Tribunal may impose⁶.

The Tribunal may make such order as to costs as the Tribunal thinks fit including an order disallowing costs incurred unnecessarily or that costs be paid by any party judged to be responsible for wasted or unnecessary costs, whether arising through non-compliance with time limits or otherwise: r 18(1). The Tribunal may order that any party bear the whole or a part or a proportion of the costs: r 18(2). The amount of costs to be paid may either be fixed by the Tribunal or be subject to detailed assessment by a costs judge: r 18(3). The Tribunal may also make an order as to costs where any application or allegation is withdrawn or amended and where no allegation of misconduct (including an application under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43 (see PARAS 926-928)) is proved against a respondent: Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, r 18(4). Where the Tribunal has made a finding based solely upon the certificate of conviction for a criminal offence which is subsequently quashed the Tribunal may, on application revoke its finding and make such order as to costs as appears to be just in the circumstances: r 21(5).

915. Orders of the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal.

The Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal may announce its decision and make an order at the conclusion of the hearing or may reserve its decision for announcement at a later date¹. In either case the announcement must be made in public and the Tribunal must as soon as is practicable deliver to the applicant and to the respondent its detailed written findings which must include its reasons and conclusions upon the evidence before it².

All orders of the Tribunal must be filed with the Solicitors Regulation Authority³, and an order which has been so filed is treated for the purpose of enforcement as if it had been made by the High Court⁴. Any such file kept by the Authority may be inspected during office hours without payment by any person⁵.

2 Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, r 16(4). An order made under r 16(5) must be signed by a member of the Tribunal upon the announcement of the decision and must, subject to r 17(2), be filed forthwith with the Solicitors Regulation Authority: r 17(1). The Tribunal may suspend the filing of the order if it appears to the Tribunal that there is good reason to do so, in which event the order does not take effect (including any suspension from practice) until it is filed with the Authority: r 17(2). The Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, refer to the 'Law Society'. However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors and the making of such rules is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

3 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 48(1). As to the Tribunal see PARA 906 et seq. A statement of the Tribunal's findings signed by the chairman or some other Tribunal member authorised by him must be prefaced to the order or added to the file containing the order as soon as may be after the order has been made: s 48(1). As to entry on the roll of solicitors of the effect of adverse Tribunal orders see s 48(2); and PARA 663. The Solicitors Act 1974 s 48(1) refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). 916. Re-hearing.

At any time before the filing of the Tribunal's Order¹ or before the expiry of the period of 14 days beginning with the date of the filing of the order, the respondent may apply to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal for a re-hearing of an application if he neither attended in person nor was represented at the hearing of the application in question and the Tribunal determined the application in his absence². If satisfied that it is just so to do, the Tribunal may grant the application upon such terms, including as to costs, as it thinks fit³. The re-hearing must be held before a Division of the Tribunal comprised of different members from those who heard the original application⁴.

The order appealed against includes the statement of findings in relation to the facts, which may be the subject of appeal: see Re A Solicitor [1956] 3 All ER 516, [1956] 1 WLR 1312, DC, where there was no appeal against the findings; Re A Solicitor [1960] 2 QB 212, [1960] 2 All ER 621, DC, where the court considered the findings.

2 Solicitors Act 1974 s 49(1)(b). However, until a day to be appointed, in the case of an order on an application under s 43(3) or s 47(1)(d), (e) or (f) or the refusal of any such application, an appeal lies to the Master of the Rolls: see s 49(1) (amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 92(6); and prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 51(2)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to circumstances in which the Divisional Court erred in quashing an order for suspension see Bolton v Law Society [1994] 2 All ER 486, [1994] 1 WLR 512, CA.

3 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 49(4). Subject to any rules of court, on an appeal against an order made by virtue of rules under s 46(10)(c) (see PARA 629) without hearing the applicant or complainant, the court is not obliged to hear the appellant and may remit the matter to the Tribunal instead of dismissing the appeal: s 49(5). As from a day to be appointed any decision of the High Court on an application under s 43(3) or s 47(1)(d), (e), (ea) or (f) or against an order under s 43(3A) is final: s 49(6) (prospectively substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 51(6)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. If the court considers a sanction excessive it may impose a lesser penalty: see Yerolemou v Law Society [2008] All ER (D) 136 (Mar).

4 An appeal may be made to the Master of the Rolls against a decision by the Tribunal to restore to the roll a solicitor who has been previously struck off: R v Master of the Rolls, ex p McKinnell [1993] 1 All ER 193, [1993] 1 WLR 88, DC. Notification of appeal to the Law Society and the Tribunal chairman does not make them parties to the appeal: Lucas v Millman [2002] EWHC 2470 (Admin), [2003] 1 WLR 271, [2002] All ER (D) 52 (Nov), DC.

5 Solicitors Act 1974 s 49(2). This is subject to s 49(3) and, as from a day to be appointed, the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 43(5) (see PARA 233): see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 49(2) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 51(3)). An appeal against an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(3A) (see PARA 928) must lie only at the instance of the person with respect to whom the order was made, and an appeal against an order under s 47 excluding any person or persons from legal aid work lies only at the instance of any person so excluded: s 49(3) (amended by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 7 para 6; and the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 7 para 9(2)). As from a day to be appointed the words 'providing representation funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service' in the Solicitors Act 1974 s 49(3) are substituted for the words 'legal aid work' by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 51(4). At the date at which this volume states the law no such days had been appointed.

917-918 Right of appeal, Appeals to the Master of the Rolls

Certain functions under provisions mentioned in these paragraphs are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

917 Right of appeal

NOTES 2, 3, 5--Day appointed is 1 July 2009: SI 2009/1365.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iv) Disciplinary Proceedings before the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal/918. Appeals to the Master of the Rolls.

918. Appeals to the Master of the Rolls.

Until a day to be appointed¹ in certain cases² an appeal from the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal lies to the Master of the Rolls³ who has the power to make such an order as he thinks fit⁴.

Applications and appeals to the Master of the Rolls in relation to matters before the Solicitors Regulation Authority⁵ or the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal are governed by the Master of the Roll (Applications and Appeals) Regulations 2001⁶.

Where the relevant statute, regulation or rule makes no provision as to the time limit for making an application or appeal, an application or appeal may be made within four weeks of:

- 1328 (1) the Authority writing to notify the applicant or appellant of the Authority's action or decision⁷;
- 1329 (2) expiry of the period within which the Authority is required to take action under the statute, rule or regulations⁸; or
- 1330 (3) the filing of the findings of the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal, as appropriate⁹.

However the Master of the Rolls may waive or abridge any time limit under the Master of the Roll (Applications and Appeals) Regulations 2001¹⁰.

The applicant or appellant must deliver to the clerk to the Master of the Rolls a petition signed by the applicant or appellant¹¹ setting out:

- 1331 (a) the rule, regulation or statutory provision under which the Master of the Rolls has jurisdiction¹²;
- 1332 (b) the relief sought¹³;
- 1333 (c) the circumstances of the application or appeal and any other relevant matters¹⁴;
- 1334 (d) the matters of fact relied on¹⁵;
- 1335 (e) any representations as to whether the hearing should be in public or in private¹⁶; and
- 1336 (f) a statement that all the facts stated in the petition are true¹⁷.

In the case of an appeal against a decision of the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal copies of all documents referred to at the hearing before the Tribunal must also be delivered to the clerk¹⁸.

Any respondent may make written submissions to the Master of the Rolls on the substance of the application or appeal, or on the jurisdiction of the Master of the Rolls to deal with the application or appeal, or on whether the hearing should be in public or in private, within six weeks of receiving the copy of the petition and other documents¹⁹.

The Master of the Rolls will appoint a time for hearing the application or appeal²⁰. However where the substantive issues raised by the application or appeal are the same as issues which the Master of the Rolls has already disposed of in an earlier application or appeal by the same applicant or appellant, the Master of the Rolls may refuse the application or appeal without a hearing, with or without an order as to costs²¹.

The hearing must be in public unless all parties to the application or appeal agree that all or part of the hearing must be in private and the Master of the Rolls considers that this will not be contrary to the interests of justice or the Master of the Rolls considers that there are exceptional circumstances which justify hearing all or part of the application or appeal in private²².

On the hearing of the application or appeal no formal rules of evidence apply²³. Where the relevant statute, regulation or rule makes no express provision as to the powers of the Master of the Rolls, the Master of the Rolls may make such order as he thinks fit²⁴.

1 As from a day to be appointed such appeals only lie to the High Court and accordingly the Solicitors Act 1974 s 49(1) is amended and s 49(6) is substituted and s 49(7) is repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 51. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 In the refusal of an application or an application under the Solicitors Act 1974 ss 43(3), 47(1)(d)-(f) (see PARAS 907, 928).

3 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 49(1)(a) (amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 92(6); and prospectively amended).

4 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 49(4). The Master of the Rolls may make regulations about appeals to him under s 49: s 49(7). Any decision of the Master of the Rolls on such an appeal is final: see s 49(6).

5 The Master of the Rolls (Appeals and Applications) Regulations 2001 refer to the Law Society and its Council. However in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619). The Authority must always be made a respondent to the application or appeal other than one initiated by the Authority: reg 3.

6 See the Master of the Roll (Appeals and Applications) Regulations 2001 reg 2. The regulations came into force on 29 June 2001 whereupon the Master of Rolls (Appeals and Applications) Regulations 1991 ceased to have effect: Master of the Roll (Appeals and Applications) Regulations 2001 reg 1.

10 Master of the Roll (Appeals and Applications) Regulations 2001 reg 5.

11 Within two days of delivering the petition and other documents to the clerk to the Master of the Rolls the applicant or appellant must deliver copies to the Authority and to any other respondent at his last known business or home address: see the Master of the Roll (Appeals and Applications) Regulations 2001 reg 6.

21 Master of the Roll (Appeals and Applications) Regulations 2001 reg 8.

On the hearing of the application or appeal the applicant or appellant and the respondent may appear in person, or by solicitor or counsel, or by a registered European lawyer (ie a European lawyer registered under the European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, reg 17 (see PARA 542)), or in the case of a company by a director, or in the case of a limited liability partnership by a member, or in the case of the Authority by a member of its staff: see the Master of the Roll (Appeals and Applications) Regulations 2001 reg 11.

(v) Disciplinary Proceedings before the Courts

919. Application and hearing.

An application to the court¹ is made to the High Court² (usually to a Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division³) by motion supported by affidavit⁴. The applicant must serve on the Solicitors Regulation Authority⁵ 14 clear days' notice of his intention to make the application, together with copies of all affidavits intended to be used in support⁶. At the hearing the Authority may appear by counsel⁷. The court has no jurisdiction to entertain such an application made by an applicant in person⁸. The court must not entertain the application except upon production of an affidavit proving that the applicant has served the requisite notice and copies on the Authority⁹. An application, once initiated, cannot be withdrawn without the sanction of the court¹⁰.

The court¹¹ has a discretion over the order it makes when exercising its disciplinary jurisdiction, and may order the solicitor to be suspended from practice¹² or to pay costs in lieu of ordering his name to be struck off the roll¹³.

1 Although this procedure is theoretically open to an applicant (see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 50(2); and PARA 745), in practice almost every application should be made to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal: see s 47(1); and PARA 906. An application by any person to require a solicitor to answer allegations contained in an affidavit may be treated by the court as an application to strike the name of the solicitor off the roll: see s 55; and PARA 907 note 2. As to the liability of solicitors as officers of the court see PARA 745 et seq. There is a right of appeal to the Court of Appeal: see s 50(3); and PARA 745. As to the roll see PARA 621; and as to striking off see PARAS 664, 909.

3 See Re A Solicitor (1928) 72 Sol Jo 368, 570, DC. These applications are distinct from such applications as might be made to a court in the course of an action proceeding before that court: see the judgments in Brendon v Spiro [1938] 1 KB 176, [1937] 2 All ER 496, CA. Cf Davies v Davies [1960] 3 All ER 248, [1960] 1 WLR 1004, CA. It is not part of the court's function in trying a case depending on evidence to say whether a solicitor has acted with professional propriety; a matter of professional ethics is a matter for the disciplinary body: Davies v Davies at 250 and 1006 per Hodson LJ.

4 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 52; and PARA 920.

5 The Solicitors Act 1974 ss 51-53 refer to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4). However in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority.

6 Solicitors Act 1974 s 51(2). The provisions of s 51 are subject to the provisions of s 54 (which imposes restrictions on the power to strike a solicitor's name off the roll: see PARA 664): s 51(1).

7 Solicitors Act 1974 s 51(3).

8 See Re Solicitors, ex p Peasegood [1994] 1 All ER 298, DC. The applicant may, however, appear in person on an appeal from an order of the Tribunal (see PARA 917), but not on an original application to the court: Ex p Pitt (1834) 5 B & Ad 1077; Re A Solicitor, ex p Incorporated Law Society [1903] 1 KB 857, DC; Re Two Solicitors [1938] 1 KB 616, [1937] 4 All ER 451, CA.

920. Orders.

At the hearing of the application the Solicitors Regulation Authority¹ may apply for any order nisi that may have been made by the court to be made absolute², or for an order that the solicitor's name be struck off the roll³, or for such other order as the court thinks fit⁴. The court may order the Authority's costs to be paid by the applicant or the solicitor or partly by one and partly by the other⁵; but there is no power to make an order for payment of costs out of central funds⁶.

Where an order is made by the High Court or the Court of Appeal on a motion to strike a solicitor's name off the roll or to require a solicitor to answer allegations in an affidavit, and that order has not been drawn up within a week after it was made, the Authority may cause the order to be drawn up, and all future proceedings on it must be taken as if the motion had been made by the Authority⁷. If the court orders that a solicitor's name be struck off the roll or that he be suspended from practice, the proper officer of the court must send a copy of the order to the Authority, which must enter a note of it on the roll and, if the order so directs, strike the solicitor's name off the roll⁸.

1 The Solicitors Act 1974 refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

921. Appeals.

An appeal from a decision of the High Court that a solicitor's name is struck off the roll lies to the Court of Appeal¹ without leave². The Solicitors Regulation Authority³ may be represented by counsel⁴ and the provisions relating to the drawing up of orders by, and the sending of orders to, the Authority apply⁵.

(vi) Adverse Applications

A. GROUNDS FOR EXERCISING JURISDICTION

922. Introduction.

An adverse application against a solicitor may be distinguished from a permissive application; the former is an application to strike a solicitor's name off the roll¹, and the latter is an application by a solicitor that his name be removed from the roll², and is made to the Solicitors Regulation Authority³. An application that the name of a solicitor be struck off the roll or that he be required to answer allegations contained in an affidavit⁴ may be based on grounds specified by statute⁵. Until the introduction of the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007⁶ an application may also be based on the ground of conduct unbecoming a solicitor⁷.

1 As to striking off the roll see PARA 909.

2 As to removal from the roll see PARA 663.

3 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 8(1); and PARA 663. The Solicitors Act 1974 s 8 refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

4 See PARA 907 note 2.

5 As to the statutory grounds see PARA 923.

6 As to the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 see PARA 830 et seq.

7 It was formerly the practice to refer to misconduct or to professional misconduct. It is now customary to refer to conduct unbecoming a solicitor: see PARA 870.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(8) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(vi) Adverse Applications/A. GROUNDS FOR EXERCISING JURISDICTION/923. Statutory grounds for disciplinary proceedings.

923. Statutory grounds for disciplinary proceedings.

By statute, complaint may be made to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal¹ in respect of a solicitor upon the following grounds:

- 1337 (1) that he has failed to comply with any rules made by the Solicitors Regulation Authority² as to the keeping of accounts³ or as to the professional practice, conduct and discipline of solicitors⁴ or in relation to indemnity⁵;
- 1338 (2) that he has failed to comply with the statutory provisions relating to the submission of accountant's reports or with rules made by the Authority in this respect⁶;
- 1339 (3) that he has knowingly acted in contravention of an order made by the Tribunal in respect of an employee or consultant of a solicitor⁷ or of any conditions subject to which permission has been granted for the employment of that person⁸;
- 1340 (4) that without the written permission of the Authority or in contravention of conditions upon which such permission was given he has employed or remunerated in connection with his practice as a solicitor any person who to his knowledge is disqualified from practising as a solicitor because such person's name has been struck off the roll⁹ or because such person is suspended from practising¹⁰.

Until a day to be appointed a complaint may be made to the Tribunal in respect of a solicitor upon the following grounds:

- 1341 (a) that in or in relation to an application for a practising certificate he has made a false statement material to that application¹¹;
- 1342 (b) that in or in relation to a notice to the Authority of a change in his place or places of business¹² he has made a false statement material to that notice¹³.

1 As to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal see PARA 906.

2 The following provisions of the Solicitors Act 1974 refer to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

3 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 32(3); and PARA 846. Any person may make the complaint: s 32(3). The relevant rules having effect under s 32 are the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998: see PARA 835 et seq.

4 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 31(2); and PARA 828.

5 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 37(4); and PARA 853. The relevant rules having effect under s 37(4) are the Solicitors' Indemnity Insurance Rules 2008: see PARA 854. As from a day to be appointed a complaint may also be made to the Tribunal that an employee of a solicitor has failed to comply with rules that have effect in relation to them: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 34A(2), (3); and PARA 835. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 34(6); and PARA 849. The complaint may only be made by or on behalf of the Authority: s 34(6).

12 Is a notice under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 84(1): see PARA 621.

13 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 9(5) (prospectively repealed); and PARA 668. The complaint may only be made by or on behalf of the Authority: see s 9(5) (prospectively repealed); and PARA 668.

B. EMPLOYMENT OF DISQUALIFIED PERSONS

924. Restrictions on employment of disqualified persons.

A solicitor may not employ or remunerate in connection with his practice as a solicitor any person who to his knowledge is disqualified from practising as a solicitor because:

- 1343 (1) his name has been struck off the roll¹; or
- 1344 (2) he is suspended from practising as a solicitor²; or
- 1345 (3) his practising certificate is suspended while he is an undischarged bankrupt³.

Nor may he so employ or remunerate any person if, to his knowledge, there is a direction in force in relation to that person⁴ prohibiting the restoration of his name to the roll except by order of the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal⁵. These prohibitions do not apply where the solicitor seeking to employ such a person obtains the written permission of the Solicitors Regulation Authority⁶, which may be granted for such period and subject to such conditions as the Authority thinks fit⁷. A solicitor aggrieved by the refusal of the Authority to grant such permission, or by any conditions attached by the Authority to the grant of any such permission, may appeal to the Master of the Rolls⁸ who may:

- 1346 (a) confirm the refusal or the conditions, as the case may be; or
- 1347 (b) grant a permission for such period and subject to such conditions as he thinks fit⁹.

These provisions¹⁰ apply to a recognised body¹¹ and its business as such as they apply to a solicitor and his practice as such¹².

The Solicitors Act 1974 s 41 refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society elected in accordance with provisions of the Charter and the Solicitors Act 1974 (see s 87(1); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body responsible for the regulation of solicitors is the Solicitors Regulation Authority: see PARA 619. 8 The Master of the Rolls may make regulations about such appeals to him: Solicitors Act 1974 s 41(5). As to appeals to the Master of the Rolls see the Master of the Rolls (Appeals and Applications Regulations) 2001; and PARA 918. As from a day to be appointed such appeals are made to the High Court instead of the Master of the Rolls and the Solicitors Act 1974 s 41(3) is accordingly amended and s 41(5) is prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 41(3)(a), (6), Sch 23. The decision of the High Court is final and the court may make such order as it thinks fit as to payment of costs: Solicitors Act 1974 s 41(4A), (4B) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 41(5)). The Authority may make rules providing that appeals under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 41(3) lie to the Tribunal and not to the High Court: see s 49A(1), (2)(e) (not yet in force); and PARA 905. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

9 Solicitors Act 1974 s 41(3) (prospectively amended: see note 8).

10 The penalty under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 41(4) (see PARA 925) does not, however, so apply: see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 9(1); and PARA 701.

926-927 Grounds for application, Orders prohibiting the employment or remuneration of certain person

Day appointed in relation to these provisions is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. Orders prohibiting the employment or remuneration of certain persons.

927. Orders prohibiting the employment or remuneration of certain persons.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal² or the Solicitors Regulation Authority³ may order⁴ that, as from a specified date no solicitor is to employ or remunerate, in connection with his practice as a solicitor, the person with respect to whom the order is made⁵, except in accordance with permission in writing granted by the Solicitors Regulation Authority⁶ for such period and subject to such conditions as the Authority thinks fit to specify in the permission⁷.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect⁸. The Authority or the Tribunal may make an order⁹ stating one or more of the following:

1354 (1) except in accordance with the Authority's permission¹⁰, as from the specified date¹¹:

- 50. (a) no solicitor is to employ or remunerate, in connection with his practice as a solicitor, the person with respect to whom the order is made;
- 51. (b) no employee of a solicitor is to employ or remunerate, in connection with the solicitor's practice, the person with respect to whom the order is made;
- 52. (c) no recognised body¹² is to employ or remunerate that person; and
- 53. (d) no manager¹³ or employee of a recognised body is to employ or remunerate that person in connection with the business of that body¹⁴;

1355 (2) that as from the specified date no recognised body or manager or employee of such a body is to permit the person with respect to whom the order is made to be a manager of the body, except in accordance with the Authority's permission¹⁵;

1356 (3) that as from the specified date no recognised body or manager or employee of such a body is to permit the person with respect to whom the order is made to have an interest in the body¹⁶, except in accordance with the Authority's permission¹⁷.

² As to the Tribunal see PARA 906.

⁴ Where the Authority investigates whether there are grounds for making, or making an application to the Tribunal for it to make, an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2) with respect to a person, the Authority may direct him to pay to the Authority an amount which is calculated by the Authority as the cost to the Authority of investigating the matter or in the opinion of the Authority represents a reasonable contribution towards that cost: s 43(1A) (added by the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 7 para 7(3); and prospectively substituted (see note 1)).

5 This applies to persons who fall within the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(1) (see PARA 926).

6 Any such permission must be given to the solicitor: see Re A Solicitor's Clerk (1960) Times, 12 November, DC, where the court expressed misgivings as to the extent of the power.

7 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2); and the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 11(2) (amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 7 para 10(a); and prospectively repealed). Orders made under these provisions by the Authority, or made, varied or confirmed by the Tribunal and filed with the Authority, may be inspected during office hours without payment but, until a day to be appointed, are not open to the inspection of any person other than a solicitor: Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(5) (amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 7 para 7(6) and prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 42(3), Sch 23); Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 11(3) (as so prospectively repealed). The Tribunal will not make an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2) merely because the respondent to the proceedings has admitted the allegations: Re a Solicitor's Clerk, Decision 5281 (1994) 91 LS Gaz (13 April) 46, Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal. As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3. As to the quashing, variation or confirmation of the order see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(3A); and PARA 928. For the purposes of the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 43(5) 'solicitor' includes a recognised body: see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 11(3) (as so prospectively repealed).

An application made under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2) must be in the form set out in the Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, Schedule, Form 2: r 8(1). In a case where the Authority has applied to the Tribunal for an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2) the solicitor, recognised body or registered European lawyer by or for whose benefit the respondent is employer or remunerated may also be named or joined as a respondent to the application and must be joined as a respondent if the Tribunal so directs: r 8(2). The provisions of r 5(2), (3) (see PARA 908) and r 6(1)-(5) (see PARA 911) apply to every application made under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2): Solicitors (Disciplinary Proceedings) Rules 2007, SI 2007/3588, r 8(3). As to the service of documents under r 8 see r 10; and PARA 911 note 8.

The Tribunal may make an order as to the payment of costs by any party to the application: Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(4). Costs may not be ordered where the respondent makes an early admission, is very co-operative with the investigation, and adopts a very responsible attitude: Re Paul Hamilton Hatch (a Solicitor's Clerk), Decision 5289 (1994) 91 LS Gaz (8 June) 28, Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal.

9 The Authority may make regulations prescribing charges to be paid to the Authority by persons who are the subject of an investigation by the Authority as to whether there are grounds for the Authority to make an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2) or to make an application to the Tribunal for it to make such an order: s 43(2A) (as prospectively added: see note 1). Such regulations may make different provision for different cases or purposes and provide for the whole or part of the charge payable under the regulations to be repaid in such circumstances as may be prescribed: s 43(2B) (as so prospectively added). Any charge which a person is required to pay under regulations under s 43(2A) is recoverable as a debt to the Authority: see s 43(2C) (as so prospectively added).

10 'Authority's permission' means permission in writing granted by the Authority for such period and subject to such conditions as the Authority may think fit to specify in the permission: Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(5A) (as prospectively added: see note 1).

11 'Specified date' means such a date as may be specified in the order: Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(5A) (prospectively added: see note 1).

12 As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9; and PARA 687 note 3 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 5A (as prospectively added: see note 1)).

13 As to the meaning of 'manager', in relation to a recognised body, see the Legal Services Act 2007 s 207; and PARA 369 note 17 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 5A (as prospectively added: see note 1)).

14 Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2)(a) (as prospectively substituted: see note 1).

16 As to when a person has an interest in a recognised body for the purposes of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43 see the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 72, 109; and PARA 1477 note 3 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 5B (as prospectively added: see note 1)).

Where an order restricting the employment or remuneration of a person¹ is in force in respect of a person, then if any solicitor knowingly acts in contravention of that order or of any conditions subject to which permission² has been granted under it, a complaint may be made in respect of that contravention to the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal³ by or on behalf of the Solicitors Regulation Authority⁴.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect⁵. Any person who, while there is in force in respect of him an order of the Tribunal⁶, seeks or accepts any employment by or remuneration from a solicitor in connection with that solicitor's practice, or a recognised body⁷ in connection with that body's business, without previously informing him or it of that order, is guilty of an offence⁸.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect⁹. It is an offence for a person in respect of whom there is in force an order restricting his employment or remuneration¹⁰:

- 1357 (1) to seek or accept any employment or remuneration from a solicitor, or an employee of a solicitor, in connection with the practice carried on by that solicitor without previously informing the solicitor or employee of the order;
- 1358 (2) to seek or accept any employment or remuneration from a recognised body, or a manager or employee of a recognised body, in connection with that body's business, without previously informing the body, or manager¹¹ or employee, of the order¹².

It is an offence for a person in respect of whom there is in force an order which contains a provision restricting him from being a manager of a recognised body¹³ to seek or accept a position as a manager of a recognised body, without previously informing that body of the order¹⁴.

It is an offence for a person in respect of whom there is in force an order which contains a provision restricting him from having an interest in a recognised body¹⁵ to seek or accept an interest in a recognised body¹⁶ from any person, without previously informing that person and (if different) the recognised body of the order¹⁷.

1 le an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2) (see PARA 927): Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(2) (amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 7 para 8). Any document purporting to be an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2), and to be duly signed in accordance with s 48(1) (see PARA 915) must be received in evidence in any proceedings under s 44 and be deemed to be such an order without further proof unless the contrary is shown: s 44(3). Section 44(3) applies to proceedings under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9(6), Sch 2 s it applies in relation to proceedings under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44: Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 12(1)(b).

2 Until a day to be appointed this applies to permission for the employment of that person and as from a day to be appointed permission for the taking of any action: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(2) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 43(b)).

3 As to the Tribunal see PARA 906.

4 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(2) (as amended and prospectively amended (see notes 2, 3)). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 44 refers to the 'Society' (ie the Law Society of England and Wales (see the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 2(2)(w); and PARA 602 note 4)). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of solicitors and such rules is the Solicitors Regulation Authority (see PARA 619).

5 The Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(1) is substituted and s 44(1A)-(1C), (5) added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 43 as from a day to be appointed under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

7 As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9; and PARA 687 note 3 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(5) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 43(c))).

8 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(1); the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 12(1)(a). A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(1) (amended by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46). As to the standard scale see PARA 571 note 1. Notwithstanding anything in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980, proceedings under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(1) may be commenced at any time before the expiration of six months from the first discovery of the offence by the prosecutor, but no such proceedings may be commenced, except with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions, by any person other than the Solicitors Regulation Authority or a person acting on behalf of the Authority: Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(4) (amended by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 154, Sch 7 para 132).

11 As to the meaning of 'manager' see the Legal Services Act 2007 s 207, the Solicitors Act 1974 ss 43(5A); and PARA 369 note 17 (definition applied by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(5) (as prospectively added (see note 5))).

12 Solicitors Act 1974 s 44(1) (as prospectively substituted: see note 5). A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: s 44(1C) (as prospectively added: see note 5).

15 Ie an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 43(2) which contains provisions within s 43(2)(c) (see PARA 927).

16 For these purposes a person seeks or accepts an interest in a recognised body if the person seeks or accepts an interest which if it were obtained by the person would result in the person having an interest in that body within the meaning of the Legal Services Act 2007 Pt 5 (see ss 72, 109 and PARA 1477): Solicitors Act 1974 s 5 (as prospectively added: see note 5). A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: s 44(1C) (as prospectively added: see note 5).

TEXT AND NOTE 1--Day appointed is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(i) Generally/931. Statutory provision.

(9) REMUNERATION

(i) Generally

931. Statutory provision.

The enforceability at the instance of a solicitor of an agreement between him and his client fixing the amount and manner of the solicitor's remuneration for professional business on the client's behalf depends upon statute¹. The statutory provisions are concerned with the enforcement² of such agreements rather than with their validity³.

Unless the relevant provisions are complied with the solicitor cannot avail himself of the benefits and privileges conferred by statute⁴. The client who sets up an agreement with the solicitor relating to contentious business is not bound to show that it has been made in accordance with the statutory terms before he can enforce it unless he claims a benefit given by the statute⁵ because his right to make an agreement at common law is not affected by the statute⁶. However the position as regards non-contentious business is entirely regulated by statute⁷.

1 Re Russell Son and Scott (1885) 30 Ch D 114, 52 LT 794 per Kay J; Clare v Joseph [1907] 2 KB 369, CA. For the statutory provisions see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 57 (non-contentious business: see PARAS 942-943) and s 59 (contentious business: see PARA 945 et seq). As to the meaning of 'contentious business' and 'non-contentious business' see PARA 933 notes 2, 4. It seems that these provisions cannot be avoided by the solicitor taking his client's cheque and suing upon it: see Martin, Boston and Co (a firm) v Levy [1982] 3 All ER 193, [1982] 1 WLR 1434. The CPR Pts 44-48 apply to costs payable by a client to his solicitor: see CPR 43.2(2)(a)(iii); and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1734.

2 Re Jones [1896] 1 Ch 222, CA; Clare v Joseph [1907] 2 KB 369, CA; Gundry v Sainsbury [1910] 1 KB 645, CA; Electrical Trades Union v Tarlo [1964] Ch 720, [1964] 2 All ER 1 (an unwritten agreement covering both contentious and non-contentious business).

3 The distinction is of importance for if the agreement is found not to comply with the provisions of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 57 or s 59 an action may still be brought once the provisions of s 69 (see PARA 956 et seq) have been complied with: Martin, Boston and Co (a firm) v Levy [1982] 3 All ER 193 at 198, [1982] 1 WLR 1434 at 1439 per Warner J.

4 Clare v Joseph [1907] 2 KB 369, CA.

5 Clare v Joseph [1907] 2 KB 369 at 377, CA.

6 Clare v Joseph [1907] 2 KB 369 at 376, CA, per Fletcher Moulton LJ. See also Tabram v Horn (1827) 1 Man & Ry KB 228; Turner v Tennant (1846) 10 Jur 429n; Morgan v Taylor (1859) 5 CBNS 653; Collins v Brook (1859) 4 H & N 270; Moon v Hall (1864) 17 CBNS 760; Jennings v Johnson (1873) LR 8 CP 425; Ibberson v Neck (1886) 2 TLR 427; Electrical Trades Union v Tarlo [1964] Ch 720, [1964] 2 All ER 1. The agreement may have a special significance for an opponent in litigation because as inter partes costs are awarded as an indemnity, an opponent ordered to pay costs will not be bound to pay anything if there has been an agreement (oral or written) by the solicitor not to charge the client: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 60(3); Gundry v Sainsbury [1910] 1 KB 645, CA; and British Waterways Board v Norman (1993) 26 HLR 232, DC. It is, however, possible to frame an agreement so as to avoid this consequence: see McLean v Carlisle (1917) 61 Sol Jo 399, HL. A solicitor may thus bind himself by an oral agreement to charge nothing for contentious business (see Re A Solicitor [1956] 1 QB 155, [1955] 3 All ER 305) except out-of-pocket expenses (Jones v Reade (1836) 5 Ad & El 529) or nothing at all (Turver v Tennant). A solicitor may also charge on a conditional fee basis: see PARA 1309.

7 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 57; and PARA 942 et seq. Where an oral agreement relates to both contentious and non-contentious business, the client may enforce that part of it which relates to contentious business: Electrical Trades Union v Tarlo [1964] Ch 720, [1964] 2 All ER 1.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(i) Generally/932. Information to be provided to the client.

932. Information to be provided to the client.

A solicitor is under a duty to provide his client with the best information about the overall cost of a matter both at the outset and when appropriate as the matter progresses¹. In particular the solicitor must advise the client of the basis and terms of the charges (and if such charges are to be increased) and any likely payments to others². A solicitor must discuss with his client how the client will pay³ and whether their liability for another's costs may be covered by existing insurance or whether specially purchased insurance may be obtained⁴.

A solicitor must also discuss with his client whether the potential outcomes of any legal case will justify the expense or risk involved including the risk of having to pay an opponent's costs⁵.

Where a solicitor is acting for a publicly funded client he must explain the following at the outset:

- 1363 (1) the circumstances in which they may be liable for the solicitor's costs;
- 1364 (2) the effect of the statutory charge⁶;
- 1365 (3) the client's duty to pay any fixed or periodic contribution assessed and the consequence of failing to do so; and
- 1366 (4) that even if the client is successful, the other party may not be ordered to pay costs or may not be in a position to pay them⁷.

1 Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.03(1). Any information about the cost must be clear and confirmed in writing: r 2.03(5). Where a solicitor can demonstrate that it was inappropriate in the circumstances to meet some or all of the requirements in r 2.03(1) and r 2.03(5) he will not breach r 2.03: r 2.03(7). A solicitor is not bound to the terms of an estimate provided but any estimate of costs could be taken into consideration as a yardstick for determining what is reasonable: see Mastercigars Direct Ltd v Withers LLP [2007] EWHC 2733 (Ch), [2008] 3 All ER 417.

2 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.03(1)(a)-(c), (f). The solicitor must also advise that there are circumstances where a lien may be exercised for unpaid costs: see r 2.03(1)(e); and PARA 996. A client who approaches a solicitor's firm for legal advice from a solicitor will not be liable to pay the firm's fees if he is, in fact, advised by an unqualified representative of that firm: Pilbrow v Pearlless De Rougemont & Co [1999] 3 All ER 355, [1999] 2 FLR 139, CA.

3 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.03(1)(d). In particular this should include whether the client is entitled to public funding or whether costs can be met by insurance payments or by others (ie employer or trade union).

4 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.03(1)(g).

5 Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.03(6).

6 As to the statutory charge see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 99 et seq.

7 See the Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.03(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(i) Generally/933. Non-contentious and contentious business.

933. Non-contentious and contentious business.

The remuneration of a solicitor for professional work done by him for a client¹ is governed, as regards contentious business², either by statute, rules of court and regulations applying to the particular proceedings, or under the inherent jurisdiction of the Tribunal before which the proceedings are taken³; and as regards non-contentious business⁴, by statute and orders made under statutory authority⁵.

The statutory provisions⁶ relating to the remuneration of solicitors in respect of contentious and non-contentious business apply to the remuneration of a recognised body⁷ in respect of such business, with certain necessary modifications⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 835 note 6.

2 'Contentious business' means business done, whether as solicitor or advocate, in or for the purposes of proceedings begun before a court or before an arbitrator not being business which falls within the definition of non-contentious or common form probate business in the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 128: Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1) (amended by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 1 para 12(a) and the Arbitration Act 1996 Sch 4). 'Non-contentious or common form probate business' means the business of obtaining probate and letters of administration where there is no contention as to the right thereto, including:

287 (1) the passing of probates and administrations through the High Court in contentious cases where the contest has been terminated;

288 (2) all business of a non-contentious nature in matters of testacy and intestacy, not being proceedings in any action; and 289 (3) the business of lodging caveats against the grant of probate or administration: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 128.

For there to be 'contentious business' proceedings must be 'begun'. Business done for the purpose of proceedings contemplated but not instituted is non-contentious business: Re Simpkin Marshall Ltd [1959] Ch 229, [1958] 3 All ER 611. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981 (see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 para 1) and the reference in the definition of contentious business is amended accordingly by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 para 21(6). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 Eg the detailed assessment incurred in the liquidation of a limited company (Re Foss, Bilbrough, Plaskitt and Foss [1912] 2 Ch 161, 81 LJ Ch 558) and the control of the House of Lords over appellate proceedings (West Ham Union Guardians v Churchwardens etc of St Matthew, Bethnal Green [1896] AC 477 at 489, HL).

4 'Non-contentious business' means any business done as a solicitor which is not contentious business as defined in the Solicitors Act 1974 (see note 2): s 87(1).

5 Ie by Solicitors Act 1974 Pt III (ss 56-75) and the orders made under it: see PARA 936 et seq. Nothing in Pt III affects any of the provisions of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 ss 16-21 (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(4) (2006 Reissue) PARA 2058 et seq) or any other enactment not expressly repealed by the Solicitors Act 1974 which authorises the making of rules or orders or the giving of directions with respect to costs, or which provides that any such rule, order or direction made or given under a previous enactment is to continue in force: s 75(c), (e); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b).

6 Ie the Solicitors Act 1974 s 56 (except s 56(1)(e), (5)) (see PARA 936); ss 57-59 (see PARAS 941-942, 945); s 60 (see PARAS 946-947) (except s 60(5)) (see PARA 946); ss 61, 62 (see PARAS 948-949); s 64 (see PARA 958); s 65 (see PARA 990); s 67 (see PARA 964); s 69(1) (see PARA 956); and ss 70-74 (see PARAS 971 et seq, 1011): Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 22(2).

7 As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3.

8 See the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 22. In the provisions to which Sch 2 para 22 applies (see note 6):

290 (1) any reference to a solicitor or to a client of a solicitor is to be construed as including a reference to a recognised body or to a client of such a body; and 291 (2) any reference to a client's solicitor is to be construed as including a reference to any recognised body acting for a client: Sch 2 para 22(1).

UPDATE

933 Non-contentious and contentious business

NOTE 2--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604. In s 87(1) business 'in ... proceedings begun before a court' refers to work done in the actual litigation, while work 'for the purposes of proceedings' might be carried out before the proceedings were begun or during the proceedings; the phrase 'for the purposes of' requires the proceedings to be contemporaneous with the work in question or to be in the future: Bilkus v Stockler Brunton (a firm) [2010] EWCA Civ 101, [2010] All ER (D) 182 (Feb).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(i) Generally/934. Pro bono representation.

934. Pro bono representation.

The following applies to proceedings in a civil court¹ in which a party to the proceedings is or was represented by a legal representative² and that representation is or was provided free of charge³, in whole or in part⁴. The court may order any person to make a payment to a charity prescribed by the Lord Chancellor⁵ in respect of that representation (or, if only part of the representation was provided free of charge, in respect of that part)⁶.

In considering whether to make such an order and the terms of such an order, the court must have regard to whether, had the representation not been provided free of charge, it would have ordered the person to make a payment to the party being represented in respect of the costs payable to the representative by him in respect of that representation and, if it would, what the terms of the order would have been⁷.

1 For these purposes 'civil court' means the civil division of the Court of Appeal, the High Court, or any county court: Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(10).

2 For these purposes 'legal representative', in relation to a party to proceedings, means a person exercising a right of audience or conducting litigation on the party's behalf: Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(10).

3 For these purposes 'free of charge' means otherwise than for or in expectation of fee, gain or reward: Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(10).

4 Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(1). Section 194 applies to such proceedings even if P is or was also represented by a legal representative not acting free of charge: s 194(2).

5 An order may only be made prescribing a charity which is registered in accordance with the Charities Act 1993 s 3 (see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 315 et seq) and provides financial support to persons who provide, or organise or facilitate the provision of legal advice or assistance (by way of representation or otherwise) which is free of charge: Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(9). As from a day to be appointed (ie the day on which the Charities Act 1993 s 3A comes into force) the reference to the Charities Act 1993 s 3 is to read s 3A: see the Legal Services Act 2007 (Transitory Provision) Order 2008, SI 2008/1799. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(3), (8). The court may not make such an order against a person represented in the proceedings if the person's representation was at all times provided by a legal representative acting free of charge or funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Community Legal Service: s 194(5). Nor may a court make such an order in respect of representation if (or to the extent that) it is provided before s 194 comes into force: s 194(11). As to orders made under s 194(3) see further PARA 935. Where a right to a costs order is deemed to be made in favour of a party with pro bono representation, that party may apply for an order under s 194(3): CPR 44.12(1A). However, subject to exceptions, where the court makes an order which does not mention costs the general rule is that no party is entitled to seek an order under the Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(3): see CPR 44.13(1)(a); and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) para 1756. The Access to Justice Foundation (charity registration number 1126147) is a charity prescribed for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(8) as of 3 November 2008: see the Legal Services Act 2007 (Prescribed Charity) Order 2008, SI 2008/2680.

7 Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(4). Rules of court may make further provision as to the making of orders under s 194(3), and may in particular:

(ii) Non-contentious Business

936. Non-contentious business remuneration orders.

The remuneration of solicitors in respect of non-contentious business¹ is prescribed and regulated by orders² made by a committee consisting of the Secretary of State³, the Lord Chief Justice⁴, the Master of the Rolls⁵, the president of the Law Society⁶, the president of a local law society⁷ as nominated⁸, so far as concerns business relating to land registration⁹ the Chief Land Registrar¹⁰ and, as from a day to be appointed, a member of the Legal Services Board nominated by that Board¹¹. Any three members of the committee may make a remuneration order in respect of non-contentious business¹². Before an order is made a draft must be sent to the Law Society¹³ and the committee must consider any written observations submitted by the Society within one month¹⁴. Assessment of solicitors' bills of costs is regulated by these non-contentious business remuneration orders¹⁵.

The principles prescribed by such an order may provide that a solicitor should be remunerated¹⁶ by a gross sum; or by a fixed sum for each document prepared or perused¹⁷; or in any other mode; or partly in one mode and partly in another¹⁸. The general principles prescribed by such an order may provide that the amount of remuneration is to be determined by having regard to all or any of certain prescribed considerations among others¹⁹. The order may also authorise and regulate the taking of security by a solicitor from his client for payment of any remuneration to become due under any such order and the allowance of interest²⁰. The current order is the Solicitors' (Non-Contentious Business) Remuneration Order 1994 which applies to all non-contentious business for which bills are delivered on or after 1 November 1994²¹ and to the remuneration of recognised bodies as well as to that of solicitors²².

2 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(2).

3 Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(1)(a) (amended by SI 2003/1887). As from a day to be appointed the duty of the Secretary of State in this context is replaced by that of the Lord Chancellor: Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(1)(a) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 54(1), (2)(a)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As to the meaning of 'local law society' see PARA 618 note 5. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

11 Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(1)(da) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 54(1), (2)(d)). As to the Legal Services Board see PARA 303.

12 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(2). Until a day to be appointed the Secretary of State must be included as one of the three members of the committee and the committee has the power to make general orders prescribing and regulating in such manner as they think fit the remuneration of solicitors in respect of non-contentious business: see s 56(2) (amended by SI 2003/1887). However, as from a day to be appointed the Lord Chancellor must be included as one of the three members and the committee may make general orders prescribing the general principles to be applied when determining the remuneration of solicitors in respect of non-contentious business: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(1) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 54(1), (3)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such days had been appointed.

14 Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(3) (amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 paras 1, 54(1), (4)(b)). The committee may then make the order, either in the form of the draft or with such alterations or additions as it may think fit: s 56(3). The requirement of consultation under s 56(3) bears no implication that if momentous changes are to be made other bodies must be given an opportunity to make representations: Bates v Lord Hailsham of St Marylebone [1972] 3 All ER 1019, [1972] 1 WLR 1373 (where it was also held that the draft was deemed not to have been prepared by the committee itself).

15 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(7) (amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 54(9)(b)). This is however subject to the power under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 57 (see PARA 942) to agree remuneration: s 56(7). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(7) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 54(9)(a) which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs. As to assessment of costs see PARA 967 et seq.

295 (1) the position of the party with whom the solicitor is concerned in the business, that is whether he is vendor or purchaser, lessor or lessee, mortgagor or mortgagee or the like;

296 (2) the place where and the circumstances in which the business or any part of it is transacted;

297 (3) the amount of the capital money or rent to which the business relates;

298 (4) the skill, labour and responsibility on the part of the solicitor which the business involves;

299 (5) the number and importance of the documents prepared or perused without regard to length: s 56(5)(a)-(e).

As from a day to be appointed head (4) is amended as also to include the skill, labour and responsibility of any employee of the solicitor who is an authorised person: see s 56(4)(d) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 54(6)(b)).

In relation to an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 56 regulating (in accordance with the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 22: see PARA 933) the remuneration of recognised bodies in respect of non-contentious business, the Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(5) has effect as if:

As to the meaning of 'authorised person' see PARA 515 note 3. At the date at which this volume states the law no such days had been appointed.

20 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 56(6). The Solicitors' (Non-Contentious Business) Remuneration Order 1994, SI 1994/2616, art 12(3) provides that a solicitor may take from his client security for the payment of any costs including the amount of any interest to which the solicitor may become entitled under art 14: see PARA 986. For these purposes, 'costs' means the amount charged in a solicitor's bill exclusive of disbursements and value added tax in respect of non-contentious business or common form probate business: art 2. 936-940 Non-contentious business remuneration orders ... Requirement to pay a sum towards the costs; refunds by solicitor

SI 1994/2616 replaced: Solicitors' (Non-Contentious Business) Remuneration Order 2009, SI 2009/1931.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(ii) Non-contentious Business/938. Certification.

938. Certification.

Without prejudice to the statutory provisions relating to assessment of costs¹, an entitled person² may³ require a solicitor to obtain a remuneration certificate⁴ in respect of a bill which has been delivered where the costs are not more than £50,000⁵. The remuneration certificate must state what sum, in the opinion of the Legal Complaints Service⁶, would be a fair and reasonable charge for the business covered by the bill (whether it is the sum charged or a lesser sum) and, in the absence of assessment, the sum payable in respect of the costs is the sum stated in the remuneration certificate⁷.

Before the solicitor brings proceedings to recover costs against a client on a bill for non-contentious business⁸ he must, except where the bill has been assessed, inform the client in writing of specified matters⁹.

If a solicitor deducts his costs from money held for or on behalf of a client or of an estate in satisfaction of a bill and an entitled person objects in writing to the amount of the bill within the prescribed time¹⁰, the solicitor must immediately inform the entitled person in writing of specified matters¹¹ unless he has already done so¹².

A solicitor, when making an application for a remuneration certificate, must deliver to the LCS the complete relevant file and working papers, and any other information or documentation which the LCS may require for the purpose of providing a remuneration certificate: art 15.

6 The Solicitors' (Non-contentious Business) Remuneration Order 1994, SI 1994/2616, refers to the 'Council' (ie the Council of the Law Society). However in practice the body responsible is the Legal Complaints Service (see PARA 632).

302 (1) after a bill has been delivered and paid by the client other than by deduction;

303 (2) where a bill has been delivered after the expiry of one month from the date on which the client was informed in writing of the matters specified in art 8 (see PARA 939) or from delivery of the bill if later;

- 306 (5) if the Solicitors' (Non-Contentious Business) Remuneration Order 1994, SI 1994/2616, art 11(2) applies (see PARA 940): art 9.

An entitled third party may not require a solicitor to obtain a remuneration certificate:

- 307 (a) after the prescribed time (see note 10) has elapsed without any objection being received as to the amount of the costs;
- 308 (b) after expiry of one month from the date on which the entitled party was informed in writing (in compliance with art 7: see the text and note 12) of the matters specified in art 8 (see PARA 939) or from notification of the costs if later;
- 309 (c) after a court has ordered the bill to be assessed: art 10.

As to the meaning of 'client' and 'entitled third party' see PARA 937 note 3. A solicitor and an entitled person may agree in writing to waive the provisions referred to in heads (2)-(3) and (b)-(c) (ie arts 9(b)-(c), 10(b)-(c)): art 12(2).

SI 1994/2616 replaced: Solicitors' (Non-Contentious Business) Remuneration Order 2009, SI 2009/1931.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(ii) Non-contentious Business/940. Requirement to pay a sum towards the costs; refunds by solicitor.

940. Requirement to pay a sum towards the costs; refunds by solicitor.

When a client¹ requires a solicitor to obtain a remuneration certificate², the client must pay to the solicitor 50 per cent of the costs³ together with disbursements already paid by the solicitor and value added tax comprised in the bill subject to certain exceptions⁴.

The Legal Complaints Service (the 'LCS')⁵ is under no obligation to provide a remuneration certificate and the solicitor may take steps to obtain payment of the bill if the client, having been informed of his right to seek a waiver of the requirements to make a payment on account⁶, has not:

- 1381 (1) within one month of receipt of the specified written information⁷ either paid the required sum towards the costs⁸ or applied to the LCS in writing for a waiver of those requirements; or
- 1382 (2) made the required payment⁹ within one month of written notification that he has been refused a waiver by the LCS¹⁰.

If a solicitor has received payment for all or part of his costs and a remuneration certificate is issued for less than the sum already paid, the solicitor must immediately pay to the entitled person¹¹ any refund which may be due (after taking into account any other sums which may properly be payable to the solicitor whether for costs, paid disbursements¹², value added tax or otherwise) unless the solicitor has applied for an order for assessment within one month of receipt by him of the remuneration certificate¹³. Where a solicitor applies for taxation his liability to pay any refund is suspended for so long as the assessment is still pending¹⁴. The obligation of the solicitor to repay costs is without prejudice to any liability of the solicitor to pay interest on the repayment¹⁵.

313 (2) the solicitor or (if the solicitor refuses) the LCS has agreed in writing to waive all or part of this requirement: art 11(1)(a)-(b).

5 The Solicitors' (Non-contentious Business) Remuneration Order 1994, SI 1994/2616 refers to the 'Council' (ie the Council of the Law Society). However in practice the body responsible is the Legal Complaints Service (see PARA 632).

941. Costs of solicitor mortgagee.

Where a mortgage¹ is made to a solicitor² either alone or jointly with any other person, he or his firm is entitled to recover from the mortgagor in respect of all business transacted and acts done by him or his firm in negotiating the loan, deducing and investigating the title to the property and preparing and completing the mortgage, such usual costs³ as he or it would have been entitled to receive if the mortgage had been made to a person who was not a solicitor but had retained and employed the solicitor or his firm to transact that business and do those acts⁴. Where a mortgage has been made to, or has become vested by transfer or transmission in, a solicitor, either alone or jointly with any other person, and business is transacted or acts are done by him or his firm in relation to that mortgage or the security created by it or the property charged by it, he or his firm is entitled to recover from the person on whose behalf the business was transacted or the acts were done, and to charge against the security, such usual costs as he or his firm would have been entitled to receive if the mortgage had been made to and had remained vested in a person who was not a solicitor and that person had retained or employed the solicitor or his firm to transact that business and do those acts⁵. Thus a solicitor lending his own money on mortgage may be entitled to charge a fee for negotiating the loan⁶.

942. Form of agreement.

A solicitor and his client¹ may make an agreement before or after or in the course of the transaction of any non-contentious business² as to the solicitor's remuneration in respect of it³.

The agreement may provide for the remuneration of the solicitor by a gross sum, or by reference to an hourly rate, or by a commission or percentage⁴ or by a salary or otherwise; and, at the option of the parties, it may be inclusive or exclusive of all or any disbursements made by the solicitor in respect of searches, plans, travelling, stamps, fees or other matters⁵.

943. Enforcement of non-contentious business agreement.

Subject to certain exceptions¹ a non-contentious business² agreement may be sued and recovered on or set aside in the same manner and on similar grounds as an agreement not relating to the remuneration of a solicitor³.

If on any assessment of costs⁴ the agreement is relied on by the solicitor and objected to by the client⁵ as unfair or unreasonable, the costs officer may inquire into the facts and certify them to the court, and if from that certificate it appears just to the court that the agreement should be set aside or the amount payable under it reduced, the court may so order and give such consequential directions as it thinks fit⁶.

Where an agreement provides for a solicitor's remuneration to be by reference to an hourly rate and on assessment the client objects to the amount of the costs while not alleging that the agreement is unfair or unreasonable, the costs officer may inquire into the number of hours worked by the solicitor and whether that number was excessive⁷.

The amount payable under an agreement cannot be included in a cash account on the assessment of other bills under an order for assessment⁸.

Subject to rules of court, upon every assessment of costs¹ with respect to any contentious business the costs officer may have regard, in determining the remuneration of the solicitor, to the skill, labour and responsibility involved in the business done by him². Similarly, in determining the remuneration of a recognised body³ the costs officer must have regard to the skill, labour and responsibility which the business involved on the part of any solicitor being an officer or employee of the body⁴.

945. Form of agreement.

A solicitor is entitled by statute¹ to make a written agreement² (called a 'contentious business agreement')³ with his client, as to his remuneration in respect of any contentious business⁴ done or to be done by him, providing that he is remunerated by a gross sum, or by reference to an hourly rate, or by a salary, or otherwise, and whether at a higher or lower rate than that at which he would otherwise have been entitled to be remunerated⁵.

To bind the client the agreement must be signed⁶ by him⁷. It may be contained in a letter⁸ or any other document⁹ provided that all the terms of the agreement which relate to the remuneration appear in it and are sufficiently specific¹⁰ and the intention of the parties is clearly shown¹¹.

1 Ie under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 59: see the text and notes 2-5.

947. Effect of contentious business agreements.

A contentious business agreement¹ does not affect the amount of, or any rights or remedies for the recovery of, any costs² payable by the client³ to, or to the client by, any person other than the solicitor, and that person may, unless it is otherwise agreed, require the costs to be assessed according to the rules for their assessment for the time being in force⁴. Subject to the statutory provisions⁶ the costs of the solicitor in any case where a contentious business agreement has been made will not be subject to assessment or (except in the case of an agreement which provides for remuneration by reference to an hourly rate) to the statutory requirements⁷ for signature and delivery of a bill before any action can be commenced⁸.

948. Enforcement of agreement.

No action may be brought¹ on any contentious business agreement². However on an application to the court³ by any person who:

- 1383 (1) is a party to the agreement or a representative of such a party⁴; or
- 1384 (2) is or is alleged to be liable to pay or is or claims to be entitled to be paid the costs⁵ due or alleged to be due in respect of the business to which the agreement relates⁶, the court may enforce or set aside the agreement and determine every question as to its validity and effect⁷.

If on any such application the court is of the opinion that the agreement is in all respects fair and reasonable it may enforce it⁸. If it is of the opinion that the agreement is in any respect unfair or unreasonable it may set it aside and order the costs covered by it to be assessed as if it had never been made⁹. In any case it may make such order as to the costs of the application as it thinks fit¹⁰.

If the business covered by the agreement¹¹ is business done or to be done in any action, a client¹² may apply to the costs officer of the court for the agreement to be examined¹³. The costs officer must examine the agreement and must either allow it or, if he is of the opinion that the agreement is unfair or unreasonable, require the opinion of the court to be taken on it¹⁴ and the court may allow the agreement or reduce the amount payable under it or set it aside and order the costs covered by it to be assessed as if it had never been made¹⁵.

The court may order a bill to be delivered so as to have material before it on which to determine whether the agreement is fair and reasonable¹⁶.

Where a contentious business agreement provides for the remuneration of the solicitor to be by reference to an hourly rate, if on the assessment of any costs the agreement is relied on by the solicitor and the client objects to the amount of the costs (but does not allege that the agreement is unfair or unreasonable), the costs officer may inquire into the number of hours worked by the solicitor and whether that number was excessive¹⁷.

318 (2) in relation to an agreement under which no business has been done in any such court and under which more than £50 is payable, the High Court (s 61(6)(b)); and

319 (3) in relation to an agreement under which no business has been done in any such court and under which not more than £50 is payable, any county court which would, but for the provisions

949. Contentious business agreements by certain representatives.

Where the client¹ who makes a contentious business agreement² makes it as a representative³ of the person whose property will be chargeable with the whole or part of the amount payable under the agreement, the agreement must be laid before a costs officer of the court⁴ before payment⁵.

The costs officer must examine the agreement and may either allow it, or, if he is of the opinion that it is unfair or unreasonable, require the opinion of the court to be taken on it; and the court may allow the agreement or reduce the amount payable under it or set it aside and order the costs⁶ covered by it to be assessed as if it had never been made⁷.

A client who makes a contentious business agreement and pays the whole or any part of the amount payable under it without it being allowed by the officer or by the court is liable at any time to account to the person whose property is so charged with the whole or any part of the amount so paid or the sum so charged; and the solicitor who accepts the payment may be ordered by the court to refund the amount received by him⁸.

950. The effect of death, incapability or change of solicitor.

If the solicitor dies or becomes incapable of acting after doing some of the business under a contentious business agreement¹ but before he has wholly performed it², any party to, or the representative of any party to, the agreement may apply³ to the court⁴ and the court has the same jurisdiction as to enforcing or setting aside the agreement⁵ as it would have had if the solicitor had not died or become incapable of acting⁶. Notwithstanding that it thinks the agreement fair and reasonable, the court may direct the costs officer to ascertain the value of the work done under the agreement having regard, upon assessment, to the terms of the agreement⁷.

The same principle applies when the client⁸ changes his solicitor⁹ before the completion of the work¹⁰, but in this case, if an order is made for the assessment of the amount due to the solicitor in respect of the business done under the agreement, the court must direct the costs officer to have regard to the circumstances under which the change of solicitor has taken place and unless the costs officer is of the opinion that there has been no default, negligence, improper delay or other conduct on the part of the solicitor¹¹ affording the client reasonable ground for changing his solicitor, he must not allow to the solicitor the full amount of the remuneration agreed to be paid to him¹².

951. Effect on contentious business agreement of supervening incapacity of recognised body to act for client.

If, after some business has been done under a contentious business agreement¹ made between a recognised body² and a client³ but before the body has wholly performed it, the body ceases to be capable of wholly performing it by reason of one of the following events, namely:

- 1385 (1) the body ceases (for any reason) to be a recognised body⁴;
- 1386 (2) a relevant insolvency event occurs in relation to the body⁵; or
- 1387 (3) the client terminates the retainer or employment of the body in favour of another recognised body or a solicitor⁶, then the following provisions apply⁷. Any party to, or the representative of any party to, the agreement may apply to the court⁸, and the court has the same jurisdiction as to enforcing the agreement so far as it has been performed, or setting it aside, as the court would have had if the recognised body were still capable of wholly performing it⁹.

Notwithstanding that it is of the opinion that the agreement is in all respects fair and reasonable, the court may order the amount due in respect of business under the agreement to be ascertained by assessment, and in that case:

- 1388 (a) the costs officer, in ascertaining that amount, must have regard so far as may be to the terms of the agreement; and
- 1389 (b) payment of the amount found by him to be due may be enforced in the same manner as if the agreement had been wholly performed¹⁰.

952 Re-opening the agreement

NOTE 7--Amendment made by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 57(e) in force 1 January 2010: SI 2009/3250.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(iv) Conditional Fee Agreements and Litigation Funding Agreements/953. Conditional fee agreements.

(iv) Conditional Fee Agreements and Litigation Funding Agreements

953. Conditional fee agreements.

A conditional fee agreement is an agreement with a person providing advocacy or litigation services which provides for his fees and expenses, or any part of them, to be payable only in specified circumstances¹. A conditional fee agreement which satisfies all of the following conditions applicable to it is not unenforceable by reason only of its being a conditional fee agreement; but any other conditional fee agreement is unenforceable².

The following conditions are applicable to every conditional fee agreement:

- 1390 (1) it must be in writing;
- 1391 (2) it must not relate to proceedings³ which cannot be the subject of an enforceable conditional fee agreement; and
- 1392 (3) it must comply with such requirements (if any) as may be prescribed by the Lord Chancellor⁴.

The following conditions also apply where a conditional fee agreement provides for a success fee⁵:

- 1393 (a) it must relate to proceedings of a description specified by order made by the Lord Chancellor;
- 1394 (b) it must state the percentage by which the amount of the fees which would be payable if it were not a conditional fee agreement is to be increased; and
- 1395 (c) that percentage must not exceed the percentage specified in relation to the description of proceedings to which the agreement relates by order made by the Lord Chancellor⁶.

A solicitor acting under a conditional fee agreement must explain certain information⁷ both at the outset and, when appropriate, as the matter progresses⁸.

The court will not assess any additional liability⁹ in relation to conditional fee arrangements until the conclusion of the proceedings, or the part of the proceedings, to which the funding arrangement relates¹⁰. Once such proceedings have concluded the court may make a summary assessment¹¹ of all the costs, including any additional liability, an order for detailed assessment¹² of the additional liability but a summary assessment of the other costs, or an order for detailed assessment¹³.

1 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(2)(a) (substituted by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 27(1)).

2 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(1) (as substituted: see note 1). Proceedings which cannot be the subject of an enforceable conditional fee agreement are:

325 (1) criminal proceedings, apart from proceedings under the Environmental Protection Act 1990; and

- 326 (2) proceedings under any one or more of the Matrimonial Causes Act 1973, the Adoption and Children Act 2002, the Domestic Proceedings and Magistrates' Courts Act 1978, the Matrimonial and Family Proceedings Act 1984 Pt III, the Children Act 1989 Pts I, II and IV, the Family Law Act 1996 Pt 4 and Pt 4A, the Civil Partnership Act 2004 Pt 2 Chapter 2 and Schs 5-7 and the inherent jurisdiction in the High Court in relation to children (Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58A(1), (2) (added by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 27(1) and amended by the Adoption and Children Act 2002 Sch 3 para 80, the Civil Partnership Act 2004 Sch 27 para 138 and the Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007 Sch 2 para 2)).

See also CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1830 et seq.

3 'Proceedings' includes any sort of proceedings for resolving disputes (and not just proceedings in court) whether commenced or contemplated: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58A(4) (as added: see note 2).

5 A conditional fee agreement provides for a success fee if it provides for the amount of any fees to which it applies to be increased in specified circumstances above the amount which would be payable if it were not payable only in specified circumstances: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 1). A costs order made in proceedings may, subject in the case of court proceedings to rules of court, include provision requiring the payment under a conditional fee agreement which provides for a success fee: s 58A(6) (as added: see note 2). Rules of court may make provision with respect to the assessment of any costs which include fees payable under a conditional fee agreement (including one which provides for a success fee: s 58A(7) (as so added)). As to claims for a success fee see the CPR 44.16, 45.11; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1836. See also Gloucestershire County Council v Evans [2008] EWCA Civ 21, [2008] 1 WLR 1883.

6 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(4) (as substituted (see note 1); amended by SI 2005/3429). Before making an order under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(4) the Lord Chancellor must consult certain persons: see s 58A(5) (as added (see note 2) and amended by SI 2005/3429). All proceedings which under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58 can be the subject of an enforceable conditional fee agreement, except proceedings under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 s 82 (see NUISANCE vol 78 (2010) PARAS 210-212, 226), are proceedings specified for the purposes of head (a) in the text: Conditional Fee Agreements Order 2000, SI 2000/823, art 3. In relation to such proceedings the percentage specified for the purposes of head (c) in the text is 100%: art 4.

7 The solicitor must explain the following information:

327 (1) the circumstances in which the client may be liable for the solicitor's costs and whether payment will be sought from the client (Solicitors' Code of Conduct 2007 r 2.03(2)(a));

328 (2) any assessment that will apply if seeking payment from the client (r 2.03(2)(b)); and

954. Litigation funding agreements.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. A litigation funding agreement is an agreement under which a person (the 'funder') agrees to fund (in whole or in part) the provision of advocacy or litigation services (by someone other than the funder) to another person (the 'litigant') and the litigant agrees to pay a sum to the funder in specified circumstances². A litigation funding agreement which satisfies all of the relevant conditions³ is not unenforceable by reason only of its being a litigation funding agreement⁴.

The following conditions are applicable to a litigation funding agreement:

- 1396 (1) the funder must be a person, or person of a description, prescribed⁵ by the Lord Chancellor;
- 1397 (2) the agreement must be in writing;
- 1398 (3) the agreement must not relate to proceedings which cannot be the subject of an enforceable conditional fee agreement⁶ or to proceedings of any such description as may be prescribed by the Lord Chancellor;
- 1399 (4) the agreement must comply with such requirements (if any) as may be so prescribed⁷;
- 1400 (5) the sum to be paid by the litigant must consist of any costs payable to him in respect of the proceedings to which the agreement relates together with an amount calculated by reference to the funder's anticipated expenditure in funding the provision of the services; and
- 1401 (6) that amount must not exceed such percentage of that anticipated expenditure as may be prescribed by the Lord Chancellor in relation to proceedings of the description to which the agreement relates⁸.

Rules of court may make provision with respect to the assessment of any costs which include fees payable under a litigation funding agreement⁹.

(v) Contingency Fees

955. Prohibition of contingency fees.

A solicitor must not enter into an arrangement to receive a contingency fee for work done in prosecuting or defending any contentious proceedings before a court in England and Wales, a British court-martial or an arbitrator except as permitted by statute or the common law¹. Nor may a solicitor enter into an arrangement to receive a contingency fee for work done in prosecuting or defending any contentious proceedings before an overseas court or arbitrator except as permitted by statute or common law².

In respect of any claim arising out of death or personal injury, a solicitor must not enter into an arrangement for the referral of clients with or act in association with any person whose business, or part of whose business is to make, support or prosecute claims arising as a result of death or personal injury and who in the course of such business, solicits or receives contingency fees³ in respect of such claims⁴.

(vi) Delivery of Bill of Costs

956. Necessity for delivery of bill of costs.

Subject to certain exceptions¹ no action² may be brought for the recovery of any costs due to a solicitor³ before the expiration of one month⁴ from the date on which a bill of those costs is delivered in accordance with the statutory requirements⁵. Where a bill is proved to have been delivered in compliance with those requirements it is not necessary in the first instance for the solicitor to prove the contents of the bill and it must be presumed until the contrary is shown to be a bill bona fide complying with the Solicitors Act 1974⁶.

The requirements as to the delivery of a bill apply only where the business to which the solicitor's claim relates was done by him in his professional capacity⁷. He need not deliver a bill where his claim relates to business of a different kind⁸.

1 If there is probable cause for believing that the party chargeable with the costs:

330 (1) is about to quit England and Wales, to become bankrupt or to compound with his creditors;

then, notwithstanding that one month has not expired from the delivery of the bill, the High Court may order that the solicitor be at liberty to commence an action to recover his costs and may order that those costs be assessed: Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(1)(a), (b). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(1) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 64(1), (2) which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs. As to assessment of costs see PARA 967 et seq.

Where the bill related wholly or partly to contentious business (see PARA 933 note 2) done in a county court and the amount of the bill does not exceed £5,000, the county court in which any part of the business was done may exercise the powers and duties of the High Court under ss 69-71: s 69(3) (amended by SI 1991/724). As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 835 note 6.

The provisions of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 69 do not apply in relation to a contentious business agreement made pursuant to s 59 (see PARA 945): s 60(1). The provisions of the Solicitors Act 1974 relating to remuneration do not apply to an Irish solicitor suing in England and Wales for work done in Ireland: Kernaghan v Wadeson (1855) 3 CLR 764.

3 In the Solicitors Act 1974 ss 68-71 'solicitor' includes the executors, administrators and assignees of a solicitor: s 68(3).

4 I.e. one calendar month: Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1. The month is reckoned exclusive of the date of delivery: Blunt v Heslop (1838) 8 Ad & El 577. Where the bill is posted the month begins on the day following that on which the bill will be delivered in the ordinary course of post: Browne v Black [1912] 1 KB 316, CA.

A statutory demand served within the one month period is not an 'action' within the meaning of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(1): Re a Debtor (No 8 of 1991) [1993] Ch 286, [1992] 4 All ER 301.

5 Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(1). As to the statutory requirements see s 69(2A), (2C) and PARA 962 et seq. The requirement cannot be avoided by taking a cheque from the client and suing on it: Martin Boston & Co (a firm) v Levy [1982] 3 All ER 193, [1982] 1 WLR 1434. Until a day to be appointed (ie the coming into force of the Legal Services Act 2007 s 13 (see PARA 509)) the statutory requirements also include in a case where the costs are due to a firm that the bill must be signed by a partner of the firm, either in his own name or in the name of the firm, or on his behalf by any employee of the firm authorised by him to sign: see Sch 22 para 14.

6 Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(2E) (added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 64(3)). Every application for an order for the assessment of a solicitor's bill or for the delivery of a solicitor's bill and for the delivery up by a solicitor of any documents in his possession, custody or power must be made in the matter of that solicitor: Solicitors Act 1974 s 72(1). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 72(1) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 67 which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs. Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(vi) Delivery of Bill of Costs/957. Disbursements.

957. Disbursements.

A distinction must be drawn between professional disbursements, that is to say those made by the solicitor in his professional capacity which must be included in the bill of costs, and payments made by him merely as agent or on behalf of the client which must be inserted in a separate cash account¹, and not in the bill of costs².

Professional disbursements include payments which are necessarily made by the solicitor in pursuance of his professional duty³ such as court fees⁴ or counsel's fees⁵ or which are sanctioned as professional disbursements by the general and established custom of the profession⁶. Payments which are made by the solicitor merely as a matter of convenience and not in pursuance of his professional duty and which are therefore to be regarded as advances to the client⁷ such as payments of money into court as security for costs⁸, payments of stamp duty⁹, capital transfer tax¹⁰ or other duties¹¹ and payments due from the client whether under a judgment¹² or a contract¹³ are not professional disbursements.

1 The order for assessment directs the solicitor to give credit for money received from or on account of the client and to charge all money paid on his behalf. This is the purpose of the cash account. It is considered in detail in Re Le Brasseur and Oakley [1896] 2 Ch 487, CA.

The cash account need not follow any particular form but should identify all payments and receipts. It need not, however, disclose the nature of the payments or the debts which they discharged as this information will be supplied on vouching the account: Re Harman (1915) 59 Sol Jo 351.

958. Form of bill of costs.

In contentious business¹ where the solicitor's remuneration is not the subject of a contentious business agreement² the bill of costs may, at the solicitor's option, be either for a gross sum or contain detailed items³ but at any time before service of a writ or other originating process for the recovery of the costs⁴ included in a gross sum bill⁵ and before the expiration of three months from delivery of the bill⁶ the party chargeable may require the solicitor to deliver a bill containing detailed items and if such a requirement is made the gross sum bill is of no effect⁷. If a gross sum bill is assessed⁸ these provisions do not prejudice any rules of court with respect to assessment and the solicitor must furnish the costs officer with such details of the costs covered by the bill as he may require⁹.

959. Contents of bill of costs.

A bill of costs¹ must contain sufficient information to enable the client to obtain advice as to its assessment² and the costs officer to assess it³. In relation to non-contentious business⁴ the gross sum bill must contain a summarised statement of the work done sufficient to inform the client what he is being asked to pay for⁵ although it is material to consider what information was in the client's possession⁶. The bill should show the whole of the fees, charges and disbursements in respect of the particular business done⁷. Each item should state its subject matter precisely and not in vague and general terms⁸. If the bill relates to contentious business⁹ the action or actions in question and the court concerned should be specified¹⁰.

The bill of costs may include costs payable in discharge of a liability properly incurred by the solicitor on behalf of the party to be charged with the bill (including counsel's fees¹¹) notwithstanding that those costs have not been paid before the delivery of the bill, but those costs must be described in the bill as not then paid and if the bill is assessed they will not be allowed unless paid before assessment is completed¹². Charges by anticipation in respect of costs to be incurred on distributing a trust fund may properly be included in a bill to be paid out of the trust fund before distribution¹³.

Value added tax, where applicable, must be clearly shown¹⁴.

The decision of the Court of Appeal in Cobbett v Wood does not go so far as to involve the inclusion in the bill of all relevant information as to all items; it appears that the decision in Haigh v Ousey is still good law. It is also settled that inter partes costs must be included in the bill of the solicitor to his own client: see note 7.

7 Cobbett v Wood [1908] 1 KB 590 at 594 (revsd [1908] 2 KB 420, CA) where the bill omitted all items of inter partes costs and charged extra costs only. See also Waller v Lacy (1840) 1 Man & G 54, 69; Pigot v Cadman (1857) 1 H & N 837. Where inter partes costs have been received from an opponent the items should be charged in the bill of the solicitor to his own client and credit for the sums received should be given in the cash account: see Waller v Lacy; Cobbett v Wood; Re Osborn and Osborn [1913] 3 KB 862, CA; Bury v Greenwood [1934] WN 119.

Similarly the charges of the London agent must be set out in detail: Re Pomeroy and Tanner (Solicitors) [1897] 1 Ch 284. See also McCullie v Butler [1962] 2 QB 309, [1961] 2 All ER 554 where charges incurred in employing a foreign agent (a Scottish solicitor) were taxable as disbursements and it was said that details of the circumstances requiring the employment of the foreign agent should be set out as well as a detailed charge for individual items. 11 As counsel's fees are not recoverable at law they do not constitute a legally binding debt from a client while they remain unpaid by the solicitor. 12 Solicitors Act 1974 s 67. Both requirements must be fulfilled. In Tearle & Co (a firm) v Sherring (29 October 1993, unreported) Wright J decided that he had the power to permit solicitors to amend their original bill of costs notwithstanding that they had not described certain disbursements as not then paid. He reached this view having considered the judgment of Farwell J in Re Grant Bulcraig and Co [1906] 1 Ch 124. The assessment is completed when every item of the bill has been dealt with: see Re Hildesheim [1914] 3 KB 841, CA. 960. Value added tax.

As persons supplying¹ professional services, solicitors are subject to value added tax and are liable to be registered² if at the end of any month the value of taxable supplies³ in the period of one year then ending has exceeded £67,000⁴ and to pay tax at the rate of 17.5% on the value of professional services rendered⁵.

In the case of civil proceedings and non-contentious business⁶ all bills of costs, fees and disbursements on which VAT is included must be divided into separate parts so as to show work done on a day-to-day basis before, on and after the date or dates from which any change in the rate of VAT takes effect⁷. Value added tax attributable to any disbursement must (except in the case of an inter partes bill where such tax is not claimed) be shown stating if it has been paid and must be indicated in a separate VAT column inserted to the left of the normal disbursement column⁸. General disbursements such as postage and fares which are normally treated as part of a solicitor's overheads must be charged with VAT⁹. The summary at the end of the bill must include additional columns for VAT on profit costs as allowed on assessment and VAT on disbursements so that the tax can be cast separately¹⁰.

VAT should not be included in a claim for costs in an inter partes bill of costs if the receiving party is able to recover it as input tax¹¹. Where there has been a change in the rate of VAT during the period to which the bill relates, it will be assumed that an election has been made to charge VAT at the lower rate¹². Value added tax attributable to any disbursement, such as an expert's report, must be shown (except in the case of an inter partes bill where VAT is not claimed) as a separate item in the receipt or voucher¹³.

Where a solicitor acts in litigation on his own behalf, even on a matter arising out of his practice, he is not treated for the purposes of VAT as having supplied services and therefore no VAT is chargeable on the bill of that solicitor¹⁴.

961. Delivery of bill in parts.

The whole bill of costs need not be delivered at once; there is no objection to a delivery in parts or, if the retainer is not an entire contract, to a delivery of successive bills relating to particular periods or particular groups of items, but if there is an entire contract successive bills which are intended to be separately enforceable may not be delivered unless the client consents or the matter is completed or a natural break has occurred¹. Where some part of the bill is given with proper detail and the remainder is not so given, costs have been recovered in respect of the items given with proper detail², and it seems that the proper question whether judgment may be recovered on part of a bill may turn on the proportions which the correct and incorrect parts bear to each other³, although such a ruling can hardly be maintained as a matter of principle where the assessment is under the Solicitors Act 1974⁴.

Separate bills relating to distinct transactions are not to be treated as one bill just because they are delivered together: Re Ward [1896] 2 Ch 31, CA. 3 See Blake v Hummel (1884) 51 LT 430; Re Pomeroy and Tanner (No 2) (1897) 76 LT 149.

4 A 'bill of costs' in the Solicitors Act 1974 refers to a complete bill (Ivimey v Marks (1847) 16 M & W 843; Storer & Co v Johnson (1890) 15 App Cas 203 at 207, HL; Cobbett v Wood [1908] 2 KB 420, CA) and although that complete bill may be composed of parts separately delivered, assessment under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 70 (see PARA 971 et seq) must be assessed of the whole. If therefore assessment of part of a bill under s 70 could not be obtained (and Storer & Co v Johnson is authority that it could not) the consequence should follow that a bill which is defective in part is in law defective as a whole. Subject to this, if a solicitor is willing to abandon the defective part, the remainder of the bill may be treated as a whole and assessed.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(vi) Delivery of Bill of Costs/962. Signature on bill of costs.

962. Signature on bill of costs.

A bill of costs must be signed by the solicitor¹ or on his behalf by an employee of the solicitor authorised by him to sign or enclosed in, or accompanied by, a letter which is so signed and refers to the bill². The signature may be an electronic signature³.

There is no statutory requirement that the signature must be in the full name of the firm but it is sensible so to sign: Bartletts de Reya v Byrne (1983) 127 Sol Jo 69, 133 NLJ 1101, CA; and see Smith v Brown (1831) 5 C & P 94; Owen v Scales (1842) 10 M & W 657. It is immaterial that the bill contains items of work done before the then partnership was constituted: Pilgrim v Hirschfeld (1863) 9 LT 288. The then partnership may sue in respect of such items as assignees of the old firm: Penley v Anstruther (1883) 52 LJ Ch 367. Where notice of assignment has not been given to the client a solicitor who did the work for the assignment may sign the bill and sue for the cost although the name of the new firm appears in the bill and also below his own signature: McClean v Weaver (1924) 41 TLR 47, CA. The Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(2A) has effect in relation to a bill of costs delivered by a recognised body by requiring that the bill must be signed on behalf of the recognised body by any manager or employee of the body authorised to do so or enclosed in, or accompanied by, a letter which is so signed and refers to the bill: see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 29 (substituted by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 115). As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3.

³ Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(2B) (as added: see note 2). For these purposes references to an electronic signature are to be read in accordance with the Communications Act 2003 s 7(2) (see TELECOMMUNICATIONS vol 97 (2010) PARA 20); Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(5) (added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 64(4)).

963. Name of person to be charged.

The bill of costs must clearly show the person who is to be charged otherwise he will not be liable upon it¹. It is immaterial whether his name appears on the face of the bill² or is contained in some writing connected with the bill³, for instance the envelope in which it was sent⁴ or the letter accompanying it⁵.

There is no custom by which when a solicitor is instructed through patent agents he must look to them and not to the client for his charges and a bill addressed to both the agents and the client sufficiently names the client, although it seems that the name of the client alone should be given as the party chargeable: Re Solicitors, Re Taxation of Costs (1935) 79 Sol Jo 49.

964. Mode of delivery of bill of costs.

The bill of costs must be delivered to the person to be charged with the bill personally¹ or to some person authorised to accept delivery on his behalf². It may be delivered to him personally³ or sent by post to him or left for him at his place of business⁴ or last known place of abode⁵ or to any address to which he may have directed letters to be sent⁶ or by means of an electronic communications network⁷ or by other means but in a form that nevertheless requires the use of apparatus by the recipient to render it intelligible, but that the party has indicated to the person making the delivery his willingness to accept delivery of a bill in the form and manner used⁸. An action brought on a bill of costs which fails to meet one or more of the statutory requirements does not necessarily have to be dismissed without consideration of the merits and where appropriate the court may allow delivery of a fresh bill⁹.

1 Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(2)(b), (2C)(a) (s 69(2)(b) substituted and s 69(2C)-(2F), (6) added by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 64(3)). See also Gridley v Austen (1849) 16 QB 504; Phipps v Daubney (1851) 16 QB 514, Ex Ch; Re Abbott (1861) 4 LT 576; Re Robertson (1889) 42 ChD 553. In the case of mortgage transactions the bill is commonly delivered to the mortgagor since he bears the costs (Re Robertson); but nonetheless the mortgagee as client is also entitled to have the bill of his costs delivered to him: Re Foster, Barnato v Foster [1920] 3 KB 306, CA. The bill of costs of a solicitor trustee or his firm may be delivered to his co-trustee: Re H P Davies & Son [1917] 1 Ch 216. The defence that no signed bill has been delivered is available only to the client but a person who has undertaken to pay or has guaranteed the payment of the costs may have them assessed under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 71(1) (see PARA 966); see Greening v Reeder (1892) 67 LT 28. As to the necessity for delivering a bill of costs see PARA 956; and as to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 835 note 6. Where a bill is proved to have been delivered in compliance with the requirements of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(2A), (2C), it is not necessary in the first instance for the solicitor to prove the contents of the bill and it is to be presumed, until the contrary is shown, to be a bill bona fide complying with the Solicitors Act 1974: s 69(2E) (as so added).

3 Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(2)(b), (2C)(a) (as substituted and added: see note 1). In the case of joint contractors delivery to one is sufficient, particularly where instructions have primarily been given by the person to whom the bill is delivered: Crowder v Shee (1808) 1 Camp 437; Finchett v How and Jarratt (1809) 2 Camp 275; Oxenham v Lemon (1823) 2 Dow & Ry KB 461; Kiteley v Scofield and Harvey (1842) 6 Jur 1059; Edwards v Lawless (1848) 6 CB 329; Mant v Smith (1859) 4 H & N 324.

5 Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(2)(b), (2C)(b) (as substituted and added: see note 1). If the bill is actually delivered it is a good delivery even though it was misdirected: Welsh v Silwell (1847) 11 Jur 471. An indication to any person for the purposes of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(2C)(c):

332 (1) must state the address to be used and must be accompanied by such other information as that person requires for the making of the delivery;

333 (2) may be modified or withdrawn at any time by a notice given to that person (s 69(2D) (as so added)).

A bill which is delivered as mentioned in s 69(2C)(c) is to be treated as having been delivered on the first working day after the day on which it was sent (unless the contrary is proved): s 69(2F) (as so added). For this purpose 'working day' means a day other than a Saturday, a Sunday, Christmas Day, Good Friday or a bank holiday in England and Wales under the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971: Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(6) (as substituted: see note 1).

965. Amendment of bill of costs.

For the purposes of assessment under the Solicitors Act 1974¹, the solicitor is, as a general rule, bound by his bill as delivered² and he is not entitled as of course to withdraw the bill delivered and substitute an amended one whether on the first bill he has overcharged³ or undercharged⁴ his client, although the court has power to give leave to amend the bill⁵ or to allow it to be withdrawn⁶. Leave will only be granted in special circumstances and where the solicitor has acted fairly towards the client, for instance where the solicitor informs the client that the first bill includes charges which cannot be sustained on assessment⁷ or offers to correct a mistake before an application to assess is made⁸. Where there has been an inadvertent error, the solicitor will be permitted to rectify the bill, for example by inserting or increasing the item unintentionally omitted or undercharged, subject perhaps to a condition that the incidence of the costs of the assessment be not altered by the amendment⁹, or by submitting a fresh bill where unpaid disbursements have not been so described or separately set out¹⁰. Where a lump sum is claimed in the bill in respect of a particular transaction, the solicitor may on assessment bring in particulars showing how it is made up¹¹ although a gross sum bill may not after three months from delivery be replaced¹² by a detailed bill for a higher sum¹³. In general a charge at an aggregate figure of which insufficient details have been given may not be increased upon amending the bill¹⁴.

1 The assessment under the Solicitors Act 1974 ss 70-71: see PARA 971 et seq. The rule does not apply to taxations (now assessments) on the indemnity basis, the bill of costs in such cases being susceptible to amendment at any time in any way and at any time before the taxation (now assessment) is concluded: Davis v Earl of Dysart (No 2) (1855) 21 Beav 124 at 132; affd (1856) 8 De GM & G 33. See also Sadd v Griffin [1908] 2 KB 510, CA. The rule has been held not to apply to a taxation (now assessment) ordered in an action by a solicitor for work done: see Lumsden v Shipcote Land Co [1906] 2 KB 433, CA, where the plaintiff delivered a second bill in place of an earlier lesser bill, and the court, having found for the plaintiff on liability, ordered that the amount of remuneration be referred to a taxing master as referee to consider both bills, as well as other matters in determining the amount properly payable. See note 5.

The reason for the rule is to prevent any attempt being made by a solicitor to impose on his client who does not know what the proper charges are by sending in a bill which could not stand taxation (now assessment) and then when taxation is insisted upon or threatened, which might result in the solicitor being liable for the cost of taxation (now assessment), sending in another bill which he knows can stand taxation (now assessment): see Re Thompson at 448; Re Louch at 65.

4 Re Wells (1845) 8 Beav 416; Re Walters (1845) 9 Beav 299. See also Re Andrews (1853) 17 Beav 510. Where a bill has been prepared in a great hurry and is intended by the solicitor only as an estimate, leave to amend may be given but subject to such leave being given the bill is assessable as delivered: Re Gaitskell (1845) 1 Ph 576. It is a question of fact whether the solicitor has delivered a memorandum of his charges or a bill of costs (Re Smith and Son (1901) 45 Sol Jo 469) and a solicitor who has delivered an explanatory memorandum of charges by anticipation may be allowed to amend (Re Paice and Cross (1914) 58 Sol Jo 593). Where solicitors through inadvertence omitted certain words from their bill the court permitted an amendment of the delivered bill rather than requiring the solicitors to withdraw the bill and submit a fresh one: Tearle & Co (a firm) v Sherring (29 October 1993, unreported) per Wright J; and see Re Grant Bulcraig & Co [1906] 1 Ch 124.

5 Re Thompson (1885) 30 ChD 441 at 450, CA; Re Stead, Smith v Stead [1913] 1 Ch 240. The client's consent to the amendment is not necessarily sufficient: Re Heather (1870) 5 Ch App 694. If a second bill is delivered and the solicitor obtains judgment for the costs covered by it without his opponent applying for detailed assessment so that an application for assessment can no longer be made without proof of special circumstances (see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(3); and PARA 974) the court may nevertheless direct moderation under its inherent jurisdiction and the rule prohibiting amendment does not apply to moderation: Lumsden v Shipcote Land Co [1906] 2 KB 433, CA. If in contentious business a solicitor delivers a gross sum bill and the party chargeable requires the delivery of an itemised bill, the gross sum bill ceases to be of effect (see PARA 958) and the solicitor can recover the full amount of the itemised bill even if it exceeds the previous gross sum bill (see PARA 958 note 7).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(vi) Delivery of Bill of Costs/966. Order for delivery of bill of costs.

966. Order for delivery of bill of costs.

The jurisdiction of the High Court to order the delivery by a solicitor¹ of a bill of costs² extends to cases in which no business has been done by him in the High Court³ and the county court has the same jurisdiction as the High Court to make orders for the delivery of a bill of costs where the bill relates wholly or partly to contentious business⁴ done by the solicitor in that county court⁵. Similarly, both the High Court and county court may make orders for the delivery up of, or otherwise in relation to, any documents in the possession, custody or power of the solicitor⁶. The jurisdiction of the High Court to make such an order rests initially in the inherent jurisdiction of the court over its own officers, this being confirmed by the wording of the Solicitors Act 1974⁷.

If a solicitor makes no claim for costs he will not be ordered to deliver a bill of costs⁸, and since an order for the delivery of a bill obliges the solicitor to deliver a cash account of relevant monetary transactions, if he makes no claim for costs he will not be ordered to deliver a cash account⁹ although he will still be accountable like any other agent for his principal's money. A solicitor may not himself maintain a defence that the employment was illegal¹⁰ nor can he resist on the ground of delay while he remains able to prepare the requisite bill¹¹.

Where any person other than the client¹² is or was liable to pay the bill¹³ or the costs are to be paid by a trustee or personal representative¹⁴, the person liable to pay or any person interested in any property out of which the trustee or personal representative has paid or is entitled to pay the bill may apply for an assessment¹⁵ and if the court orders an assessment it may order the solicitor to deliver a copy of the bill to the applicant upon payment of the cost of the copy¹⁶.

966 Order for delivery of bill of costs

NOTE 13--Amendment made by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 66 in force 1 January 2010: SI 2009/3250.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(vii) Assessment of Costs/A. INTRODUCTION/967. Scrutiny of a solicitor's remuneration.

(vii) Assessment of Costs

A. INTRODUCTION

967. Scrutiny of a solicitor's remuneration.

A solicitor is remunerated for any services he provides in two ways:

- 1402 (1) by his own client, even if the client is repaid by a third person¹; and
- 1403 (2) by payment funded as part of the Community Legal Service².

A contract with the Legal Aid Commission³ may provide for remuneration to be assessed by the court⁴.

Under the Civil Procedure Rules 1998 (which replaced the former rules relating to the taxation of costs)⁵ the court may make a 'summary assessment' of costs or a 'detailed assessment'⁶. A summary assessment is the procedure by which the court, when making an order about costs, orders payment of a sum of money instead of fixed costs or detailed assessment⁷. A detailed assessment is the procedure by which the amount of costs is decided by a costs officer under the relevant provisions⁸.

Provisions are also made for the assessment of costs under the Criminal Procedure Rules 2005⁹.

The certificate of the costs officer by whom any bill has been assessed must, unless it is set aside or altered by the court, be final as to the amount of the costs covered by it, and the court may make such order in relation to the certificate as it thinks fit, including, in a case where the retainer is not disputed, an order that judgment be entered for the sum certified to be due with costs¹⁰.

On every assessment of costs¹¹ in respect of any contentious business the costs officer may, in determining the remuneration of the solicitor, have regard to the skill, labour and responsibility involved in the business done by him¹².

1 As to remuneration generally see PARA 931 et seq.

2 See LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 41 et seq. As to the Community Legal Services see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 31 et seq.

4 See the Community Legal Service (Funding) Order 2007, SI 2007/2441, art 6; and LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 74 et seq. If the court makes a costs order against a legally represented party and the party is not present when the order is made the party's solicitor must notify his client in writing of the costs order no later than seven days after the solicitor receives notice of the order: see CPR 44.2; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1745. As to the detailed assessment procedure where costs are payable out of the Community Legal Service Fund see CPR 47.17; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1794.

8 CPR 43.4. The relevant provisions mentioned in the text are CPR Pt 47 (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1779 et seq). For these purposes 'costs officer' means a costs judge, a district judge and an authorised court officer: CPR 43.2(1)(c). 'Authorised court officer' means any officer of a county court, a district registry, the Principal Registry of the Family Division or the Supreme Court Costs Office, whom the Lord Chancellor has authorised to assess costs: CPR 43.2(1)(d). Where a costs officer is in the course of assessing a bill of costs, he may request the costs officer of any other court to assist him in assessing any part of the bill, and the costs officer so requested must assess that part of the bill and must return the bill with his opinion on it to the costs officer making the request: Solicitors Act 1974 s 72(2). Where such a request is made the costs officer who is requested to assess part of a bill must have such powers, and may take such fees, in respect of that part of the bill, as he would have or be entitled to take if he were assessing that part of the bill in pursuance of an order of the court of which he is an officer; and the costs officer who made the request must not take any fee in respect of that part of the bill: s 72(3). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 72(2), (3) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 67(c), (d) which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs and the replacement of the taxing officer with the costs officer. As to assessment of costs see PARA 967 et seq.

11 This is subject to the provisions of any rules of court. The Solicitors Act 1974 s 66(b) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 62(b), (c) which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs.

12 Solicitors Act 1974 s 66(b). As from a day to be appointed this also includes the business done by any employee of the solicitor who is an authorised person: see s 66(b) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 62(e)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

B. JURISDICTION

968. Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

The power of the Supreme Court to order assessment¹ of a solicitor's bill of costs² rests firstly on its original or inherent jurisdiction over its officers³, secondly on the jurisdiction under the Solicitors Act 1974 and thirdly on the jurisdiction of the court in dealing with contested claims⁴.

Where the statutory jurisdiction is inapplicable, as where the solicitor has obtained judgment on the bill and there are no special circumstances⁵, or more than 12 months have elapsed since delivery of a bill and there are no special circumstances, the court will only exercise its inherent jurisdiction to avoid a clear injustice⁶ but in any event the inherent jurisdiction of the court is curtailed by statute at least so far as it is negative in content⁷.

1 The power to order delivery of a bill and the power to order assessment of a bill are distinct (see the Solicitors Act 1974 ss 68, 70) but submitting to an order to deliver a bill may by conduct involve the solicitor in submitting also to an order for assessment (see Re Palace Restaurants Ltd [1914] 1 Ch 492, CA). As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. Every application for an order for the assessment of a solicitor's bill or for the delivery of a solicitor's bill and for the delivery up by a solicitor of any documents in his possession, custody or power must be made in the matter of that solicitor: Solicitors Act 1974 s 72(1). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 72(1) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 67 which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs. As to assessment of costs see PARA 967 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 835 note 6.

3 The inherent jurisdiction of the court is preserved by the Solicitors Act 1974 s 50(2).

4 Re Park, Cole v Park (1888) 41 ChD 326 at 332 per Stirling J.

5 As to special circumstances see PARA 975 et seq.

7 Thus the inherent power referred to in the Solicitors Act 1974 s 50 is subject to the provisions of s 70(4) (power to order assessment after the expiration of 12 months from payment of the bill is not exercisable). The inherent jurisdiction is therefore to that extent displaced by the statutory provisions: Harrison v Tew [1990] 2 AC 523, [1990] 1 All ER 321, HL.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(vii) Assessment of Costs/B. JURISDICTION/969. Extent of statutory jurisdiction.

969. Extent of statutory jurisdiction.

The statutory jurisdiction of the court under the Solicitors Act 1974¹ extends over all bills relating to business transacted by a solicitor in his professional capacity² but not over bills relating to business transacted by him in any other capacity³. Where the solicitor acts in a professional capacity it is immaterial whether the bill relates to contentious or non-contentious business⁴ or as regards contentious business whether the business was civil or criminal⁵ or parliamentary⁶. Assessment may also be ordered of an agency bill between a country solicitor and his London agent⁷.

1 The court's jurisdiction under the Solicitors Act 1974 to order assessment extends to the High Court and in appropriate cases to the county court: see s 61(6), and PARA 948 note 3; s 69(3), and PARA 970; s 73(1), and PARAS 1011, 1019; and s 74(1), and PARA 970. The jurisdiction arises under s 61(2)(b) (assessment as if contentious business agreement had never been made: see PARA 948), s 61(5) (re-opening of such an agreement: see PARA 952), s 63(2) (death, incapacity or change of solicitor on such an agreement: see PARA 950), s 69(1) (party chargeable about to quit England and Wales, go bankrupt etc: see PARA 956), s 70(1), (2) (assessment on application by party chargeable or solicitor: see PARA 971), s 71(1), (3) (assessment on application by third party: see PARA 973), and s 73(1)(b) (charging orders: see PARAS 1011, 1021).

Thus taxation (now assessment) was ordered where the bill related to a solicitor's charges as an election agent (Re Osborne (1858) 25 Beav 353, where on the facts the work required was of a legal nature and the relationship of solicitor and client subsisted; and see Re Andrews (1853) 17 Beav 510) but not as a canvassing agent (Re Oliver (1867) 36 LJ Ch 261; and see Re Parker (1882) 21 ChD 408, CA), or where it related to the fees for holding a court leet as a steward of a manor (Luxmore v Lethbridge (1822) 5 B & Ald 898) even though the ordinary fees as steward of the manor were not taxable (Re Ward, Allen v Aldridge (1844) 5 Beav 401; and see Re Corsellis, Lawton v Elwes (1887) 34 ChD 675, CA; Re Jennings (a solicitor) [1903] 1 Ch 906).

970. Jurisdiction of a county court.

Where the amount of a solicitor's bill of costs¹ relating wholly or partly to contentious business² does not exceed £5,000, a county court in which any part of that business was done may exercise and perform the powers and duties of the High Court³ in respect of the assessment of the bill⁴. A county court also has a limited jurisdiction in respect of the assessment of a bill of costs where there has been a contentious business agreement⁵.

No person other than a legal representative⁶ or a person exercising a right of audience or a right to conduct litigation⁷ is entitled to have or recover any fee or reward for acting on behalf of the party in proceedings in a county court⁸. The remuneration of a solicitor in respect of contentious business done by him in a county court is regulated by the provisions of the Solicitors Act 1974⁹. The district judge of the county court is the costs officer¹⁰ and except in so far as rules of court may otherwise provide¹¹ the amount which may be allowed on the assessments of any costs or bill of costs in respect of any item relating to county court proceedings may not exceed the amount which could have been allowed in respect of that item inter partes in those proceedings having regard to the amount of the claim and of any counterclaim¹².

A claim for an order under the Solicitors Act 1974 Pt 3 for the assessment of costs payable to a solicitor by his client which relates to contentious business done in a county court and is within the financial limit of the county court's jurisdiction specified in s 69(3) may be made in that county court and in every other case must be made to the High Court: CPR 67.3(1). As from a day to be appointed this definition is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 para 61 and 'legal representative' means a person who, for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, is an authorised person in relation to an activity which constitutes the exercise of a right of audience or the conduct of litigation (within the meaning of that Act). C. RIGHT TO ORDER FOR ASSESSMENT

971. Persons entitled to assessment.

Assessment of a solicitor's bill to his own client¹ under the Solicitors Act 1974² may be ordered³, subject to various conditions being met, on the application of the party chargeable⁴, the solicitor⁵ or a third party⁶.

If the party chargeable⁷ with a solicitor's bill makes an application to the High Court before the expiration of one month from the delivery of the bill, the court must order that the bill be assessed⁸, without requiring any sum to be paid into court⁹, and that no action be commenced on the bill until the assessment is completed¹⁰.

If no application is made within one month¹¹ then on an application being made by the solicitor¹² or the party chargeable with the bill¹³, the court may on such terms as it thinks fit¹⁴ order that the bill be assessed and that no action be commenced on the bill, and that any action already commenced be stayed until the assessment is completed¹⁵.

Where a person other than the party chargeable with the bill¹⁶ has paid, or is or was liable to pay a bill either to the solicitor or to the party chargeable, that person¹⁷ may apply to the High Court for an order for assessment of the bill as if he were the party chargeable with it and the court may make the same order as if that had been the case¹⁸.

5 A solicitor has no right to insist that his bill be assessed under the Solicitors Act 1974 or not at all, eg when the amount payable can be ascertained in bankruptcy or on a liquidation: Re Palace Restaurants Ltd [1914] 1 Ch 492, CA; Re Woods, ex p Ditton (1880) 13 ChD 318, CA. This provision deals only with taxation (now assessment) as between a solicitor and own client, not inter partes: Re Morris (1872) 27 LT 554; Re Grundy, Kershaw & Co (1881) 17 ChD 108; Re Cowdell (1883) 52 LJ Ch 246.

Persons liable to pay include a purchaser (Re Morecroft (1885) 29 Sol Jo 471, CA), a lessee who has agreed in writing to pay the lessor's costs (see the Costs of Leases Act 1958 s 1; Re Negus [1895] 1 Ch 73; Re Gray [1901] 1 Ch 239), a mortgagor (Painter v Lindsell (1840) 8 Scott 453; Re Lees (1844) 5 Beav 410; Re Thomas (1844) 8 Beav 145; Re Longbotham & Sons [1904] 2 Ch 152, CA) or his trustee in bankruptcy (Re Allingham (1886) 32 ChD 36, CA), or a subsequent incumbrancer (Re Taylor (1854) 18 Beav 165; Re Jessop (1863) 32 Beav 406; and as to the liability of the next friend of a minor for costs see also CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1429) as regards a vendor's, lessor's or mortgagee's costs. Also liable to pay may be a person obliged to sue in the name of another as regards the nominal claimant's costs (Re Masters (1835) 4 Dowl 18); any party to a compromise, as regards costs which he has agreed to pay as between solicitor and own client (Balme v Paver (1821) Jac 305; Vincent v Venner (1833) 1 My & K 212; Sadler v Palfreyman (1834) 1 Ad & El 717; Re Hartley (1861) 30 Beav 620; Re Cohen and Cohen [1905] 2 Ch 137, CA; Hirst and Capes v Fox [1908] AC 416, HL; see also Re Hulbert and Crowe (1894) 71 LT 748); and generally any person who is legally liable to pay the bill as such (Sadler v Palfreyman (agreement to pay costs); Re Shrewsbury and Leicester Rly Co, Re Vardy (1851) 20 LJ Ch 325 (liquidator); Re Mills (1885) 79 LT Jo 162, DC (supplying funds for convict's defence)). Assessment will not be ordered on the application of a ratepayer, where the bill is payable out of the rates (see Re Barber, ex p Manchester and Leeds Rly Co (1845) 14 M & W 720), or of a person who has voluntarily paid the bill (Langford v Nott (1820) 1 Jac & W 291; Re Becke and Flower (1844) 5 Beav 406). A person who has agreed to pay a fixed sum for costs cannot obtain assessment (Re Morris (1872) 27 LT 554; Ingrams v Sykes [1987] NLJ Rep 1135, CA), nor where there has been no delivery of any bill and therefore no payment within the Solicitors Act 1974 and no written agreement (Re Heritage, ex p Docker (1878) 3 QBD 726).

7 If the solicitor is retained to act on behalf of several persons in the same matter and the retainer is separate, each is entitled to have the whole bill assessed, even though only liable for a portion of the whole amount: Re Salaman [1894] 2 Ch 201, CA; Re Colquhoun, ex p Ford (1854) 5 De GM & G 35; see also Re Allen, Davies v Chatwood (1879) 11 ChD 244. Where the retainer is joint, all should, if possible concur; but the court will make the order on the application of one of the persons chargeable if the other refuses or by his absence is unable to join: Re Lewin (1853) 16 Beav 608; Re Ilderton (1863) 33 Beav 201; see also Margerum v Sandiford (1791) 3 Bro CC 233; Re Schelingser, ex p Watts (1836) 1 Deac 588; Re Chilcote (1839) 1 Beav 421; Lockhart v Hardy (1841) 4 Beav 224; Re Hair (1847) 10 Beav 187 (solicitor obtained judgment against one partner but others allowed to obtain an order for taxation (now assessment)); Re Dawson and Bryan (1860) 28 Beav 605. 8 Re Brockman [1909] 2 Ch 170 at 174, CA. The solicitor has no right to an order for assessment until after one month has expired from the date of delivering the bill, except that he may apply in particular circumstances under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 69(1) for leave to commence an action within that period, and the court has power on that application to order the bill to be assessed: see PARA 956.

972. The costs to be assessed.

An order for the assessment of a bill of costs made on an application by the party chargeable with the bill may, if he so requests, be an order for the assessment of the profit costs¹ covered by the bill². The court may otherwise order the assessment of all the costs, or of the profit costs, or of the costs other than profit costs, and, where part of the costs is not to be assessed, may allow an action to be commenced or continued for that part of the costs³.

1 'Profit costs' means costs other than counsel's fees or costs paid or payable in the discharge of a liability incurred by the solicitor on behalf of the party chargeable: Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(12). As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 835 note 6.

NOTES 2, 3--Amendments made by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 65(d), (e) in force 1 January 2010: SI 2010/3250.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(vii) Assessment of Costs/C. RIGHT TO ORDER FOR ASSESSMENT/973. Application by third parties and persons interested.

973. Application by third parties and persons interested.

If the applicant is a third party or a person interested¹, the right to obtain an assessment is similar to that of the party chargeable², except that:

- 1404 (1) no order will be made for the assessment of a bill of costs which has already been assessed unless there are special circumstances³;
- 1405 (2) where a third party is the applicant the court may take into account special circumstances affecting him but not affecting the party chargeable⁴; and
- 1406 (3) where a person interested is the applicant the court must have regard to the extent and nature of his interest⁵.

In any such case if assessment of the bill is ordered the court may order a copy of the bill to be delivered to the applicant upon his paying for the costs of that copy⁶.

Where a trustee or personal representative has become liable to pay the bill of a solicitor, any person interested in the property out of which the trustee or representative has paid or is entitled to pay the bill may apply to the court which may order that the bill be assessed on such terms, if any, as it thinks fit; and that such payments in respect of the amount found to be due to or by a solicitor and in respect of the costs of the assessment be made to or by the applicant, to or by the solicitor, or to or by the executor, administrator or trustee, as it thinks fit⁷. This provision enables a creditor to apply for the assessment of an executor's bill paid out of the deceased debtor's estate⁸, but a trustee in bankruptcy is not a 'trustee' within this provision so as to enable the bankrupt to apply for assessment⁹. An applicant who has paid money to the solicitor has the same right to be paid by the trustee or personal representative chargeable with the bill as the solicitor had¹⁰.

974. When special circumstances must be shown.

In certain instances the party chargeable is not entitled to an order to assess the bill of costs¹ without showing 'special circumstances'². Orders for assessment under the Solicitors Act 1974³ may not be made except in special circumstances on applications made after:

- 1407 (1) 12 months have expired⁴ from the delivery of the bill⁵ or, if the bill is being delivered in parts⁶, from the delivery of the last part⁷;
- 1408 (2) a judgment has been obtained for recovery of costs covered by the bill⁸; or
- 1409 (3) the bill has been paid⁹ but 12 months have not elapsed since payment was made¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 835 note 6.

2 The fact that a bill has been delivered some while ago and has not been objected to is evidence that the charges in it are reasonable: Re Park, Cole v Park (1888) 41 ChD 326 at 333; affd (1889) 41 ChD 336 at 338, CA. Paying a bill is an admission that its amount is reasonable: Re Harding (1847) 10 Beav 250 at 252. It was the intention of the statute that a judgment should not be a bar to an application for taxation (now assessment) where the judgment did not involve any inquiry into the amount of the debt before costs: Re Gedye (1852) 15 Beav 254 at 259. These judicial statements show reasons for the three instances in which a party chargeable is required to prove special circumstances: see PARA 975.

3 The court may investigate particular charges, or the charges as a whole, either after judgment (Lumsden v Shipcote Land Co [1906] 2 KB 433, CA) or after the 12 months from delivery have expired (Jones & Son v Whitehouse [1918] 2 KB 61, CA) by referring the matter to a costs officer under the court's inherent jurisdiction but without requiring proof of such 'special circumstances' as would comply with the requirements of the statute.

975. What constitutes special circumstances.

In determining whether in any particular case there are such special circumstances as justify the making of an order for the assessment of costs¹ the court has a discretion² with which an appellate court will not lightly interfere³. This principle applies whether the bill of costs has been delivered for 12 months or has been paid⁴, but delay in applying for an order to assess may perhaps be explained more easily than the admission of reasonableness in amount which is implicit in the act of paying⁵, so that stronger evidence may be required to obtain an order to assess after the bill has been paid than after it has been delivered for 12 months⁶. In either such case, however, if it can be shown that the bill actually delivered was not in law a sufficient bill, an order for delivery of a proper bill and assessment may be obtained in the absence of special circumstances⁷, or where there has not been a delivery of a bill within the meaning of the Solicitors Act 1974⁸. The modern rule is as stated but older cases may usefully be referred to. These cases establish a guiding rule⁹ that after payment, 'gross overcharge' often called 'overcharge amounting to fraud'¹⁰ or 'pressure' together with excessive charges¹¹ must be proved in order to entitle the applicant to an order for assessing the bill¹². Upon an application after 12 months have elapsed since delivery, an unusual charge of large amount, requiring explanation to justify it, was sufficient ground for making the order to assess¹³ although gross overcharges should be shown¹⁴. It is expedient therefore to consider 'special circumstances' in relation to the three statutory cases¹⁵ where a party chargeable has to undertake the burden of establishing their existence¹⁶.

In Re Bagshaw, ex p Huddersfield and Manchester Railway and Canal Co (1848) 2 De G & Sm 205, the omission of an agent's costs from a bill was treated as a special circumstance justifying taxation (now assessment) after 12 months, but in this case the existence of the agency and therefore the question of omission was disputed. 10 In fact no moral stigma was intended by this description for the charges might have been made in all honesty: Re Strother (1857) 3 K & J 518 at 525. It is therefore desirable to avoid using the word 'fraud'; in this connection 'gross overcharge' is preferable.

11 'Pressure' without overcharging is not sufficient since a person cannot properly complain of pressure unless it compels him to pay more than he ought to have paid: Re Boycott (1885) 29 ChD 571 at 581, CA.

976. Special circumstances when 12 months have elapsed since delivery.

On applications when 12 months have elapsed since delivery, taxation (now assessment) has been directed in the following circumstances¹: when a charge for a non-existent scale fee had been included although work was not otherwise charged for²; where £85 was charged for witnesses who had been paid by the client and there was an unreasonable charge for shorthand notes taken by the solicitor's clerk³; where delivery of a bill long delayed was made on the evening of the client's departure abroad and contained a charge for 320 pages of abstract instead of 217⁴; where the country solicitor made an unreasonable charge for attendance in London during 31 days in relation to a country action tried in London⁵; where 100 guineas was charged for journeys for which the proper charge probably would be 61 guineas less and payment was not asked until 12 months had elapsed and the misrepresentation was made to justify the charges⁶.

On the other hand the following circumstances have been considered insufficient: the fact that the relationship of solicitor and client continued during the 12 months⁷; the fact that an action has been commenced after 12 months on the bill and is pending⁸; the presence of mistakes in a bill delivered to a client who was a solicitor and the husband of the substantive claimant and shared in the mistakes⁹; the presence of charges for letters which would not be allowed but amounted to £25 in a total of £1,200 charged by two bills delivered three-and-a half and one-and-a half years previously, respectively¹⁰; the fact that solicitors have not told their clients, who were executors, that in future administration proceedings some part of the costs might be disallowed¹¹.

On an application for taxation (now assessment) after a judgment has been obtained, the special circumstances shown should be a new matter come to the applicant's knowledge after judgment and he should be diligent in applying¹. Excessive charges alone have been held to be insufficient² but taxation (now assessment) has been directed at the instance of two partners where the solicitor has been employed by the firm and had collusively obtained judgment against the only other partner³.

978. Special circumstances after payment.

Upon an application after payment the following circumstances have been held sufficient to entitle the applicant to an order for taxation (now assessment) of the bill of costs¹: where, at the time of paying, the client expressly stipulated that he should afterwards have the right to taxation (now assessment)²; where an over-payment is extracted by pressure³ as where on the evening of completing a transaction (often a loan) important to the client a bill is delivered and payment, substantially in full before completion, is required and made, although the client has no sufficient time in which to examine the bill and protest against the charges⁴; where the payment is made to save possession being taken by the solicitor under a bill of sale⁵; where overcharges are required to be paid before papers are handed over⁶; where the bill contains gross overcharges as where a considerable part of the bill was for business needlessly done⁷, or where a charge was made for 165 unnecessary letters⁸, or charges were made on the higher scale and the lower scale applied⁹; or where the bill contained charges which no solicitor dealing properly with his own client would have made¹⁰.

On the other hand the payment of a bill under protest is not of itself sufficient special circumstance to entitle the applicant to taxation (now assessment)¹¹, although reservation of the right is an important factor¹²; nor is pressure easily proved to have been exerted where the applicant himself was urging speedy completion¹³; nor is it established by the mere fact that the applicant had no sufficient opportunity to examine the bill¹⁴, while the fact that he had reasonable time for considering the bill negatives pressure unless actual influence or compulsion is proved¹⁵; nor are gross overcharges proved to exist unless the overcharges are substantial¹⁶; nor is an error in casting alone sufficient¹⁷, nor the fact that certain disbursements have not been actually paid before the bill was paid¹⁸. Moreover the inclusion by mistake of a scale fee where the applicant was separately advised is not of itself a special circumstance justifying taxation (now assessment)¹⁹, nor probably a dispute concerning liability to pay at all²⁰. Delay in applying may be a bar²¹.

The position is entirely different and taxation (now assessment) will be directed at the instance of a solicitor as a matter of course if required in relation to the investigation of a criminal charge²².

3 Before sending a paid bill the court will take into account the circumstances of the payment, the state of mind of the client when he paid and the size of the overcharges. 979. What constitutes payment.

For the purposes of the Solicitors Act 1974, 'payment' means a payment of a sufficient bill of costs previously delivered¹. Subject to this, any act constituting payment of a debt for costs according to ordinary principles of law² will be payment within the statutory provision³. It is not, however, always absolutely essential that a bill should have been delivered before payment and an order for taxation (now assessment) may be refused where, after accounts have been settled, a bill is delivered and it is not shown that the bill contains overcharges⁴.

Apart from the questions whether a proper bill has been delivered or whether there is a binding agreement as to the amount of the costs, the following acts have been held to amount to payment within the statutory provision: where the solicitor, with the client's knowledge and assent, retained the amount of the bill out of the client's money in the solicitor's hands⁵; where the amount of the bill and of certain advances were included in a sum for which the client executed a mortgage in favour of the solicitor, even though no money actually passed between him and the client in respect of the costs⁶; where an account has been settled⁷; where a negotiable instrument is given in respect of the debt for costs and is paid, or by agreement is taken in payment of the costs, after an explanation to the client of the effect of this upon his right to tax (now assess) the bill⁸.

On the other hand the giving of a bill of exchange without more is not payment while the bill of exchange is outstanding or if it is dishonoured⁹, nor is the retention by the solicitor of money without the client's acquiescence¹⁰ or a settlement of accounts¹¹. If a bearer cheque is given to the firm's manager who is himself a solicitor, the burden of proving that it should be treated as having been paid to the firm is on the client alleging the payment¹².

980. Payment to solicitor trustee.

The position of a solicitor trustee entitled to charge profit costs¹ against the trust estate and wishing to secure a final payment may be difficult, for the amount of costs cannot be settled with a co-trustee without the delivery of a bill², and if the solicitor trustee is a sole trustee there is no client to whom bills can be delivered and it is improbable that the beneficiaries will be able to settle the account themselves so as to preclude taxation (now assessment)³.

981. When assessment is finally precluded.

After the expiration of 12 months from the payment of the bill no application for an order for costs can be made at the instance of the party chargeable¹ or a third party or person interested². If the costs have been paid by a third party it seems that the party chargeable cannot obtain taxation (now assessment)³.

When 12 months have expired since unconditional payment the only remedy of the party chargeable for questioning the propriety of the payment is on proof of fraud or undue influence when moderation may be ordered⁴. It is not possible to make an application under the court's inherent jurisdiction since that jurisdiction is ousted by the statutory provisions⁵.

982. Applications in the High Court.

A claim under the Solicitors Act 1974¹ which does not fall within the jurisdiction of the county court must be made in the High Court². Such a claim may be determined by:

- 1410 (1) a High Court Judge;
- 1411 (2) a Master, a costs judge or a district judge of the Principal Registry of the Family Division; or
- 1412 (3) a district judge, if the costs are for contentious business done in proceedings in the district registry of which he is a district judge, contentious business done in proceedings in a county court within the district of that registry or non-contentious business³.

E. ASSESSMENT

983. Basis of assessment.

Where the court is to assess the amount of costs (whether by summary or detailed assessment¹) it will assess them on the standard basis or on the indemnity basis but will not allow in either case costs which have been unreasonably incurred or are unreasonable in amount².

Costs between solicitor and client are generally assessed on the indemnity basis³. The court will resolve any doubt which it may have as to whether costs were reasonably incurred or were reasonable in amount in favour of the receiving party⁴. However costs between solicitor and client are presumed:

- 1413 (1) to have been reasonably incurred if they were incurred with the express or implied consent of the client;
- 1414 (2) to be reasonable in amount if their amount was expressly or impliedly approved by the client;
- 1415 (3) to have been unreasonably incurred if they are of an unusual nature or amount and the solicitor did not tell his client that as a result he might not recover all of them from the other party⁵.

2 CPR 44.4(1). See also CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1747. 3 This is subject to CPR 48.8(1A) (see PARA 970; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1812) and does not apply to a bill which is to be paid out of the Community Legal Service Fund under the Legal Aid Act 1988 or the Access to Justice Act 1999: see CPR 48.8(1); and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1812. 984. Procedure.

Where the court has made an order under the Solicitors Act 1974¹ for the assessment of costs payable to a solicitor by his client the following apply². The solicitor must serve a breakdown of costs within 28 days of the order for costs to be assessed and the client must serve points of dispute within 14 days after service on him of the breakdown of costs³.

If the solicitor wishes to serve a reply, he must do so within 14 days of service on him of the points of dispute⁴. Either party may file a request for a hearing date after points of dispute have been served but no later than three months after the date of the order for the costs to be assessed⁵.

F. COSTS OF ASSESSMENT UNDER THE SOLICITORS ACT 1974

985. Solicitor and own client assessment.

In assessments pursuant to the Solicitors Act 1974¹ at the instance of the party chargeable or the solicitor² or third party³ or person interested⁴, unless the order for assessment was made on the application of the solicitor and the party chargeable does not attend the assessment⁵, or unless the order for assessment otherwise provides⁶, the costs of assessment must be paid according to the event of the assessment⁷, that is to say if one-fifth of the amount of the bill⁸ is assessed off the solicitor must pay the costs⁹ but otherwise the party chargeable must pay them¹⁰. The costs officer may, however, certify to the court any special circumstances and the court may make such order in respect of the payment of the costs of assessment as is thought fit¹¹, as by depriving the solicitor of the costs of the assessment even though the bill has been reduced by one-fifth¹² or allowing him the costs even where so reduced¹³.

1 Every order for assessment requires the costs officer to assess not only the bill but also the costs of the assessment and to certify what is due to or by the solicitor in respect of the bill and in respect of the costs of the assessment: Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(7). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(7)-(10) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 65 which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs and the replacement of the taxing officer with the costs officer. As to assessment of costs see PARA 967 et seq.

3 Ie an applicant pursuant to the Solicitors Act 1974 s 71(1): see PARA 971.

4 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 71(3); and PARA 971.

5 Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(9)(a). A person does not attend by writing letters to the taxing officer: Re Upperton (1882) 30 WR 840. See also Ex p Woollett (1844) 12 M & W 504 at 506. If after due notice of assessment either party fails to attend, the costs officer may proceed with the assessment ex parte: Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(8). The Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(8), (9) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 65(g), (h) which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs and the replacement of the taxing officer with the costs officer.

6 Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(9)(b). The same follows if an order under s 70(10) so provides: see s 79(9)(b).

7 Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(9). If the order to assess does not deal with the incidence of the cost of assessment the statutory rule still applies: see Re Burn and Berridge (1908) 99 LT 606. However it was held that allowance must be made for items increased by the taxing master: see R v Eastwood (1856) 6 E & B 285. Items struck out of the bill because the solicitor was not retained to do the work which they are charged for are not taken into account (Re Taxation of Costs, Re a Solicitor [1936] 1 KB 523, [1936] 1 All ER 491, CA) nor are items which have been wrongly included as disbursements and therefore have been struck out (Re Haigh (1849) 12 Beav 307). Where several bills owing by a party chargeable are assessed together and the aggregate amount of the bills is reduced by one-fifth or more, the solicitor pays the costs of the assessment even though one or some of the bills are not so reduced: see Ex p Barrett (1834) 3 Deac & Ch 731; and see Beardsall v Cheetham (1858) EB & E 243 at 245. If only one of several bills is assessed and the solicitor does not object to this, the costs follow the ordinary rule even though the other bills have not been assessed: see R v Varty (1844) 2 LTOS 368. So, too, the ordinary one-fifth rule applies where a bill is assessed as one item in an account between a solicitor and his own client (May v Biggenden, Cheeseman v May (1857) 24 Beav 207); or where a lessor's solicitor includes costs of concurring parties in his bill the one-fifth rule applies even though his own costs are not reduced by one-fifth (Re Fletcher and Dyson [1903] 2 Ch 688). If the assessment takes place after action brought and anything is found due, the client must pay the costs of the action (Re Hair (1848) 11 Beav 96; and see Thomas v Swansea Corpn (1843) 2 Dowl NS 1003) although the solicitor must pay the costs of the assessment if one-fifth is taxed off (Smith v Edwardes (1888) 22 QBD 10, CA, where the proceedings were for summary judgment under RSC Ord 14; Ex p Woollett (1844) 12 M & W 504; Higgins v Woolcott (1826) 5 B & C 760; and see Featherstonhaugh v Reen (1833) 1 Cr & M 495) the client being liable if less than one-fifth is taxed off (Wilson v Knapp (1840) 8 Dowl 426; Re Shaw (1851) 2 LM & P 214).

8 This reference to the fraction of the amount of the bill taxed off is to be taken, where the taxation (now assessment) concerns only part of the costs covered by the bill, as a reference to that fraction of the amount of those costs which is being taxed: Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(12).

9 This does not apply to assessments in bankruptcy (Re Marsh, ex p Marsh (1885) 15 QBD 340, CA) or perhaps where the assessment takes place after the solicitor's death (see Re Jackson, ex p Hammond (1839) 4 Deac 48; Gale v Pakington (1825) M'Cle & Yo 354) but see also the Solicitors Act 1974 s 68(3); and PARA 956 note 3. The rule does not apply as against the representatives of a deceased client: Jefferson v Warrington (1840) 7 M & W 137. Where the solicitor is bankrupt his trustee is liable for the costs if he delivers a bill in respect of which one-fifth or more is assessed off: see Re Peers (1856) 21 Beav 520. The solicitor himself is liable if he obtains his discharge pending the assessment: see Whalley v Williamson (1843) 6 Man & G 269. The amount of the excess over one-fifth is immaterial: Swinburn v Hewitt (1838) 7 Dowl 314 (where the excess amounted to 2.5 pence). See also Morris v Parkinson (1835) 3 Dowl 744; Davison v Allen (1840) 8 Dowl 673. The one-fifth rule applies even if the solicitor has accepted in full discharge a sum less than that allowed by the costs judge see Re Elwes and Turner (1888) 58 LT 580, where no costs were given; although in such a case the costs judge might well certify special circumstances and exercise discretion over the costs.

10 Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(9). If the client is a trustee or co-trustee he will be liable to bear the costs, but if the costs were properly incurred he will be entitled to be indemnified out of the trust fund: Re HP Davies & Sons [1917] 1 Ch 216 at 223 per Neville J.

11 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(10). The discretion may be exercised in favour of the solicitor as well as in favour of the client: Re Richards [1912] 1 Ch 49 at 54; and see Russell v Yorke (1839) 7 Scott 130.

12 Webb v Stone (1794) 1 Anst 260; Yea v Yea (1794) 2 Anst 494; Baker v Mills (1834) 2 Dowl 382; Holderness v Barkworth (1838) 3 M & W 341; Hodge v Bird (1844) 6 Man & G 1020.

985 Solicitor and own client assessment

NOTES 1, 5--Amendments made by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 65 in force 1 January 2010: SI 2009/3250.

(viii) Interest on Costs

986. Interest on costs of non-contentious business.

A solicitor¹ may charge interest on the unpaid amount of his costs², including any paid disbursements³ and value added tax⁴, after the required information⁵ has been given in writing⁶ to the entitled person⁷. Where an entitlement to interest arises by virtue of this provision, and subject to any agreement made between a solicitor and client⁸, the period for which interest may be charged may run from one month after the date of delivery of a bill⁹, unless the solicitor fails to lodge an application within one month of receipt of a request for a remuneration certificate¹⁰, in which case no interest is payable in respect of the period between one month after receiving the request and the actual date on which the application is lodged¹¹.

Subject to any agreement between a solicitor and client, the rate of interest must not exceed the rate for the time being payable on judgment debts¹².

Interest where applicable must be calculated by reference to the following:

- 1416 (1) if a solicitor is required to obtain a remuneration certificate, the total amount of the costs certified to be fair and reasonable plus paid disbursements and VAT;
- 1417 (2) if an application is made for the bill to be assessed, the amount ascertained on assessment¹³;
- 1418 (3) if an application is made for the bill to be assessed or a solicitor is required to obtain a remuneration certificate and for any reason the assessment or application for a remuneration certificate does not proceed, the unpaid amount of the costs shown in the bill or such lesser sum as may be agreed between the solicitor and the client, plus paid disbursements and VAT¹⁴.

986 Interest on costs of non-contentious business

TEXT AND NOTES--SI 1994/2616 replaced: Solicitors' (Non-Contentious Business) Remuneration Order 2009, SI 2009/1931.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(viii) Interest on Costs/987. Interest on costs of contentious business.

987. Interest on costs of contentious business.

In contentious business¹ an agreement by the party to pay interest on the costs², if otherwise valid³, appears to be binding⁴.

On every assessment of costs in respect of any contentious business the costs officer has power, subject to rules of court, to allow interest on money disbursed by the solicitor⁵ for the client⁶ at such rate and from time to time as he thinks just⁷. A similar power applies with respect to money disbursed by a recognised body⁸ for a client⁹.

A solicitor suing a client for unpaid costs can claim statutory interest which the court has a discretion to award¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'contentious business' see PARA 933 note 2.

2 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 835 note 6.

3 As to contentious business agreements see PARA 945. The solicitor should explain to the client that apart from agreement interest is not recoverable on untaxed profit costs save as mentioned in PARA 988 note 1.

4 See Lyddon v Moss (1859) 4 De G & J 104; Shannon v Casey (1874) 8 IR Eq 307. Where there is an agreement to pay interest on future costs a client will not be entitled to the usual order for assessment (Re Fanshawe (1905) 49 Sol Jo 404; a case of discharging such an order obtained ex parte without disclosing the agreement) so that provision for allowing such interest should presumably be made.

5 As from a day to be appointed this also applies to where money has been improperly retained by an employee of the solicitor: see the Solicitors Act 1974 s 66(a) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 62(d)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 835 note 6.

7 Solicitors Act 1974 s 66(a). See Hartland v Murrell (1873) LR 16 Eq 285. The solicitor cannot appropriate payments to costs so as to leave disbursements unpaid and therefore bearing interest: Re Harrison (1886) 33 ChD 52 CA. The Solicitors Act 1974 s 66(a) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 62(b), (c) which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs. As to assessment of costs see PARA 967 et seq.

8 As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 687 note 3.

9 See the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 26(a) (prospectively renumbered as Sch 2 para 26(1)(a) by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 113(b)). The Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 2 para 26(a) is also prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 113(a), (b) which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs. See also the Judgements Act 1838 s 17; and PARA 988.

10 See the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 35A; the County Court Act 1984 s 69(1); and PARA 987. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

990. Right to take security for costs.

At common law a solicitor could take security from his client for costs already due, the security standing good for the amount justly due with interest¹, although he could not obtain a valid security for future costs². As regards future costs both in respect of contentious³ and non-contentious⁴ business his right to take security is now conferred by statute⁵. In relation to non-contentious business the security may cover interest to which the solicitor may become entitled⁶.

In contentious business, if a solicitor who has been retained by a client⁷ to conduct such business requests the client to pay a reasonable sum of money on account of the costs⁸ incurred or to be incurred in the conduct of that business, and the client refuses or fails within a reasonable time to make that payment, the refusal or failure is deemed to be good cause whereby the solicitor may withdraw from the retainer upon giving reasonable notice to the client⁹.

992. Setting aside security for costs.

The court will re-open a transaction where security for costs¹ is given in circumstances which amount to fraud² or undue influence³, or where there has been no proper settlement of accounts amounting to a binding repayment and agreement of the amount⁴.

If the security is taken in the form of a mortgage, great care must be taken, unless the client is separately advised, that no terms which are not strictly usual or are in any way unfairly burdensome to the client are inserted⁵, otherwise the court will set the transaction aside and only enforce the security of such sum as it is equitable that the client should pay⁶.

(x) Solicitor's Remedies for Costs

993. When an action for costs may be brought.

A solicitor¹ is entitled to maintain an action for the costs due to him at the expiration of one month from the delivery of his bill of costs to his client² or within the month if leave has been obtained³, unless the court has already⁴ made an order restraining him from so doing pending assessment. However, in the case of non-contentious business⁵, unless the costs have been assessed the solicitor must first have informed the client in writing of his right to require application to be made for a remuneration certificate and of the statutory provisions relating to assessment⁶.

1 A solicitor who carries on business under a firm name may sue in his own name if his partner is only a nominal partner: Kell v Nainby (1829) 10 B & C 20; Spurr v Cass, Cass v Spurr (1870) LR 5 QB 656.

2 As to delivery of the bill see PARA 956. As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 835 note 6.

3 See PARA 956 note 1.

4 Where an action is commenced by the client to which the solicitor pleads his unsettled bill of costs by way of defence the proper course is to apply in that action for a stay of proceedings pending assessment: see Re Webster [1891] 2 Ch 102, 108.

5 As to the meaning of 'non-contentious business' see PARA 933 note 4.

6 See the Solicitors' (Non-Contentious Business) Remuneration Order 1994, SI 1994/2616, art 8; and PARA 939. As to the meaning of 'remuneration certificate' see PARA 938 note 4.

994. Limitation of actions.

For the purposes of an action on his bill of costs, time begins to run against the solicitor from the date when the work to which it relates was completed and not from the expiration of one month from delivery of the bill¹, despite the statutory restriction on bringing an action for recovery of the costs within that month². If some only of the items included in the bill are statute-barred the solicitor may recover in respect of the balance³.

As to the effect of fraud or mistake on the running of time see LIMITATION PERIODS vol 68 (2008) PARA 1224 et seq. 995. Recovery in bankruptcy.

A bankruptcy petition may be presented by the solicitor against his client in respect of his costs¹ even though he has not delivered his bill of costs and is not therefore in a position to maintain an action². Upon the application of creditors or of the client, the petition may be stayed until the bill has been delivered and the costs assessed³. Similarly the solicitor may prove in the client's bankruptcy for the amount of his costs⁴ even though he has delivered no bill⁵ and even though the costs have not been assessed⁶. In this case the trustee in bankruptcy may require full particulars of how the amount is made up⁷, and the proof when complete may be referred to a costs officer for consideration under the court's inherent jurisdiction⁸.

1 A solicitor who has obtained a final order and is in a position to issue execution for costs may serve a bankruptcy notice if his debt is of the required amount and upon non-compliance with it may petition in bankruptcy in accordance with the provisions of the Insolvency Act 1986. As to bankruptcy generally see BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY.

A solicitor may not present a petition to wind up a client company based on a debt for costs in respect of non-contentious business until the information required by the Solicitors' (Non-Contentious Business) Remuneration Order 1994, SI 1994/2616, art 8 has been given to the client: see PARA 939; and Re Laceward Ltd [1981] 1 All ER 254, [1981] 1 WLR 133. (xi) Lien

A. IN GENERAL

996. Right to exercise lien and duty to inform client.

At common law a solicitor has two rights which are termed liens¹. The first is a right to retain property already in his possession until he is paid costs due to him in his professional capacity² and the second is the right to ask the court to direct that personal property recovered under a judgment obtained by his exertions stand as security for his costs of such recovery. In addition, a solicitor has by statute a right to apply to the court for a charging order on property recovered or preserved through his instrumentality in respect of his assessed costs of the suit, matter or proceeding prosecuted or defended by him³.

A solicitor is under a duty to advise his client that there are circumstances where the solicitor may be entitled to exercise a lien for unpaid costs⁴.

1 As to lien generally see LIEN vol 68 (2008) PARA 801 et seq.

2 The solicitor's retaining lien is not different from the liens of other persons but if the exercise of it will cause damage to the client the property may be ordered to be handed over upon payment into court: Richards v Platel (1841) 5 Jur 834; and see Re Broomhead (1847) 5 Dow & L 52.

3 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 73; and PARA 1011 et seq.

B. RETAINING LIEN

997. Property affected by retaining lien.

The general rule is that the retaining lien extends to any deed, paper or personal chattel which has come into the solicitor's¹ possession in the course of his employment² and in his capacity as solicitor with the client's sanction³ and which is the client's property⁴.

The following may thus be subject to a retaining lien:

- 1419 (1) a bill of exchange⁵;
- 1420 (2) a cheque⁶;
- 1421 (3) a policy of assurance⁷;
- 1422 (4) a share certificate⁸;
- 1423 (5) an application for shares⁹;
- 1424 (6) a debenture trust deed¹⁰;
- 1425 (7) letters patent¹¹;
- 1426 (8) letters of administration¹²;
- 1427 (9) money¹³, including money in a client account¹⁴, although only the amount due to the solicitor¹⁵, and maintenance received by a solicitor if not subject to an order as to its application or bound to be applied, in effect, as trust money¹⁶; or
- 1428 (10) documents in a drawer of which the solicitor is given the key¹⁷.

The lien does not extend to:

- 1429 (a) a client's original will; or
- 1430 (b) a deed in favour of the solicitor but reserving a life interest and power of revocation to the client¹⁸; or
- 1431 (c) original court records¹⁹; or
- 1432 (d) documents which did not come into the solicitor's hands in his capacity as solicitor for the person against whom the lien is claimed or his successors²⁰, but as mortgagee²¹, steward of a manor²² or trustee²³.

Moreover, where documents are delivered to a solicitor for a particular purpose under a special agreement which does not make express provision for a lien in favour of the solicitor, as perhaps the raising of money²⁴, or money is paid to the solicitor for a particular purpose so that he becomes a trustee of the money²⁵, no lien arises over those documents or that money unless subsequently left in the solicitor's possession for general purposes²⁶. Otherwise the lien extends to the property whatever the occasion of delivery²⁷, except that where a solicitor acts for both mortgagor and mortgagee and the mortgage is redeemed the solicitor cannot set up a lien on the deeds against the mortgagor²⁸.

998. Extent of retaining lien.

A retaining lien extends only to the solicitor's assessable costs, charges and expenses¹ incurred on the instructions of the client against whom the lien is claimed², and for which the client is personally liable³, including the costs of recovering the remuneration by action⁴ or upon an assessment⁵. The lien therefore does not extend to costs which are due to the solicitor in a capacity other than that of solicitor⁶, or to loans⁷, or to sums paid by the solicitor at the client's request and thus in effect lent by the solicitor⁸ or to debts generally⁹. The lien extends to costs which are not recoverable by action because they are barred under the statutes of limitation¹⁰, but does not extend to costs which are irrecoverable because the solicitor was unqualified when the work was done¹¹.

The lien is a general lien extending to all costs due¹² to the solicitor and is not limited to the costs incurred in relation to the particular documents in question or upon the particular instructions in consequence of which the property came into the solicitor's possession¹³. In this respect the retaining lien differs from the lien on property recovered¹⁴.

1000. Lien no greater than client's right to retain.

Since the solicitor has no better right to retain the documents or property than his client would have if still in possession of them¹, the existence of a retaining lien is no sufficient answer to an order on the client to produce them². Similarly, a defendant's solicitors in an administration action may be compelled to deliver documents to a receiver appointed in the action³ and solicitors for a party to such an action may be compelled to produce documents to a creditor conducting the action⁴.

A company's solicitor has no lien as against the liquidator on documents required by statute to be kept at a particular place⁵ or which come into his possession after the commencement of a winding up⁶. A solicitor can have no lien as against the official receiver or trustee in bankruptcy over the debtor's books of account⁷ and production or delivery of the debtor's property may be ordered⁸.

A vendor's solicitor has no lien on an engrossment of a conveyance prepared by the purchaser as against him⁹. A mortgagee's solicitor does not acquire as against the mortgagor a lien for costs over the mortgage deeds¹⁰ nor can a mortgagor's solicitor retain deeds as against the mortgagee¹¹, but if the mortgage deed creates a floating security the mortgagor may give to his solicitor a lien before the security becomes a fixed charge¹².

A tenant for life¹³ or trustee at his request¹⁴ cannot create a lien in favour of a solicitor which will be valid against remaindermen. A solicitor for a trustee or a personal representative does not acquire a lien over the beneficial interests, but to the extent to which the solicitor's client is entitled to an indemnity out of the estate the solicitor is entitled to retain documents as against a beneficiary¹⁵. A solicitor for a husband having prepared a marriage settlement has no right to a retaining lien for his costs as against the trustee¹⁶, and in general a solicitor does not acquire a lien in priority to an earlier equity even though he has no notice of it¹⁷.

A retaining lien is a transmissible right and thus passes to the solicitor's personal representatives¹ or may be assigned with the right to the costs which it secures². The dissolution of a firm of solicitors amounts to a discharge by the solicitors of the clients who retained the firm³ and, accordingly, the lien of the solicitors is affected in the same way as if they had withdrawn from the retainer⁴.

In the event of a change of solicitors in the course of an action, the former solicitor's retaining lien is not taken away but his rights in respect of it may be modified according to whether he discharges himself or is discharged by the client¹. If he is discharged by the client otherwise than for misconduct² he cannot, so long as his costs are unpaid, be compelled to produce or hand over the papers³ even in a divorce case⁴. If, on the other hand, he discharges himself, he may be ordered to hand over the papers to the new solicitor on the new solicitor's undertaking⁵ to hold them without prejudice to his lien, to return them intact after the action is over and to allow the former solicitor access to them in the meantime and if necessary to prosecute the proceedings in an active manner⁶.

See also Webster v Le Hunt (1861) 9 WR 804. This rule has been described as arbitrary and ill-defined (Re Rapid Road Transit Co [1909] 1 Ch 96 at 102), but it rests on the principle that the solicitor has no right greater than his client and that his client's right does not avail against the other persons interested (see PARAS 999-1000); yet this does not account for the distinction between documents which do or do not come into the solicitor's hands before eg a liquidation and costs which are incurred before or after such time (see PARA 1000; and COMPANIES). If a solicitor is discharged by the client otherwise than for misconduct the solicitor is under no obligation to deliver or to produce or to allow inspection of the papers for the benefit of the client and is entitled to hold the papers until the bill of costs has been paid: Leo Abse & Cohen v Evan G Jones (Builders) Ltd (1984) 128 Sol Jo 317, 81 LS Gaz R 1684, CA.

1004. Priorities of successive solicitors.

The priorities of successive solicitors employed by the same client in regard to a retaining lien or a lien on property recovered¹ are regulated as follows.

In the winding up of companies² and in a debenture holder's action the rights of the respective solicitors to payment and consequently to a lien upon documents rank *pari passu*³.

In an action in the Chancery Division, the rule is that the solicitor who actually conducts the action to its conclusion has the first lien upon any money recovered or preserved, but subject to this lien the court will grant the solicitor employed at an earlier stage of the action a charging order in respect of his costs⁴. Where the first solicitor receives the whole of the costs he must pay over the second solicitor's share without deduction in respect of any set-off to which he may be entitled as between himself and his client⁵. The fact that one solicitor pays off the other solicitor's claim does not give the other solicitor any lien in respect of the amount so paid⁶. Where the subject of a lien is converted into money and the amount paid into court, the liens are satisfied out of the fund according to their priorities⁷.

The delivery over of papers 'subject' or 'without prejudice' to a lien gives the person handing the papers over no priority⁸. If it is intended to preserve the lien as a prior charge an undertaking to that effect must be insisted upon⁹.

1005. Discharge of retaining lien.

A retaining lien may be discharged¹ in one or other of the following ways:

- 1433 (1) by the solicitor receiving payment of the costs in respect of which it arises² although it is not discharged by the solicitor obtaining judgment³ or a charging order⁴ for his costs;
- 1434 (2) by the solicitor parting with possession⁵ of the documents over which the lien is claimed, but not if possession was given to an agent of a third person subject to the lien⁶, or where papers are handed to an arbitrator to enable him to draw up his award⁷ or are produced to the court on request⁸, or where after dissolution of a firm a former partner takes away deeds which are subject to a lien⁹, or where documents are passed by the solicitor to a firm of solicitors replacing him to hold to his order or for his account¹⁰;
- 1435 (3) by waiver where the solicitor conducts himself in a manner inconsistent with the retention of his lien, for instance by taking security for his costs on the property to which the documents relate¹¹, or by taking a negotiable instrument payable on demand¹² or in three years¹³, or by effecting for a client a security to perfect which the client should be given possession of the documents¹⁴. There is in general a presumption that the lien is abandoned if the solicitor takes the security for the costs secured by the lien without explaining that he is entitled to a lien which he is not abandoning¹⁵ but there is no waiver if the solicitor expressly reserves his lien¹⁶. The arrest of a vessel belonging to a client and to which papers relate is not inconsistent with maintenance of a lien and does not imply an intention to waive it¹⁷. Where the security and the lien are not inconsistent, as where the security relates to some particular part of the cost only¹⁸, the lien is not discharged. A solicitor's retaining lien on an insurance policy is valid against a subsequent assignee of the policy who has given notice of the assignment to the insurers even though the solicitor has given no such notice of his lien¹⁹;
- 1436 (4) by proving in bankruptcy or in a winding up the amount of the costs without valuing or mentioning the lien²⁰.

C. CASE LAW ON PROPERTY OR FUNDS RECOVERED

1006. Particular lien on property recovered.

Apart from statute¹ a solicitor has at common law a lien which may be actively enforced² over a fund or the proceeds of a judgment³ recovered for the client in the course of litigation or arbitration by the solicitor's exertions⁴, but not over the fruit of negotiation without litigation⁵. The existence of the particular lien does not depend on any proprietary or possessory relationship of the solicitor to the property⁶. This lien, although always referred to as a 'lien', is more accurately described as a mere right to ask for the court's intervention for the solicitor's protection when, having obtained judgment for his client, he finds that there is a probability of the client depriving him of his costs⁷. It is a right to ask the court to charge the property in favour of the solicitor and until that is done the solicitor has no right to the money⁸.

The lien is a particular lien⁹. It is not therefore available for the general balance of account between the solicitor and the client¹⁰ but extends only to costs of the proceedings in which the property is recovered¹¹, including the costs of protecting the solicitor's right to those costs¹², of establishing the solicitor's retainer if it is disputed¹³ and of matters incidental to the recovery¹⁴. The lien may be asserted by the solicitor although his right to recover the costs may be barred by lapse of time¹⁵.

1007. Extent of lien on property recovered.

A lien on property recovered does not attach to real property¹, nor generally to maintenance payments², nor to money which ought to be paid to a receiver in an action and comes to the solicitor's hands as solicitor for the claimant³ or with a view to paying it over to the receiver⁴ but, with these exceptions, it applies to property of every description⁵ such as money payable under a judgment⁶ or an award⁷ (including costs ordered to be paid to the client⁸ or the proceeds of an execution in the hands of the sheriff⁹), money paid into court whether as security for costs¹⁰ or by way of defence¹¹ or otherwise¹² and money received by way of compromise¹³.

The property must, however, have been recovered or preserved in consequence of the solicitor's exertions¹⁴ and by means of litigious or arbitration proceedings¹⁵, and the solicitor must have been acting on behalf of the person against whom the lien is claimed¹⁶. The lien can apply to money held in a client account and it is wrong in principle for such money to be included within the ambit of an injunction freezing the assets of the client¹⁷. The lien can be exercised against the client only¹⁸ and it attaches to the property only to the extent of the client's interest in it¹⁹. The solicitor has no greater right than his client²⁰ and takes subject to all the equities between his client and the other parties interested in the property²¹.

The solicitor has no right to a lien if the contract of retainer between him and the client is void for illegality²².

1008. Effect of set-off.

Under its inherent jurisdiction¹, the High Court has a discretion to allow a judgment for costs or for damages to be set off² against a judgment for costs or for damages without regard to any lien of a solicitor on any such judgment, the lien thus extending only to the ultimate balance³. In exercising this discretion the court will not refuse the set-off if it would be just as between the litigants themselves to allow it⁴. The Court of Appeal may allow the respondent's costs of an unsuccessful appeal to be set off against money paid into court in the action⁵, and the House of Lords has a discretion to allow a set-off of costs incurred in an appeal to that House against costs due under a judgment of the Court of Appeal, but that discretion will not be exercised on a separate application after final judgment has been given⁶. A set-off of judgments obtained in county courts or in a county court and in the High Court is allowed in accordance with the practice of the High Court⁷.

1009. Enforcement of lien on property recovered.

The lien on property recovered, being in fact a right to ask for the court's intervention¹, may be actively enforced². The application may conveniently be an application for a charging order under the Solicitors Act 1974³ or at common law⁴ but the solicitor may apply to the court for an injunction restraining his client from receiving payment without notice to himself⁵.

Apart from applying to the court, the solicitor may protect his lien, where money is payable to his client either under an order to pay costs⁶ or a judgment⁷ or compromise⁸ by giving notice of his lien to the party liable to pay, or his solicitors, who thereafter will be liable to pay again to the solicitor, if payment is made initially without regard to the solicitor's claim⁹. If the money in respect of which the lien is claimed is already in the solicitor's hands he may retain out of it the amount of his costs and pay over the balance to the client¹⁰.

1010. Effect of compromise of action.

A solicitor's lien against property recovered may be affected by the compromise of the action. For the purpose of preserving the lien, the court does not interfere with a compromise made in good faith¹, whether the damages sought to be affected are liquidated² or unliquidated³.

It must, however, be clear that the compromise is made honestly and not with the intention of cheating the solicitor of his proper charges⁴. If the compromise is a collusive one entered into between the claimant and the defendant specifically for the purpose of depriving the solicitor of his lien, the court interferes for the solicitor's protection⁵. In such a case the court may order payment of the solicitor's costs⁶; or that a bill of exchange be delivered up to the solicitor⁷; or may permit the solicitor to continue the proceedings for the purpose of recovering costs⁸; or, if a stay of proceedings on a compromise is asked for, may attach conditions upon granting the stay⁹.

D. STATUTORY LIEN AND CHARGING ORDERS

1011. Statutory jurisdiction to make charging orders.

Any court¹ in which a solicitor has been employed² to prosecute or defend any suit, matter or proceeding may at any time:

- 1437 (1) declare³ that the solicitor is entitled to a charge⁴, on any property⁵ recovered or preserved⁶ through his instrumentality, for his assessed costs⁷ in reference to that suit, matter or proceeding⁸; and
- 1438 (2) make such orders for the assessment of those costs and for raising money to pay or for paying them out of the property recovered or preserved as the court thinks fit⁹.

All conveyances and acts done to defeat or operating to defeat¹⁰ that charge are void as against the solicitor except in the case of a conveyance to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice¹¹.

1 As to the courts which may make charging orders see PARA 1019. The court must be a civil court: Re Humphreys, ex p Lloyd-George and George [1898] 1 QB 520 at 525, CA. For the power of a particular court, eg a judge exercising bankruptcy jurisdiction, to make the order see PARA 1019.

2 This includes acting on behalf of a minor where the original retainer was by the next friend and a charging order can be made if the minor adopts the proceedings: Bonser v Bradshaw (1860) 30 LJ Ch 159 (on appeal (1862) 10 WR 481); Baile v Baile (1872) LR 13 Eq 497; cf Pritchard v Roberts (1873) LR 17 Eq 222. It is necessary to consider the position and interest of the person employing the solicitor because the interest of that person may be a factor in deciding upon a particular exercise of the discretion over the order: Jackson v Smith, ex p Digby (1884) 53 LJ Ch 972 at 975. The repudiation by a minor of proceedings relates back to their commencement: Dunn v Dunn (1855) 7 De GM & G 25 at 29.

3 The court's power is discretionary: Re Humphreys, ex p Lloyd-George and George [1898] 1 QB 520, CA; Re Born, Curnock v Born [1900] 2 Ch 433; Re Turner, Wood v Turner [1907] 2 Ch 539, CA; Re Cockrell's Estate [1912] 1 Ch 23, CA; Re Debtor (No 29 of 1931), Wilde v Petitioning Creditors and Debtor (1934) 103 LJ Ch 303. In the exercise of its discretion the court must also have regard to the rights of the client: Re Fuld (No 4) [1968] P 727, [1967] 2 All ER 649. It is 'otiose and inappropriate' to make a charging order where the property is already under the control of the court: Halvanon Insurance Co Ltd v Central Reinsurance Corp [1988] 3 All ER 857 at 863, [1988] 1 WLR 1122 at 1130.

4 As to the priority of the charge see PARA 1018.

5 The property of any kind: Foxon v Gascoigne (1874) 9 Ch App 654 at 660; Birchall v Pugin (1875) LR 10 CP 397 at 399. In this respect the power to make a charging order is more extensive than the power to protect the lien since the lien does not extend to realty: see PARA 1007; and Wilson v Hood (1864) 3 H & C 148 at 151. 'Property' under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 73(1) includes an order for untaxed costs: Fairfold Properties Ltd v Exmouth Docks Co Ltd (No 2) [1993] Ch 196, [1992] 4 All ER 289.

The Solicitors Act 1974 s 73(1)(a) is prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 68(a) which reflects the replacement of taxation of costs with assessment of costs. As to assessment of costs see PARA 967. Where a solicitor takes a security over a client's property, some feature of which is incompatible with a charge under the Solicitors Act 1973 s 73, then the solicitor is deemed to have waived the right to such a charge: see Clifford Harris & Co v Solland International Ltd [2005] EWHC 141 (Ch), [2005] 2 All ER 334.

UPDATE

1011 Statutory jurisdiction to make charging orders

NOTES 8, 9--Amendments made by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 68 in force 1 January 2010: SI 2009/3250.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(9) REMUNERATION/(xi) Lien/D. STATUTORY LIEN AND CHARGING ORDERS/1012. Circumstances in which charging orders should be made.

1012. Circumstances in which charging orders should be made.

A solicitor is entitled to a charging order if he satisfies the statutory requirements¹ and he makes out a prima facie case that he will not otherwise obtain his costs². Where there is no question of his being deprived of costs by his conduct, very exceptional circumstances must be shown for depriving him of the opportunity for enforcing his lien³. It is a material point whether the solicitor is entitled to a common law lien⁴ over property to be charged, since an application for a charging order may be regarded as a convenient procedure for enforcing that lien⁵. However, the order will be refused if the solicitor has been guilty of a breach of faith, or has stood by while the property was so dealt with that it would be unjust to third persons to make the order⁶, or has acted in a manner inconsistent with the continuance of the right, as by proving in bankruptcy as an unsecured creditor⁷, or accepting security for the costs⁸, or being privy to an order whereby part of the cost was paid by way of set-off against a debt and the remainder was ordered to be paid out of a fund⁹, or where the costs are barred by any statute of limitation¹⁰. Moreover, the charging order may be refused if the costs are recoverable from another person not interested in the property to be charged¹¹. An order may be granted in respect of a fund even if the fund is lodged before the solicitor is retained¹².

1015. Need for property capable of being charged.

There can be no charging order unless the property is capable of being charged. Thus, a charging order will not be made in an action relating to an easement¹; or over property which is awarded by the court for personal maintenance²; and a charging order should not be capable of being made in relation to property which by law is inalienable because it is a personal allowance³. Moreover, the particular property may be excluded by statute⁴.

1016. Recovery or preservation of property.

The court's statutory power to make a charging order does not arise unless the property is recovered or preserved¹. Property may be recovered or preserved in a successful suit to clear it of an incumbrance even if the incumbrance had no value²; or where a claim to a share in it is successfully resisted³; or in an administration action, even though the estate is very much depleted⁴; and the fact that the client has died and his estate is being administered by the court⁵ does not prevent an order being made. Property has been held not to have been recovered or preserved:

- 1459 (1) where an administration order had been made but not executed⁶;
- 1460 (2) where a winding-up petition was successfully resisted on behalf of the promoters of a company but the company was wound up voluntarily⁷;
- 1461 (3) where a claimant in an action in the Queen's Bench Division paid money into court to procure a stay of the petition by the defendant and the claimant on a counterclaim⁸;
- 1462 (4) where a receiver was appointed in an action by a wife against her husband claiming the assets of a club run by them jointly and she abandoned the claim⁹;
- 1463 (5) where money was paid into court with a denial of liability but the client proceeded with the claim and recovered a smaller sum¹⁰;
- 1464 (6) where money was paid into court as security for the costs of an appeal which was later abandoned¹¹; and
- 1465 (7) where money was paid pursuant to an order for specific performance¹².

1017. Possibility of charge irrespective of interest.

A claim for a charging order is of a similar nature to a claim for salvage¹. Consequently the order may charge the property recovered or preserved and need not be limited to the client's interest in it², or may be made even though the client has no interest in the property³. In general the order may be made wherever property has been recovered or preserved in proceedings by reason of the solicitor's employment and as against every person taking the benefit of the recovery or preservation⁴. The court will not charge the interests of other people on the property unless the client is unable to pay the costs⁵. The charge should be confined to the property recovered or preserved which itself may be a limited interest⁶.

1018. Priority of charging orders.

The charge which a solicitor obtains under the statutory charging order¹ is usually a first charge on the property² but the making of the order and thus its terms, and the priority it confers, are matters of discretion³. The solicitor may obtain priority over creditors⁴, or over a judgment creditor attaching a debt⁵, or over his client's trustee in bankruptcy in respect of costs incurred before notice of the act of bankruptcy⁶, or in respect of the costs of proceedings taken by an undischarged bankrupt and adopted by the trustee in bankruptcy⁷, or over a repurchaser including a mortgagee who has notice of the right to claim the order, that is in effect notice that the property is being recovered or preserved in proceedings⁸, or over a claim for wages and necessities in an Admiralty action⁹. All conveyances and acts done to defeat or operating to defeat¹⁰ the charge are void as against the solicitor¹¹, although he does not obtain priority over the rights of a bona fide purchaser for value who has taken a conveyance without notice¹², or over the rights of trustees to an indemnity out of the trust's estate¹³.

As between successive solicitors the former solicitor will be granted a charging order subject to the prior right of the solicitor then acting¹⁴.

1 le under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 73(1)(a): see PARA 1011.

2 The only exception for which the Solicitors Act 1974 s 73 provides is in favour of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice who takes a conveyance of the property: see the text and note 12. 1019. Courts which may make charging orders.

Every judge of the High Court¹, whether sitting in bankruptcy or not², has jurisdiction in court or in chambers³ to make a charging order and even if the property is recovered or preserved by proceedings before the Court of Appeal, it is not necessary to apply to that court for the order⁴. Statutory jurisdiction is expressly conferred on the court in which the solicitor was employed to prosecute or defend proceedings⁵, and accordingly the application should be made to the judge who tried the action where that is reasonably possible⁶. The application is one which is appropriately made in chambers⁷ to a judge in chambers, a master, a costs judge or a district judge of the Family Division⁸. In bankruptcy or winding-up proceedings power to make a charging order may be delegated to the district judge⁹.

For the purpose of regulating the remuneration of a solicitor in respect of contentious business¹⁰ done by him in a county court, a county court has jurisdiction to make a charging order and the above considerations¹¹ apply equally with regard to applications to a county court¹².

1020. Procedure on application for charging order.

Applications for a charging order may be made by:

- 1466 (1) the solicitor acting at the time of recovering or preserving the property¹;
- 1467 (2) a former solicitor²;
- 1468 (3) several former solicitors together³;
- 1469 (4) the personal representative of the solicitor⁴; or
- 1470 (5) an assignee of the costs⁵, but not by the client⁶ or London agents as against the lay client⁷.

The application should not be made *ex parte*⁸, but if an ex parte order is made any application to set it aside should be made promptly⁹. The application for a charging order may be made to a master, a costs judge or a district judge¹⁰. If the order will affect the interests of persons other than the client, those persons should be served but, if the client's interests alone will be affected, he alone need be served¹¹. In a proper case substituted service will be ordered¹². Application may be made for an order in respect of the difference between the solicitor and own client (that is, indemnity) and standard basis for costs¹³.

1021. Scope of charging order.

A charging order¹ should be limited to charge only costs properly incurred in recovering or preserving property². In an administration action the charging order must be limited to the costs properly incurred in recovering and preserving the money in court, and general administration costs cannot be claimed³, but this limitation does not apply in partnership actions⁴. A charging order may direct the costs to be assessed⁵, although such an assessment does not have all the incidence of an assessment under the Solicitors Act 1974⁶. The assessment of costs as between solicitor and own client for the purpose of a statutory charging order can be directed without special circumstances being shown, even if the facts are such that if assessment were sought in the usual way under that Act it would be necessary for the client to show special circumstances in order to obtain an order for assessment, for example where more than a year has elapsed since the bill of costs was delivered⁷. The court may give directions for raising money to pay or for paying the assessed costs⁸ out of the property recovered or preserved⁹ but an application before the costs are directed to be paid in the cause is premature¹⁰. The solicitor's costs of the application may be directed to be paid and added to the amount charged¹¹, and so may the solicitor's costs of an appeal where the order is made by the Court of Appeal¹². After a charging order has been made a stop order may be obtained on funds in court, but the making of such an order does not entitle the solicitor, not being a party to the proceedings, to be represented as a further consideration of the action¹³.

NOTE 9--Amendment made by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 para 68 in force 1 January 2010: SI 2009/3250.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/3. SOLICITORS/(10) LEGAL AGENTS/(i) Employment of Agent/1022. When an agent may be employed.

(10) LEGAL AGENTS

(i) Employment of Agent

1022. When an agent may be employed.

A solicitor practising in the country who wishes to do work in London of either a contentious or a non-contentious character may (although he is not obliged to) employ a London solicitor as agent, and likewise solicitors practising in London or in particular districts may employ solicitors elsewhere on agency terms for particular purposes, such as the service of an injunction¹. There is no agency relationship between the country and London offices of the same firm, nor between two firms with a common partner². Normally there is no general retainer of a London agent by his country principal; the agent's retainer commences when he is instructed in a particular matter³. The employment of one solicitor by another on agency terms will be revoked by the death of the employer.

1023. Position between client and principal solicitor.

The employment of a London solicitor as agent is within the scope of the authority of a country solicitor flowing from a retainer for the purposes of litigation proper to be conducted in London¹, but a solicitor has no authority, unless expressly conferred, to arrange that another solicitor is to conduct the matter, not as agent, but as principal². An agent should not enter his or his firm's name as principal solicitor on the record when he is in fact an agent³, and should not indorse a petition in such character; the process is liable to be set aside, since the lay client has not given authority⁴. The client, in general, is not concerned with the agent's employment, as there is no privity between them⁵. Thus, the solicitor directly employed by the client is responsible to the client for the agent's negligence⁶ or misconduct⁷, and the client cannot object to paying a solicitor his proper charges because there is some agreement between him and another solicitor for sharing those charges⁸. However, the principal solicitor will be liable to account for his profit from the agency transaction if he holds a fiduciary position which prevents him from retaining such profit for his own benefit⁹. The client may be bound against third parties by the agent's acts¹⁰. The client may invoke the court's inherent jurisdiction over its officers against the agent¹¹ and will be entitled to require details of the agent's bills to be included in the solicitor's bills¹². The client's right to change his solicitor on the record in litigation may be impeded by the agreement between the principal solicitor and the agent¹³.

(ii) Relations between Agent and Client of Principal Solicitor

1024. Relation between client and solicitor agent.

The relationship of solicitor and client does not exist between the agent and the client, since there is no privity of contract between them¹, unless the agent becomes the principal solicitor²; nor is there privity of contract between the solicitor agent and any other agent, such as an auctioneer employed by the principal solicitor³. The solicitor agent is, however, answerable to the court as its officer and is therefore in effect liable to the client for misconduct⁴. It may be that the solicitor agent will be liable to the client in negligence⁵ and the agent may have wasted costs disallowed by the court⁶. The agent cannot sue the client for his costs⁷; the credit is given to the principal solicitor⁸. A custom has been established that the principal solicitor, not the lay client, is liable to the agent in the absence of express agreement to the contrary⁹. This custom, which is not confined to the case of a country solicitor and a country agent, extends also to that of country solicitor and London agent¹⁰. It has, however, no application as between English solicitors and Irish solicitors, and accordingly the right of an Irish solicitor instructed by an English solicitor to recover from the client is to be decided under the general law of principal and agent¹¹. The client has no right to claim assessment of the solicitor agent's bill¹²; nor is he entitled, where money is received on his behalf by the solicitor agent in the ordinary course of business, to maintain an action against the solicitor agent to enforce payment to himself¹³. He may, however, in a proper case apply under the court's summary jurisdiction for an order for payment against the solicitor agent as an officer of the court¹⁴, as, for instance, where the solicitor agent had no authority either from the client or from the principal solicitor to receive the money¹⁵, or where he wrongfully claims a lien¹⁶.

As against the lay client, an agent who has conducted litigation will have a lien¹ on the property recovered in the litigation through his exertions², extending to the costs of the litigation³. However, the agent is not employed by the lay client so as to be able to obtain a charging order⁴.

As against the lay client an agent who has papers of the client in his hands⁵ can have no greater right than the principal solicitor has⁶. If, therefore, the principal solicitor would have a retaining lien against the lay client if the papers were held by that solicitor, then the agent has a lien on them as against the lay client extending to no greater sum than the principal solicitor's lien extends to, but, subject to that limit, extending to the whole balance due from the principal solicitor to the agent⁷. If, on the other hand, the principal solicitor would have no retaining lien as against the lay client if the papers were held by that solicitor, then the agent has no retaining lien as against the lay client⁸, although if, after notice given by the agent to the lay client not to pay money to the principal solicitor without providing for the agent's claim, the lay client makes a payment contrary to the notice, the agent's retaining lien is not prejudiced by the payment⁹. It is immaterial whether the payment to the principal solicitor discharging his costs is in cash or by set-off¹⁰.

(iii) Relations between Agent and Principal Solicitor

1026. Rights and liabilities of principal solicitor.

The principal solicitor stands to the solicitor agent in the relationship of principal¹, and is responsible to the agent for his costs². The principal solicitor, therefore, bears any loss which may arise from the client's failure to pay; on the other hand, he is entitled to retain for his own benefit any collateral advantage accruing from the business undertaken, such as interest paid on the amount of costs remaining unpaid³. If the principal solicitor has instructed his agent to brief counsel and he has done so, the principal solicitor cannot after briefs have been delivered revoke the agent's authority to pay counsel's fees⁴. Money received by an agent to meet a balance of account including counsel's fees is not, at any rate where the fees are represented as having been paid although they are outstanding, subject to a trust to pay the fees, but the principal solicitor may prove in the estate of the agent for the amount paid on account of those fees⁵.

1 Re Nelson, Son and Hastings (1885) 30 ChD 1 at 9-10, CA, per Pearson J. Thus, the principal solicitor may be the client of the agent within the meaning of the word 'client' in a covenant restraining competition expressed in articles of clerkship (Reid v Burrows [1892] 2 Ch 413), but the relationship between them is not exactly that of solicitor and client (Ward v Eyre (1880) 15 ChD 130, CA), although the agent may be made responsible to the principal solicitor for negligence (see Dicas v Jay (1830) 6 Bing 519; and the cases cited in PARA 1023 notes 6-7; Robbins v Fennell (1847) 11 QB 248 at 256 (privity of contract)).

As between the solicitor agent and the principal solicitor, the agent, having conducted litigation, has a lien¹ on property recovered for the lay client by the agent's exertions extending to the whole balance of his account with the principal solicitor for professional business². 1028. Remuneration of solicitor agent.

The agent's bill of costs to his principal can be assessed by the principal as being the chargeable party¹ and the court can direct assessment of the whole or part of the bill on such terms as it thinks fit under its inherent jurisdiction over the conduct of its officers².

Where a London agent acts for a country solicitor in several matters he will customarily be entitled to payment for work done at agreed intervals notwithstanding that the costs of particular proceedings have yet to be allowed or assessed. Failure of agent and principal to agree an appropriate basis for remuneration may give rise to problems on any assessment as to whether bills form part of an account to be settled at definite intervals or comprise a single bill rendered in separate chapters³.

The principal solicitor may obtain delivery¹ of a bill of costs from his solicitor agent and assess his bill², but where detailed bills were delivered annually by the agent accompanied by cash accounts, it was held that the fact that part of the business to which they related was litigation either uncompleted or current in more than one year, and that the balances shown by the accounts were carried over, did not entitle the principal solicitor to taxation (now assessment) of the bills delivered more than one year previously, special circumstances not being shown, since the bills must be regarded as separate bills and not as parts of one whole bill³. The non-payment of counsel's fees charged in the bill, where the principal solicitor has not provided the requisite funds, does not constitute a special circumstance for the purpose of entitling the client to taxation (now assessment) where he would not otherwise be entitled⁴.

(iv) Relations between Agent and Opposite Parties

1030. Agent's authority.

As regards the opposite parties to any litigation in which an agent is employed as solicitor on the record, he has authority to bind both the principal solicitor¹ and the client in all matters connected with his employment. Thus, he has authority to waive any irregularity in the proceedings², to grant indulgence³, to consent to any order being made⁴ or to compromise the action⁵, and payment to him of the amount due is valid as against the client⁶. To serve on the principal solicitor affidavits in support of a notice of motion whilst serving the notice of motion itself on the agent is irregular⁷, and a London agent has no authority to receive notice of appeal from a county court in a district in or near to which the principal solicitor carries on business⁸, even though the action was originally remitted from the High Court⁹.

The agent must act strictly as agent for the principal solicitor from whom his authority flows. Thus, the agent should be described in process as such¹⁰, and his authority terminates when that of the principal solicitor is terminated¹¹. Similarly, the death of the principal solicitor puts an end to the agent's authority¹², except for formal purposes, such as signing judgment¹³.

(i) Introduction

1033. Meaning of 'barrister'.

The term 'barrister'¹ is the name of a degree² and refers to a person who holds that degree³. It is also the name of a profession, and of a person who practises law as a member of that profession⁴.

Possession of the degree of barrister is a prerequisite of entitlement to practise as a barrister in England and Wales⁵, and subjects the holder, whether practising or not, to a code of professional conduct and a system of discipline⁶. It confers on the holder certain rights and privileges, including rights of audience before the courts⁷; it also renders the holder eligible for appointment to certain public offices⁸.

³ The Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) defines a barrister as an individual who has been called to the Bar by one of the Inns of Court and who has not ceased to be a member of the Bar: para 1001. For the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, except where the context otherwise requires, 'barrister' means an individual who has been called to the Bar by an Inn of Court and is not disbarred by order of an Inn of Court: s 207(1). As to the Bar see PARA 1034. As to call to the Bar see PARAS 1039, 1075-1078. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

4 In the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004), such a person is described as a 'practising barrister': see PARA 1035. As to what constitutes practising as a barrister see PARA 1152. As from a day to be appointed it is an offence for an unqualified person to pretend to be a barrister: see the Legal Services Act 2007 s 181; and PARA 594.

5 As to the right to practise as a barrister see PARA 1153. Other conditions that a barrister must satisfy in order to be entitled to practise as such include completion of applicable training and professional development requirements (see PARA 1063 et seq) and possession of a current practising certificate (see PARA 1155).

1034. Meaning of 'the Bar'.

The expression 'the Bar', which in its original sense referred to a partition separating the part of the court in which the judges sit from the rest of the court¹, in its modern sense is used as a collective term to refer to all persons who have been 'called to the Bar' by an Inn of Court², that is, all barristers of England and Wales³.

1 See Bellot Some Early Law Courts and the English Bar (1922) 38 LQR 168. The 'bar' from which the term 'barrister' derives is not the bar of an actual court but the bar of the mock courts within the Inns at which students who were 'called to the bar' participated in advocacy exercises: see PARA 1039.

2 As to the establishment and institution of the Inns of Court see PARA 1039; and as to the Inns of Court today see PARAS 1050-1057. As to call to the Bar see PARAS 1075-1079.

3 See the Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 1, which defines 'the Bar' as all self-employed barristers, employed and non-practising barristers. As to the Introduction and Constitutions see PARA 1042 note 8. The Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) (as to which see PARA 1150) defines the 'Bar' as the Bar of England and Wales: para 1001. As to self-employed barristers see PARA 1036. As to employed barristers see PARA 1037. As to non-practising barristers see PARA 1035.

1035. Practising and non-practising barristers.

For the purposes of the professional rules governing the Bar¹, a distinction is drawn between 'practising' and 'non-practising' barristers². There are two categories of practising barrister, namely, self-employed barristers³ and employed barristers⁴. Non-practising barristers include persons who are practising law but not in the capacity of barrister (such as barristers who are practising as solicitors⁵), as well as all other persons who hold the degree of barrister but are not practising as such⁶.

1 The Introduction and Constitutions (2008) (see PARA 1042 note 8); the Consolidated Regulations (2007) (see PARA 1060); and the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) (see PARA 1150).

2 A 'practising barrister' is a barrister who is practising as such within the meaning of the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 201 (see PARA 1152), and a 'non-practising barrister' is a barrister who is not a 'practising barrister': para 1001. 1036. Self-employed barristers.

For the purposes of the professional rules governing the Bar¹, a self-employed barrister² is a practising barrister³ other than an employed barrister⁴ acting in the course of his employment⁵. The main differences in the rules applicable to self-employed barristers and employed barristers concern the functions they may undertake⁶ and the persons to whom they may supply legal services⁷ and from whom they may take instructions⁸.

1 Ie the Introduction and Constitutions (2008) (see PARA 1042 note 8); the Consolidated Regulations (2007) (see PARA 1060); and the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) (see PARA 1150).

2 Self-employed barristers were formerly known as 'barristers in independent practice', which expression is still used by the Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1, in defining such a barrister (ie by reference to the definition contained in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001).

3 As to the meaning of 'practising barrister' see PARA 1035 note 2. As to what constitutes practising as a barrister for this purpose see PARA 1152. As to barristers' right to practise see PARA 1153.

4 As to employed barristers see PARA 1037.

5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001.

6 Unlike employed barristers, self-employed barristers do not have the right to conduct litigation (see PARA 1162) and are subject to certain restrictions on the legal services which they may supply (see PARA 1160).

7 As to the meaning of 'legal services' see PARA 1152. There are no general restrictions on the persons to whom self-employed barristers may supply legal services provided they satisfy the relevant requirements: see PARA 1159. As to the persons to whom employed barristers may supply legal services see PARA 1161.

1037. Employed barristers.

For the purposes of the professional rules governing the Bar¹, an 'employed barrister' means a practising barrister² who is employed either under a contract of employment or by virtue of an office under the Crown or in the institutions of the European Community and who supplies legal services³ as a barrister in the course of his employment⁴. A barrister employed to supply legal services under a contract for services may also be treated as an employed barrister for these purposes provided that the contract is in writing, is for a determinate period⁵, and is the only contract under which the barrister is supplying legal services during that period⁶.

Unlike self-employed barristers⁷, employed barristers have the right to conduct litigation⁸, and are not subject to the same restrictions on the legal services which they may supply⁹. As a general rule, however, an employed barrister acting in the course of his employment may only supply legal services to his employer¹⁰ (and certain associated persons) and not to the public¹¹.

1 In the Introduction and Constitutions (2008) (see PARA 1042 note 8); the Consolidated Regulations (2007) (see PARA 1060); and the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) (see PARA 1150).

2 As to the meaning of 'practising barrister' see PARA 1035 note 2. As to what constitutes practising as a barrister for this purpose see PARA 1152. As to barristers' right to practise see PARA 1153.

4 Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 1; Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1; Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001. Note, however, that for the purposes of the Introduction and Constitutions (2008), 'employed barrister' does not include a person carrying out full-time judicial functions: see Pt I (Introduction) para 1.

5 This is subject to any provision for earlier termination on notice: Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 1; Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1; Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 503(b).

6 Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 1; Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1; Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 503. The Bar Standards Board may grant a specific waiver of the requirement that the contract for services is the only contract under which the barrister is supplying legal services during the relevant period: Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 1; Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1; Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 503(c). As to the Bar Council see PARAS 1042-1048. The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However the body responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

9 As to the restrictions on the legal services which self-employed barristers may supply see PARA 1160.

10 For these purposes, 'employer' means the person by whom the employed barrister is employed as such and any holding, subsidiary or associated company, corporate body or firm of that person: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001.

(ii) Origins and Development

1038. The emergence of the profession.

There has been a division of function between advocate ('barrister' in modern usage) and attorney or solicitor in the English legal profession, as in the civil law system, since a secular legal profession first emerged in England at the beginning of the thirteenth century¹. Originally, however, there was nothing to prevent a barrister from soliciting causes or dealing directly with clients as part of his profession, and many barristers did so. However, the practice of removing the barrister from direct contact with the lay client developed over the centuries until it became the 'almost uniform usage'². In 1888, the Attorney General gave a ruling that a barrister should not act or advise without the intervention of a solicitor in any contentious matter³, and the rule was later extended to non-contentious matters⁴.

The final stage in the emergence of the Bar as a distinct profession⁵ was the exclusion of attorneys and solicitors from the Inns of Court⁶ and thus from the degree of barrister⁷.

2 In Doe d Bennett v Hale (1850) 15 QB 171 at 186, per Lord Campbell CJ. An important step in the process of differentiation between the professions was the Act 2 Geo 2 c 23 of 1728 ('For the better Regulation of Attorneys and Solicitors') (see 13 North Lives of the Norths (1890) p 139), which prohibited a person from acting as an attorney or a solicitor unless he had taken the oath prescribed by the Act and had been admitted and enrolled. In 1762, the Society of Gentlemen Practisers threatened to prosecute any barrister found transacting any business which properly belonged to the profession of attorneys and solicitors: see Birks Gentlemen of the Law (1960) pp 136, 195-196. See further 6 Holdsworth History of English Law (2nd Edn, 1937) pp 439-440.

3 The ruling was given by the Attorney General, Sir Richard Webster, in answer to a query from a barrister, Robert Yerburgh MP. The correspondence was published in the Times, 29 June 1888, and in the Law Times, 7 July 1888, and is reproduced in (1888) 85 LT Jo 176. 1039. A brief history of the profession.

During the fourteenth century the advocates practising in the Court of Common Bench became organised into a guild or society known as the order of serjeants-at-law¹. Concurrently there grew up a body of law students (or apprentices) who sat in a gallery at Westminster Hall to listen and take notes². Some of these apprentices-at-law would subsequently become serjeants³, but of the many who were not admitted to the order, some practised as advocates in the King's Bench, Chancery and lesser courts, and it was from this residual category of advocates that the profession of barrister emerged.

The societies which constitute the Inns of Court have existed from very ancient times and their original institution nowhere precisely appears⁴. In the fourteenth century the apprentices-at-law, whose work brought them to London when the courts were in session, lived in town houses (that is, inns) near the City of London⁵. Of these, four inns came to predominate, which are the four Inns of Court that still remain⁶. The Inns soon developed a system of education from which the call to the bar emerged⁷. Originally the call seems to have involved no more than being invited, after having taken part in learning exercises for the requisite length of time, to argue at a moot⁸. Gradually, however, the position of barrister became a more formal rank or degree within the Inns, and calls to the Bar assumed greater solemnity⁹. It was recognised as a public degree during the reign of Elizabeth I¹⁰. The educational life of the Inns of Court declined during the earlier part of the seventeenth century and collapsed during the Civil War¹¹. Although the old system of readings and moots was revived after the Restoration, it was discontinued or passed into an empty form before the end of the reign of Charles II¹².

The Council of Legal Education was established in 1852, and as a result of its initiatives the four Inns in 1863 for the first time made Consolidated Regulations, regulating the admission of students, the mode of keeping terms, the calling of students to the Bar, the granting of certificates to practise under the Bar and legal education¹³. The Council retained responsibility for the examination and training of law students until 1997 when the School of Law ceased to be administered by the Council and became a company limited by guarantee, and the Inns of Court and the Bar Educational Trust was established¹⁴.

The offices of Attorney General and Solicitor General, the law officers of the Crown, date from the fifteenth century¹⁵. By the end of the sixteenth century there had grown up a body of 'Her Majesty's learned counsel', retained by the Crown to assist the law officers in their work¹⁶. That group eventually evolved into Queen's Counsel as we understand them today¹⁷.

It appears that at least three of the four Inns had achieved their superiority by 1388, when a note in a manuscript Year Book of a call of eight serjeants records two as being called from Gray's Inn, five from the Inner Temple and one from the Middle Temple: see Baker 'The Inns of Court in 1388' (1976) 92 LQR 184. The first record of a serjeant called from Lincoln's Inn is in 1425.

7 So far as can be ascertained, it was in connection with moots organised by the Inns that the term 'barrister' originated. The earliest known instance of the use of which is in the Black Books of Lincoln's Inn in Trinity Term 1455, where 'two of the best barristers' of the Inn ('duo de optimis barrer') are mentioned: see 1 Lincoln's Inn Black Books 26.

In December 1883 a body to be called the 'Bar Committee' was constituted 'to collect and express the opinions of the members of the Bar on matters affecting the profession, and to take such action thereon as may be expedient'¹. The Bar Committee, which consisted of persons elected by the whole Bar, and was supported by voluntary contributions, continued to act until 1894, when its role was taken over by the General Council of the Bar (the 'Bar Council'), a consultative and advisory body constituted by regulations approved by the Bar in general meeting².

It was not until 1966 that a single body was established by resolutions of the Inns called the Senate of the Four Inns of Court to act on behalf of the Inns collectively in matters of common interest³. The Senate derived its authority from the Inns⁴, and the Bar Council was also represented on it⁵. Its powers, however, were circumscribed, and in 1974 the Senate of the Four Inns of Court was replaced by a new body called the Senate of the Inns of Court and the Bar⁶. This body was intended to provide a stronger central organisation for the profession as a whole⁷. It was made up of 75 representatives of the Inns and the Bar⁸. The Bar representatives also formed the membership of the Bar Council, which was reconstituted under the Regulations of the Senate of the Inns of Court and the Bar, but which remained an autonomous body for the purposes of its separate powers and functions⁹. This joint representative structure lasted until 1987, when it was dissolved¹⁰.

1 See (1883) 75 LT Jo 172; (1883) 76 LT Jo 65, 154. The formation of this body resulted from the presentation of a petition to the Attorney General as head of the Bar by 285 barristers. As to the Bar as a profession see PARA 1034.

With effect from 1 January 1987, the Senate of the Inns of Court and the Bar¹ was dissolved and the Bar Council² was reconstituted as the central governing body of the Bar³. The Inns have undertaken to accept and implement the general policies laid down by the Bar Council, provided such policies are not contrary to any trust affecting their property or any of their other legal obligations⁴. A body called the Council of the Inns of Court (the 'Inns' Council') was set up to consult with the Bar Council and to represent and formulate policies for the Inns⁵. With effect from 1 January 2006, the regulatory and representative functions of the Bar Council were separated, with the former vested in the Bar Standards Board⁶, and the latter remaining with the Bar Council⁷.

1048. Implementation of policies affecting Inns of Court.

The Bar Council¹ must refer to the Inns' Council² any general policy it lays down which affects the assets or liabilities of the Inns of Court (or any of the Inns)³ or of the Inns of Court and the Bar Educational Trust⁴, or which otherwise requires implementation or acceptance by the Inns (or any of them) or the Trust⁵. The Inns' Council has the discretion to refer the policy back to the Bar Council⁶, and must refer back such a policy if a resolution of the Inns' Council to implement or accept it is not passed⁷. On referring back any such policy, the Inns' Council must also report to the Bar Council its observations and recommendations on that policy⁸. If, after considering these observations and recommendations, the Bar Council decides to amend the policy, it must refer the amended policy to the Inns' Council to provide an opportunity for further observations and recommendations⁹, in which event the Inns' Council may, or failing the passing of a resolution for implementation must, refer the amended policy, together with its observations and recommendations thereon, back to the Bar Council¹⁰.

If the Bar Council refers a general policy to the Inns' Council and it is not referred back, or it is referred back and is then returned, unamended, with a request that the Inns' Council implement or accept it, then the Inns' Council is obliged (though without accepting any obligation enforceable in law) to procure the implementation or acceptance of the policy¹¹. If, however, the Inns' Council refers any general policy back to the Bar Council, with the observation that the policy is in its opinion likely to be detrimental to any of the Inns or their members, the Inns' Council cannot be required to procure the implementation or acceptance of the policy unless it has been approved by a two-thirds' majority of the Bar Council¹².

C. THE INNS OF COURT

(A) IN GENERAL

1050. Constitution and membership of the Inns of Court.

The Inns of Court (namely, the Inner Temple, the Middle Temple, Gray's Inn and Lincoln's Inn), which represent the oldest form of organisation of the Bar¹, are voluntary unincorporated societies². Whilst the four Inns are independent of each other, they have similar constitutions, are of equal standing and act together in matters affecting their common interest through the medium of the Inns' Council³. The Inns have agreed, along with the Bar Council⁴, on certain regulations which govern the admission of students and call to the Bar⁵. They also founded and fund the Inns of Court and the Bar Educational Trust⁶.

The principal functions exercised individually by the Inns are the letting of accommodation to barristers for use as professional chambers⁷; the provision of law libraries, common rooms and dining facilities to benchers⁸, barristers and students; financial assistance to new entrants to the profession through the award of scholarships and bursaries to students and young barristers; and contribution to the training of students and young barristers through dining and the organisation of moots and talks.

The property of each Inn is vested in trustees, who are appointed from among the benchers, and is held on charitable trust for the furtherance of the study and practice of law⁹.

Every barrister must belong to one of the Inns of Court and a barrister will not be permitted by the benchers to cease to be a member of an Inn of Court without undertaking not to practise¹⁰. A person who has been expelled from one of the Inns will not be admitted as a member of any of the others¹¹.

(B) THE BENCHERS

1051. Authority of the benchers.

The benchers are the governing body of each of the Inns of Court¹. They have sole authority² to admit students to the Inn³, to call students to the Bar⁴, and to appoint members of the Inn to their own number. The benchers also decide on the amount which the members of the Inn are obliged to pay and on the application of the moneys so raised. The duties of the benchers of an Inn in relation to the admission, education and call of students, and to barrister members are carried out to maintain the standards of the profession for the benefit of the both Bar and the public⁵.

Disciplinary authority over members of the Inn is also vested in the benchers⁶. However, except in so far as it relates to the domestic affairs of the Inns, such authority has now been delegated to the Inns' Council in respect of barristers⁷. The Inns' Council appoints disciplinary tribunals to adjudicate allegations of professional misconduct or breach of proper professional standards preferred against barristers by the Complaints Committee of the Bar Standards Board⁸. The benchers' powers include expulsion and suspension of any member from the Inn⁹. They may also disbench one of their own number¹⁰. If the benchers disbench one of their own number, they must give reasons for their action¹¹. The benchers may readmit to their Inn a former barrister who has been disbarred either at his own request or for a disciplinary offence¹².

1 As to the establishment and institution of the Inns of Court see PARA 1039.

2 An appeal may be made against a decision of the benchers: see PARA 1052.

3 The authority of the benchers is derived from the Consolidated Regulations (2007) and the internal regulations of each Inn. For the common law position see R v Lincoln's Inn Benchers (1825) 4 B & C 855. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060. As to the regulations governing the admission of students see PARAS 1063-1066.

4 As to the requirements for call to the Bar see PARAS 1075-1078. As to the Bar as a profession see PARA 1034. Call to the Bar is the act of the Inn and is complete when the candidate is admitted by the benchers of the Inn: Re Perara (1887) 3 TLR 677.

5 See Seymour v Butterworth (1862) 3 F & F 372.

6 Absolute privilege attached to the disciplinary proceedings of the benchers, and accordingly absolute privilege attaches to disciplinary proceedings against barristers: see Lincoln v Daniels [1962] 1 QB 237, [1961] 3 All ER 740, CA; Marrinan v Vibart [1963] 1 QB 528, [1962] 3 All ER 380, CA. Communications with the Bar Council (eg complaining of a barrister's conduct) are not absolutely privileged (Lincoln v Daniels) but are protected by qualified privilege (Kearns v General Council of the Bar [2003] EWCA Civ 331, [2003] 2 All ER 534, [2003] 1 WLR 1357, CA). The benchers retain the jurisdiction to deal with (1) complaints as to the conduct of barristers which are neither allegations of professional misconduct nor breach of proper professional standards; and (2) complaints of misconduct against student members who are not barristers.

8 As to the Complaints Committee see PARA 1251. As to the Bar Standards Board see PARA 1049.

9 The powers and duties of the benchers are set out in the internal regulations of each Inn. For the common law position see Seymour v Butterworth (1862) 3 F & F 372 at 381; Hudson v Slade (1862) 3 F & F 390 at 410-411.

10 See eg Manisty v Kenealy (1876) 24 WR 918. A bencher guilty of professional misconduct would be disbenched as well as disbarred.

11 The powers and duties of the benchers are set out in the internal regulations of each Inn. See also Report of the Proceedings before the Judges as Visitors of the Inns of Court on the Appeal of A Hayward Esq, QC (1846) p 126.

12 See the Consolidated Regulations (2007) regs 56, 57; and PARA 1079. An application for readmission from a former barrister who has been disbarred for a disciplinary offence must be referred by the Inn concerned to the Complaints Committee, which will consider the application and make a recommendation to the Inn; and whilst the Inn would normally follow this recommendation, the final decision to allow or refuse the application, and whether to impose conditions on any readmission allowed, remains with the Inn: see reg 57(c)-(e).

1052. Appeals from decisions of the benchers.

Any member or would-be member of an Inn of Court¹ who considers himself aggrieved by any order or decision of the benchers² may appeal to the judges of the High Court of Justice, sitting as Visitors to the Inns of Court³. This form of appeal represents the ancient and usual method of redress for any grievance in the Inns and no recourse lies to the ordinary courts⁴, although the decisions of judges sitting as Visitors are susceptible to judicial review⁵. In the same way, the courts have no jurisdiction to entertain a claim brought by a member against the benchers of an Inn relating to the property of the Inn⁶, unless the benchers themselves refer the applicant to the courts⁷. The benchers may themselves resort to the courts, however, in order to recover arrears due from members or to recover possession of their property⁸. When such claims are brought against a member of the Inn, the courts will not entertain any defence which questions the propriety or lawfulness of the benchers' decisions; the only remedy open to an aggrieved member is to appeal to the judges in their capacity as Visitors⁹.

At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed). As to the jurisdiction of the Visitors generally see PARA 1284 et seq. Until 1837 no appeal lay to the judges against the refusal of one of the Inns to admit a student, but since then the judges, by consent of the Inns, hear appeals against a refusal to admit: see the Report of the Proceedings before the Judges as Visitors of the Inns of Court on the Appeal of A Hayward Esq, QC (1846) p 95; Pearce Guide to the Inns of Court (2nd Edn, 1855) p 386. As to refusals to call to the Bar see Harvey's Case (1821); First and Second Reports of the Select Committee on the Inns of Court (1834); Pearce Guide to the Inns of Court (2nd Edn, 1855) p 405. For corresponding powers of a judge in British colonies see A-G of Gambia v Njie [1961] AC 617, [1961] 2 All ER 504, PC.

The procedure governing appeals by students is set out in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe M (Hearings Before the Visitors Rules 2002) r 16.

Cf Hudson v Slade (1862) 3 F & F 390 (action for assault against benchers of the Middle Temple for forcibly seizing documents from the plaintiff at a disciplinary inquiry left to the jury). Thus the courts will not grant a mandatory order to the benchers of an Inn to admit a person as a student (R v Lincoln's Inn Benchers (1825) 4 B & C 855; and see also R v Barnard's Inn (1836) 5 Ad & El 17) or to call a student to the Bar (R v Gray's Inn), and the same would apply a fortiori to a refusal to appoint a barrister as a bencher. Additionally, whilst a student has an inchoate right to be called to the Bar, a barrister has no inchoate right to be called to the bench of his Inn; and if a barrister, even of the rank of Queen's Counsel, is proposed for election by one bencher and seconded by another, the benchers may nevertheless refuse to elect the candidate and need give no reasons for their refusal (Report of the Proceedings before the Judges as Visitors of the Inns of Court on the Appeal of A Hayward Esq, QC (1846) pp 89, 90, 158).

5 See R v Visitors to the Inns of Court, ex p Calder [1994] QB 1, [1993] 2 All ER 876, CA, in which it was held that decisions of judges sitting as Visitors are susceptible to judicial review on the limited grounds that the Visitor had acted outside his jurisdiction, had abused his powers, or had acted in breach of the rules of natural justice.

8 See eg Earl of Rosslyn v Jodrell (1815) 4 Camp 303; Manisty v Kenealy (1876) 24 WR 918. Such claims are generally brought in the name of the trustees in whom the property of the Inn is vested.

(A) CONSTITUTION AND FUNCTIONS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE INNS OF COURT

1053. Constitution.

The Council of the Inns of Court (the Inns' Council)¹ was constituted by the Inns of Court on 1 January 1987 as part of a new structure for the governance of the profession under which the Inns relinquished to the Bar Council² principal responsibility for the formulation of policy for all matters affecting the profession³. In particular, the Inns have undertaken, without accepting any obligation enforceable in law and within the constraints of the trusts affecting their property and their other legal obligations, to accept and to implement the general policies laid down from time to time by the Bar Council⁴.

The Inns have agreed to constitute the Inns' Council for the purposes and with the authority, powers and duties set out in the Inns' Council Constitution⁵. The Constitution is published, as from time to time amended⁶, in a combined document with the Bar Council Constitution⁷ and the Constitution of the Inns of Court and the Bar Educational Trust⁸.

1 The Council of the Inns of Court, as from time to time constituted, is commonly referred to as the Inns' Council: see the Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 1; and the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 1, Sch 1. As to the Introduction and Constitutions see PARA 1042 note 8. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060. As to the establishment and institution of the Inns of Court see PARA 1039.

2 Ie the General Council of the Bar: see PARA 1042 note 1. As to the creation of the Bar Council see PARA 1040. As to the Bar Council today, and the relationship between the Bar Council and the Council of the Inns of Court, see PARAS 1042-1048.

3 As to the establishment of the Inns' Council see PARA 1041; and as to its predecessor bodies, and the structure for the governance of the profession before 1987, see PARA 1040.

4 See the Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 4; and see further PARA 1054. This agreement is, however, subject to restrictions. Any Inn may cancel or amend its undertaking by giving not less than 12 months' notice in writing to the Bar Council: Pt I (Introduction) para 5(a); Pt III (Constitution of the Council of the Inns of Court) para 13(a). Without prejudice to the right of an Inn to give a further notice of cancellation or amendment, any notice amending (as opposed to cancelling) an undertaking is of no effect unless within two months of receiving the notice the Bar Council has given the Inn notice in writing that it consents to the operation thereof: Pt I (Introduction) para 5(b); Pt III (Constitution of the Council of the Inns of Court) para 13(b). Subject to this, on the expiration of any notice of cancellation or amendment, the undertaking on the part of the Inn giving notice is deemed for all relevant purposes to be cancelled or amended in the manner stated in the notice: Pt I (Introduction) para 5(c); Pt III (Constitution of the Council of the Inns of Court) para 13(c). Any Inn giving a notice of cancellation may specify therein the general policy of the Bar Council (if any) which has caused it to give the notice, and if any Inn so specifies it is not under any obligation during the currency of the notice to implement or accept the general policy so specified or, unless the Inn concerned otherwise determines, any other general policy of the Bar Council referred or returned to the Inns' Council (see PARA 1048) during the currency of the notice: Pt I (Introduction) para 5(d); Pt III (Constitution of the Council of the Inns of Court) para 13(d). Any Inn giving notice of amendment may specify therein the general policy, if any, which has caused it to give the notice and if any Inn so specifies it is not (subject to the Bar Council's consent) under any obligation during the currency of the notice to implement or accept that policy except to the extent that such policy is consistent with its undertaking as amended: Pt I (Introduction) para 5(e); Pt III (Constitution of the Council of the Inns of Court) para 13(e).

5 Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 2(b). 'Inns' Council Constitution' means the Constitution of the Council of the Inns of Court set out in the Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt III (Constitution of the Council of the Inns of Court): Pt I (Introduction) para 1.

6 The Inns' Council Constitution may be amended by written agreement of the Inns, provided that without the prior written consent of the Bar Council no amendment may be made to it which would alter directly or indirectly the composition of the Inns' Council or the voting rights of members: Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt III (Constitution of the Council of the Inns of Court) para 16. As to the officers and members of the Inns' Council see PARA 1055. As to the voting rights of Inns' Council members see PARA 1057.

Implementation of Bar Council policies.

1054. Implementation of Bar Council policies.

The Inns' Council¹ is in general obliged to accept and implement such general policies of the Bar Council² which affect the assets or liabilities of the Inns of Court (or any of the Inns)³ or of the Inns of Court and the Bar Educational Trust⁴, or which otherwise require implementation or acceptance by the Inns or the Trust⁵. The Inns' Council is entitled to make observations and recommendations on such policies and to refer them back to the Bar Council for amendment⁶, but may refuse to implement them only: (1) if they are contrary to any trust affecting the property or other legal obligations of the Inns or the Trust⁷; or (2) if so permitted by the provisions of the Inns' Council Constitution⁸ relating to the cancellation or amendment of Inns' undertakings⁹. There are also restrictions on the implementation of policies which are detrimental to the Inns' interests¹⁰. Where a policy is to be implemented or accepted, each of the Treasurers must report the matter to the benchers¹¹ of his Inn and steps must be taken to secure the expeditious implementation of the policy¹².

E. OTHER PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATIONS

There are six associations of barristers, known as circuit messes or circuits, which correspond to the six circuits into which England and Wales are divided for the purposes of the administration of justice, namely, the Northern Circuit, the North Eastern Circuit, the Midland Circuit, the South Eastern Circuit, the Western Circuit and the Wales and Chester Circuit¹. The function of the circuits is to promote standards among, and to provide support, advice and representation for, their members, who are barristers working in those areas. There is also now a seventh circuit, the European Circuit of the Bar in England and Wales, which aims to bring together barristers across Europe.

¹ The circuits were formerly constituted within the Bar's Code of Conduct (see the 4th Edn (1989) para 14) but recent editions have made no reference to the circuits, which are now administered on a non-statutory basis and governed by their own constitutions. Further information on the circuits can be found on the Bar Council website (www.barcouncil.org.uk, at the date at which this volume states the law), and the websites of the relevant circuits (which at the date at which this volume states the law were: www.northerncircuit.org.uk (the Northern Circuit); www.northeasterncircuit.co.uk (the North Eastern Circuit); www.midlandcircuit.co.uk (the Midland Circuit); www.walesandchestercircuit.org.uk (the Wales and Chester Circuit); www.southeastcircuit.org.uk (the South Eastern Circuit); www.westerncircuit.org.uk (the Western Circuit); www.europeancircuit.com (the European Circuit)). 1059. Specialist bar associations.

A number of specialist bar associations have been established in recent years. Reflecting the increasing trend towards specialisation, they cater for barristers who practise in particular fields of specialisation. - 1541 (5) the Commercial Bar Association;
- 1542 (6) the Criminal Bar Association;
- 1543 (7) the Employment Law Bar Association;
- 1544 (8) the Family Law Bar Association;
- 1545 (9) the Intellectual Property Bar Association;
- 1546 (10) the Justices' Clerks Society;
- 1547 (11) the London Common Law and Commercial Bar Association;
- 1548 (12) the Midland Chancery and Commercial Bar Association;
- 1549 (13) the Northern Chancery Bar Association;
- 1550 (14) the Northern Circuit Commercial Bar Association;

There are also four employed bar associations:

- 1558 (a) the Association of First Division Civil Servants (Legal);
- 1559 (b) the Association of First Division Civil Servants (CPS);
- 1560 (c) the Bar Association for Commerce, Finance and Industry; and
- 1561 (d) the Bar Association for Local Government and the Public Service.

(i) Administration of the Education of Barristers

1060. The Consolidated Regulations.

The Consolidated Regulations¹ (made jointly by the Inns' Council² and the Bar Standards Board³) govern the manner in which a person may be admitted to one of the Inns of Court⁴ and qualify as a barrister. They regulate admission and term keeping⁵, the training and assessment of students⁶, call to the Bar⁷, and pupillage⁸. The regulations also make provision for the call to the Bar of lawyers holding relevant qualifications, and of certain distinguished academics, without fulfilling some or all of the requirements applicable to the generality of students⁹.

Any breach of any requirement or provision of the regulations, or of any term of any undertaking given under them, or any misstatement of fact in any declaration made under them, may involve disciplinary action¹⁰. However, the Bar Standards Board may exempt any person wholly or in part from obligations with regard to training and assessment, or pupillage and entry into practice¹¹, and its Qualifications Committee¹² may modify or dispense with any requirement or provision of these regulations (including any term of any undertaking given there under), or excuse any breach of or non compliance with any such requirement or provision¹³.

The Bar Standards Board and the Inns' Council in consultation with one another may from time to time amend the regulations¹⁴.

1 Ie the Consolidated Regulations of the Inns of Court and the General Council of the Bar (2007). Where necessary in this title, this document will be referred to as the 'Consolidated Regulations (2007)'. The Bar Standards Board has applied to the Secretary of State to replace the Consolidated Regulations (2007) with the 'Bar Training Regulations' to simplify the rules wherever possible and to put in place a framework under which responsibility for training and regulation is vested in the Board. At the date at which this volume states the law the Secretary of State had not yet approved the new regulations.

2 As to the meaning of 'Inns' Council' see PARA 1053 note 1.

3 'Bar Standards Board' means the board established under the Standing Orders of the General Council of the Bar to examine and oversee the regulatory function of the Council: Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1. As to the Bar Standards Board generally see PARA 1049.

11 See the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 58(a).

12 'Qualifications Committee' means the Qualifications Committee of the Bar Standards Board as defined in the Standing Orders of the General Council of the Bar: Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1. As to the Qualifications Committee see PARA 1049.

13 See the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 58(b). Any petition for the exercise of this power of the Qualifications Committee must be addressed to the Masters of the Bench through the Under Treasurer who must forward the same to the Qualifications Committee for adjudication together with such observations thereon as the Masters of the Bench may think fit to make: reg 58(c). 'Masters of the Bench' means the Masters of the Bench of the Inn to which the applicant seeks admission or of which the student or barrister concerned is a member: Sch 1. 'Applicant' means a person applying for admission to an Inn as a student: Sch 1.

14 See the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 59. The Bar Standards Board, acting in consultation with the Inns Council has the power to amend reg 30(d) and Pt V (regs 41-54) (see PARAS 1080-1098); and the Inns Council, acting in consultation with the Bar Standards Board, has the power to amend the remainder of the regulations.

Until a day to be appointed amendments do not have effect unless approved by the Secretary of State: see the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 29, Sch 4 para 8 (s 29, Sch 4 substituted by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 41, Sch 5 paras 1, 2; and the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 4 paras 8, 17; amended by SI 2003/1887; and prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007, ss 208(1), 210, Sch 21, paras 83, 100(a), Sch 23). The Secretary of State may also require the regulations to be altered where they unduly restrict rights of audience: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 4 para 17 (as so substituted, amended and prospectively repealed).

1062. The Inns of Court and the Bar Educational Trust.

The Inns of Court and the Bar Educational Trust hold and administer the assets previously held by the Council of Legal Education¹, other than those that have been transferred to the Inns of Court School of Law². Until 1 February 1997 the Council was fully responsible for the examination and training of student members of the Inns and for the administration of the School of Law; from that date, the School of Law ceased to be administered by the Council and became a company limited by guarantee, and such of the assets of the Council as were not henceforth held on trust for the purposes of the School (the 'Trust Fund') were held by and for the purposes of the Trust³.

The Trustees⁴ are required to apply the income from the Trust Fund⁵ for the purposes of education and training for the Bar and in particular:

- 1562 (1) the education and training of pupils⁶;
- 1563 (2) the continuing education of young and recently qualified barristers⁷; and
- 1564 (3) the formulation and implementation of policies for, and the regulation of all aspects of, education and training, qualification for call, the grant of rights of audience⁸, and the maintenance of rules of conduct⁹.

1 The Council of Legal Education was established in 1852 by resolutions passed by the four Inns of Court: see further PARA 1039. The Council was reconstituted on and after 1 February 1997 as the Trustees of the Inns of Court and Bar Educational Trust: see the Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 3(d). As to the Introduction and Constitutions see PARA 1042 note 8.

A. ADMISSION OF STUDENTS

1063. Requirements for admission.

In general¹, no person may be called to the Bar² of England and Wales unless he has completed both the academic and vocational stages of training³, and a person must have been admitted as a student⁴ to one of the Inns before he can attend a vocational course⁵. In order to become a student, an applicant⁶ must usually possess certain educational qualifications⁷ and must produce two certificates of good character⁸. Certain persons are not eligible for admission⁹.

A person who is admitted or readmitted¹⁰ as a student member of an Inn must observe such regulations as may from time to time be made by the Inn concerning the conduct and discipline of its students¹¹, keep his Inn informed of any change of address¹² or relevant change in his status¹³, and may not practise as a solicitor¹⁴ in any part of the United Kingdom save in the exercise of his existing rights of audience (if any) as a solicitor¹⁵. He must declare his intention to comply with these requirements in the admission declaration he is required to sign¹⁶, in which he must also declare his date of birth¹⁷ and the occupations (if any) in which he is engaged¹⁸ and give undertakings as to whether:

- 1565 (1) he has been convicted of any relevant criminal offence in any part of the world, or has criminal proceedings pending against him in respect of any relevant offence¹⁹;
- 1566 (2) he has had a bankruptcy order made against him in any part of the world²⁰;
- 1567 (3) he has been made the subject of an order, in civil proceedings in any jurisdiction, restricting his conduct in any manner²¹;
- 1568 (4) he knows of any other matter which might reasonably be expected to affect the mind of a bencher²² considering his application²³; and
- 1569 (5) he has read and understood the terms of the call declaration²⁴.

A person who makes a false statement in his admission declaration or in relation to his fees may be expelled from his Inn²⁵.

1 The provisions of the Consolidated Regulations (2007) concerned with admission, training, call, and pupillage (ie Pts I-III (regs 2-25) and Pt V (regs 41-54)) are applicable to the generality of students wishing to undertake a course of study with a view to being called to the Bar; however, certain persons (generally lawyers already holding relevant qualifications, and some distinguished academics) may be exempted from fulfilling some or all of these requirements: see Pt IV (regs 26-40), reg 55; and PARAS 1078, 1098-1108. A student who is readmitted is treated for the purposes of Pt II (regs 11-20) (see PARAS 1067-1072) as having been admitted on the date of his readmission, provided that if under any provision of Pt II such a student would have been entitled, had he not ceased to be a student, to any exemption, concession or advantage to which by reason of such treatment he is not entitled, the Director of the Bar Standards Board may in his discretion apply such provision to him to such extent and with such modifications, if any, as he thinks fit: reg 20(c). 'Director of the Bar Standards Board' means the Director of the Bar Standards Board or successor post by whatever name called: Sch 1. The Director of the Bar Standards Board may from time to time delegate to any member of the Board's permanent staff any of the powers conferred upon him by the Consolidated Regulations, and may from time to time revoke any such delegation: reg 20(b). The student must also carry out any order made in response to such an event: Sch 4 para 4(b). 1064. Educational qualifications.

A person may be admitted to an Inn¹ as a student² whether or not he has completed the academic stage of training³. However, a person who has not completed the academic stage must:

- 1570 (1) hold a degree⁴ (other than an honorary degree) passed at a standard which the Bar Standards Board⁵ considers satisfactory in any subject or subjects⁶;
- 1571 (2) be reading as a student for such a degree at a university in the United Kingdom or the Republic of Ireland⁷; or
- 1572 (3) have been accepted by the Masters of the Bench⁸ as a mature student⁹.

1 As to the meaning of 'Inn' see PARA 1063 note 4. The provisions of the Consolidated Regulations (2007) concerned with admission, training, call, and pupillage (ie Pts I-III (regs 2-25) and Pt V (regs 41-54)) are applicable to the generality of students wishing to undertake a course of study with a view to being called to the Bar; however, certain persons (generally lawyers already holding relevant qualifications, and some distinguished academics) may be exempted from fulfilling some or all of these requirements: see Pt IV (regs 26-40), reg 55; and PARAS 1078, 1098-1108. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

2 As to the meaning of 'student' see PARA 1063 note 4.

3 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 2(a), Sch 2. A person who has completed the academic stage is qualified for admission to the vocational stage: Sch 2. As to the academic and vocational stages of training, and the completion thereof, see PARAS 1067-1072.

4 For this purpose, a 'degree' is a degree obtained by examination after a minimum of three years' study, although a research degree obtained by thesis, or a degree obtained by examination in less than three years, may be considered on its merits, including (if necessary) the qualifications on which registration for the degree was based: Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 2 para (a).

5 As to the meaning of 'Bar Standards Board' see PARA 1060 note 3.

6 Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 2 paras (a), (c). If the degree was conferred by a university outside the United Kingdom or the Republic of Ireland, the applicant must have obtained a Certificate of Academic Standing from the Bar Standards Board: Sch 2 para (c). The Consolidated Regulations refer to the Bar Council (as to which see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the training of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1063 note 13. As to Certificates of Academic Standing see PARA 1071. A licence conferred by the former University College of Buckingham before that college was granted university status is also acceptable: Sch 2 para (a). As to the meaning of 'applicant' see PARA 1060 note 13.

7 Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 2 para (b). The applicant must have passed the English Language Examination for the General Certificate of Education at Ordinary Level or have obtained the General Certificate of Secondary Education in English Language (Sch 2 para (b)); exceptionally, this requirement may be satisfied by the applicant satisfying the Director of the Bar Standards Board that he holds an equivalent qualification or otherwise demonstrating his competence in the English language to the satisfaction of the Director of the Bar Standards Board (Sch 2 para (b)). As to the meaning of 'Director of the Bar Standards Board' see PARA 1063 note 10.

8 The Masters of the Bench may delegate to any committee specified by them any of the functions conferred on them by the Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 2: reg 2(b). Such delegation may be permanent or otherwise and may be revoked at any time: reg 2(b). A student who fails to carry out any order of the Masters may be expelled from the Inn or otherwise punished: see reg 7(c)(iii); and PARA 1073. As to the meaning of 'Masters of the Bench' see PARA 1060 note 13.

9 Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 2 para (d). Such an applicant must: (1) have had considerable experience or shown exceptional ability in an academic, professional, business or administrative field; (2) ordinarily have reached the age of 25; (3) have obtained such academic and vocational qualifications as the Masters of the Bench may consider equivalent to a degree conferred by a University in the United Kingdom or the Republic of Ireland or have attained such standard of general education as the Masters of the Bench may consider sufficient; (4) be able to satisfy the Masters of the Bench that there is a good reason why he should not be required to obtain a qualifying law degree; and (5) be considered by the Masters of the Bench to be suitable for admission as a mature student: Sch 2 para (d)(i)-(v). As to the meaning of 'qualifying law degree' see PARA 1067. Applications by mature students are subject to a fee: see reg 19(i), Sch 10 para 4.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(2) EDUCATION AND TRAINING/(ii) Admission, Education and Examination of Students/A. ADMISSION OF STUDENTS/1065. Certificates of good character.

1065. Certificates of good character.

An applicant¹ for admission to an Inn² as a student³ must produce two certificates of good character⁴. Applicants from the United Kingdom⁵ must produce certificates from two responsible persons resident in the United Kingdom who have known the applicant for one year or more⁶. Overseas applicants⁷ educated in the United Kingdom⁸ must produce one such certificate⁹, and a certificate from the past or present head of the school or college, or a tutor at such school or college, in general education in the United Kingdom¹⁰. Other overseas applicants must produce a certificate from the past or present head of the school or college, or a tutor at such school or college, last attended by the applicant¹¹, and a certificate from a judge or magistrate or any other responsible person in the country in which the applicant is permanently resident¹².

The certificates so produced must comply to the satisfaction of the Masters of the Bench¹³ with the specified requirements¹⁴, although the Masters may accept in place of any certificate such other evidence of good character, and may make such further inquiries as to an applicant's character, as they think fit¹⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'applicant' see PARA 1060 note 13. 1066. Grounds for refusal of admission.

An applicant¹ for admission to an Inn² as a student³ may be refused admission if he is engaged in any occupation which in the opinion of the Masters of the Bench⁴ is incompatible with the position of a student seeking call to the Bar⁵. A person may also be refused admission if he:

- 1573 (1) has been convicted of a relevant criminal offence⁶;
- 1574 (2) has had a bankruptcy order⁷ or directors disqualification order⁸ made against him or has entered into an individual voluntary arrangement⁹ with his creditors¹⁰; or
- 1575 (3) has been prohibited from practising any profession¹¹, and the circumstances are, in the opinion of the Masters, such as to make his admission undesirable¹². Admission may also be refused on grounds of unsuitability in any other case at the Masters' discretion¹³.

B. THE ACADEMIC STAGE OF TRAINING

1067. Qualifying law degrees.

Students¹ are educated in two stages, the academic stage and the vocational stage², both of which must be completed before a student can be called to the Bar³. Generally, a student may not enter the vocational stage until he has completed the academic stage⁴, the usual means of which is by obtaining a qualifying law degree⁵.

A qualifying law degree is a single honours degree in law, a joint honours degree, or a mixed honours degree passed at a standard of lower second class or above⁶. It must have been conferred by a university in the United Kingdom⁷ or the Republic of Ireland upon the successful completion of a course of study, acceptable to the Bar Standards Board⁸, which includes the study of the foundations of legal knowledge, and such other optional law subjects as may from time to time be required by the Bar Standards Board⁹, and the passing of appropriate assessments and examinations therein¹⁰.

The 'foundations of legal knowledge' are:

- 1576 (1) obligations I (contract);
- 1577 (2) obligations II (tort);
- 1578 (3) criminal law;
- 1579 (4) public law;
- 1580 (5) property law;
- 1581 (6) equity and the law of trusts; and
- 1582 (7) foundations of EU law¹¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'student' see PARA 1063 note 4. The provisions of the Consolidated Regulations (2007) concerned with admission, training, call, and pupillage (ie Pts I-III (regs 2-25) and Pt V (regs 41-54)) are applicable to the generality of students wishing to undertake a course of study with a view to being called to the Bar; however, certain persons (generally lawyers already holding relevant qualifications, and some distinguished academics) may be exempted from fulfilling some or all of these requirements: see Pt IV (regs 26-40), reg 55; and PARAS 1078, 1098-1108. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

3 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 11(c). As to the Bar as a profession see PARA 1034. As to call to the Bar generally see PARAS 1075-1078. Certain degrees and courses enable a student to complete both stages at the same time: see PARA 1072.

4 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 11(b). Permission to enter the vocational stage before completion of the academic stage may be given by the Director of the Bar Standards Board in exceptional circumstances: reg 11(b). As to the meaning of 'Director of the Bar Standards Board' see PARA 1063 note 10.

5 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 12(a)(i). As to completion of the academic stage without gaining a qualifying law degree see PARA 1068.

6 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 12(b), Sch 1. The requirement that the degree must have been passed at a standard of lower second class or above may in exceptional circumstances be waived at the discretion of the Director of the Bar Standards Board: reg 12(b). Applications for waivers are subject to a fee: see reg 19(ii), Sch 10 para 3.

7 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1063 note 13.

8 In deciding whether a course of study is acceptable to it, the Bar Standards Board must have regard to the provision of adequate learning resources: Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1.

9 As to the meaning of 'Bar Standards Board' see PARA 1060 note 3.

10 Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1. These rules are applicable to a degree conferred upon the successful completion of a course of study begun on or after 1 September 1995. Where a degree is conferred upon the successful completion of a course of study begun before that date, it is only a qualifying degree for these purposes if it is a degree conferred by a university in the United Kingdom or Republic of Ireland, a degree conferred by the Council for National Academic Awards before its dissolution on 31 March 1993, or a Licence in Law conferred by the former University College of Buckingham before that college was granted university status, and if it includes subjects which the Bar Standards Board considers to be sufficiently equivalent to the six core subjects (ie contract, tort, criminal law, land law, constitutional and administrative law, and equity and trusts): Sch 1.

11 Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1. These are the subjects the study of which is prescribed by the Bar Standards Board for the purpose of obtaining a qualifying law degree by a course of study begun on or after 1 September 1995 and by the Common Professional Examination Board for inclusion in any Common Professional Examination course beginning on or after 1 September 1996: Sch 1.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(2) EDUCATION AND TRAINING/(ii) Admission, Education and Examination of Students/B. THE ACADEMIC STAGE OF TRAINING/1068. The Common Professional Examination.

1068. The Common Professional Examination.

A person who has not gained a qualifying law degree¹ may complete the academic stage of training² by:

- 1583 (1) obtaining a degree in any discipline at a standard of lower second class or above³; or
- 1584 (2) being accepted by an Inn⁴ as a mature student⁵, and by successfully completing a Common Professional Examination ('CPE') course⁶.

A CPE course is a course in preparation for a CPE approved by the Joint Academic Stage Board⁷ or a course in preparation for a Law Society-recognised Diploma in Law approved by the CPE Board⁸ which includes a study of the foundations of legal knowledge⁹ and one other area of legal study, and assessments and examinations in those subjects¹⁰. In order to be certified as having completed the academic stage, a student attending a Common Professional Examination course or attempting any assessments and examinations in such a course must comply with any rules or regulations in relation thereto approved by the Joint Academic Stage Board and for the time being in force in the institution approved by that Board to provide the course or to conduct the examination¹¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'qualifying law degree' see PARA 1067. The provisions of the Consolidated Regulations (2007) concerned with admission, training, call, and pupillage (ie Pts I-III (regs 2-25) and Pt V (regs 41-54)) are applicable to the generality of students wishing to undertake a course of study with a view to being called to the Bar; however, certain persons (generally lawyers already holding relevant qualifications, and some distinguished academics) may be exempted from fulfilling some or all of these requirements: see Pt IV (regs 26-40), reg 55; and PARAS 1078, 1098-1108. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

2 Both the academic and vocational stages of training must be completed before a student can be called to the Bar, and a student cannot generally enter the vocational stage until he has completed the academic stage: see the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 11(b), (c); and PARA 1067. As to the Bar as a profession see PARA 1034. As to call to the Bar generally see PARAS 1075-1078. Certain degrees and courses, however, enable a student to complete both stages at the same time: see PARA 1072.

3 Consolidated Regulations (2007) regs 12(a)(ii), (b), 13(a). The requirement that the degree must have been passed at a standard of lower second class or above may in exceptional circumstances be waived at the discretion of the Director of the Bar Standards Board: reg 12(b). As to the meaning of 'Director of the Bar Standards Board' see PARA 1063 note 10. A person is only eligible to complete the academic stage by attending a Common Professional Examination course if his qualifications are within Sch 2 para (a), (c) or (d) (see PARA 1064), which specify the types of non-law degree the holding of which render a person admissible as a student (and therefore eligible to take the course): reg 13(a).

4 As to the meaning of 'Inn' see PARA 1063 note 4.

5 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 12(a)(ii), 13(a). As to acceptance as a mature student see Sch 2 para (d); and PARA 1064.

6 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 12(a)(ii). Depending on the student's circumstances, he may be exempted from certain sections of the course: reg 12(a)(ii).

7 'Joint Academic Stage Board' means the successor to the CPE Board (see note 8): Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1.

8 'CPE Board' means the Common Professional Examination Board set up pursuant to resolutions passed by the Council of the Inns of Court and the Law Society, and which administers any Common Professional Examination course specified in the Consolidated Regulations (2007) regs 12-14, or any successor to that board which is established for the purposes of administering any such Common Professional Examination course: Sch 1.

9 As to the foundations of legal knowledge see PARA 1067.

10 Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1. These rules are applicable to a course begun on or after 1 September 1996. A course begun before that date need only include the six core subjects: Sch 1. As to the six core subjects see PARA 1067 note 10. The Bar Standards Board may appoint such Boards of Examiners as from time to time it thinks fit to exercise its powers in relation to examinations and assessment; and it may from time to time delegate to a Board of Examiners, or to the Director of the Bar Standards Board or any other member of the Board's permanent staff, any of its powers in relation to examination and assessment, and may from time to time revoke such a delegation: reg 20(a), Sch 1. As to the meaning of 'Bar Standards Board' see PARA 1060 note 3.

BARRISTERS/(2) EDUCATION AND TRAINING/(ii) Admission, Education and Examination of Students/C. THE VOCATIONAL STAGE OF TRAINING/1069. The Bar Vocational Course.

C. THE VOCATIONAL STAGE OF TRAINING

1069. The Bar Vocational Course.

The second stage of a student's¹ training is the vocational stage, which must be completed after the academic stage and before the student can be called to the Bar². A person completes the vocational stage by attending and being certified as having successfully completed a vocational course³, which is a course designed to provide instruction in the skills, knowledge and attitudes required by those who intend to become practising barristers in the territory of any member state⁴ and which is recognised by the Bar Standards Board⁵ as satisfying the requirements of the vocational stage⁶. In order to be certified as having completed the vocational stage, a student attending a vocational course or attempting any assessments and examinations in such a course must comply with any rules or regulations in relation thereto approved by the Bar Standards Board and for the time being in force in the institution approved by the Board to provide the course or to conduct the assessment and examinations⁷.

A person who wishes to complete the vocational stage of training must do so within seven years of completing the academic stage⁸, and may in certain circumstances be required to have a Certificate of Academic Standing⁹.

1070. Time limits for completion of vocational stage.

Students¹ must complete the vocational stage of training² within seven years of completing the academic stage³. The calculation of this period depends upon the method by which the academic stage was completed: thus a student who completed the academic stage by obtaining a qualifying law degree⁴, passing the Common Professional Examination⁵ or gaining a Diploma in Law⁶ must complete the vocational stage within the period of seven years from 1 October in the year in which he obtained his degree, passed the examination or gained his diploma⁷, while a student who completed the academic stage by being granted exemption from certain sections of the Common Professional Examination or Diploma in Law examinations and then passing examinations in the outstanding sections⁸ must complete the vocational stage within the period of seven years from 1 October in the year in which he completed the degree by virtue of which he was granted exemption from those sections⁹. These periods may, however, be extended for a period not exceeding seven years at the discretion of the Director of the Bar Standards Board¹⁰.

Certain students¹ are ineligible for admission to the vocational stage of training² unless they have been granted a Certificate of Academic Standing by the Bar Standards Board³. They are:

- 1585 (1) students who obtain a qualifying law degree⁴ following a course of study at two or more institutions⁵;
- 1586 (2) students with degrees from foreign universities⁶ who have successfully completed a Common Professional Examination course⁷; and
- 1587 (3) mature students⁸ who have successfully completed a Common Professional Examination course⁹.

Certificates of Academic Standing must be applied for by the student¹⁰ and once granted remain in force for seven years from 1 October in the year of issue¹¹.

1072. Exempting law degrees and integrated courses.

Students¹ may complete both the academic and vocational stages of training² by attending and being certified as completing degrees or courses which are recognised by the Bar Standards Board³ as satisfying both the academic and the vocational stages⁴. These are known as 'exempting law degrees' and 'integrated courses'⁵. Students who hold degrees (other than honorary degrees) passed at a standard which the Bar Standards Board considers satisfactory in any subject or subjects⁶ and mature students⁷ are eligible to undertake integrated courses⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'student' see PARA 1063 note 4. The provisions of the Consolidated Regulations (2007) concerned with admission, training, call, and pupillage (ie Pts I-III (regs 2-25) and Pt V (regs 41-54)) are applicable to the generality of students wishing to undertake a course of study with a view to being called to the Bar; however, certain persons (generally lawyers already holding relevant qualifications, and some distinguished academics) may be exempted from fulfilling some or all of these requirements: see Pt IV (regs 26-40), reg 55; and PARAS 1078, 1098-1108. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

2 Both the academic and vocational stages of training must be completed before a student can be called to the Bar, and a student cannot generally enter the vocational stage until he has completed the academic stage: see the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 11(b), (c); and PARAS 1067-1068. (iii) Student Discipline

1073. Conduct and discipline.

A student¹ must observe such regulations as may be made by his Inn² concerning the conduct and discipline of its students³, and any student who commits a breach of such regulations is liable, at the Inn's discretion⁴:

- 1588 (1) to be expelled from the Inn⁵;
- 1589 (2) to have his call to the Bar postponed⁶; or
- 1590 (3) to be admonished as to his future conduct⁷.

These punishments may also be imposed on any student who:

- 1591 (a) makes a false statement in his admission declaration⁸ or in any form relating to admission fees⁹;
- 1592 (b) fails to carry out any order¹⁰ of the Masters of the Bench¹¹; or
- 1593 (c) does anything which demonstrates his unfitness for call or which is likely to bring his Inn or the profession into disrepute¹².

A student, not being a barrister, is not subject to the Code of Conduct of the Bar¹³; however, if a student after being called to the Bar is found to have engaged before call in conduct which is discreditable to a barrister and which was not fairly disclosed to the Inn calling him, that will constitute professional misconduct¹⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'student' see PARA 1063 note 4. Note that, by virtue of that definition, whether these provisions apply to a person undertaking a period of pupillage will depend on whether or not he has been called to the Bar. For these purposes, references to a 'student' are references to a student so long as he remains a student: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 7(d).

1076. Keeping terms.

Before being called to the Bar¹ a student² must keep terms³; that is, he must attend a specified number of educational or collegiate events organised by or on behalf of his Inn ('qualifying sessions')⁴. The number of qualifying sessions which must be kept is ordinarily 12⁵, and they must be kept during a period not exceeding two years⁶. The Inns are required to offer sufficient events to enable its students to satisfy these requirements⁷. Students attending qualifying sessions may be credited with such numbers of sessions as the Inn, acting in comity with the other Inns, may consider appropriate⁸, although there is a limit on the number of sessions which a student may attend in any one term⁹. In certain circumstances, a student may attend sessions after call or be credited for sessions in absentia¹⁰.

1 As to the requirements for call to the Bar see PARA 1075. As to the Bar as a profession see PARA 1034. The provisions of the Consolidated Regulations (2007) concerned with admission, training, call, and pupillage (ie Pts I-III (regs 2-25) and Pt V (regs 41-54)) are applicable to the generality of students wishing to undertake a course of study with a view to being called to the Bar; however, certain persons (generally lawyers already holding relevant qualifications, and some distinguished academics) may be exempted from fulfilling some or all of these requirements: see Pt IV (regs 26-40), reg 55; and PARAS 1078, 1098-1108. 3 The terms are: Michaelmas (1 October to 21 December); Hilary (11 January to the Wednesday before Easter Sunday); Easter (the second Tuesday after Easter Sunday to the last Friday in May); and Trinity (the second Tuesday after the end of the Easter Term to 31 July): Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 8(a).

4 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 9(a). Qualifying sessions may include a residential educational and collegiate activity at Cumberland Lodge, West Dean or elsewhere arranged by or on behalf of an Inn, or a non-residential educational and collegiate activity of similar scope arranged by or on behalf of an Inn: reg 9(f). As to the meaning of 'Inn' see PARA 1063 note 4. A student is not treated as having attended a qualifying session unless he is present at the formal commencement and remains until the formal conclusion, provided that the Treasurer or acting Treasurer of an Inn may during any qualifying session on any day relax this requirement for any student in respect of that session: reg 9(e). As to the Treasurers of the Inns see PARA 1055. In exceptional circumstances, the Qualifications Committee may relax or dispense with any of the requirements relating to the keeping of terms: see reg 10(b). 7 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 8(b). Each Inn is responsible, in comity with the other Inns, for arranging suitable numbers of qualifying sessions to be available for the students who are members of the Inn, and for ensuring that all the activities arranged by or on behalf of the Inn are educational and collegiate activities for these purposes (reg 9(h)), and it is the responsibility of individual Inns to promulgate to their students the dates in each of the four terms on which qualifying sessions will take place (reg 8(c)).

8 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 9(g).

9 A student who attends more than six qualifying sessions in any term will be credited with having attended only six qualifying sessions in that term unless, upon a petition in writing showing proper grounds, the Masters of the Bench determine that he is to be credited with having attended a greater number of qualifying sessions (not exceeding nine or the number actually attended, whichever is the less): Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 9(c). A student who kept any term before 1 September 1997 is deemed to have attended three qualifying sessions in each term so kept (reg 9(b)), and term dinners taken before 31 May 1998 are deemed to be qualifying sessions (reg 9(i)).

10 See the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 10(a), which provides that, on petition showing substantial grounds, the Masters of the Bench may permit any student: (1) to attend not more than two qualifying sessions after call (provided always that such qualifying sessions are attended within 12 months of the date of call, and a written undertaking to attend such qualifying sessions is given to the Masters by the student on or before call); and (2) to have credit for not more than two qualifying sessions in absentia. The total number of qualifying sessions permitted under these provisions may not exceed two: reg 10(a).

1077. Call days and procedure.

Calls to the Bar¹ generally take place on the second Thursday in March (Hilary Term), the fourth Thursday in July (Trinity Term) and the fourth Thursday in November (Michaelmas Term)². Students³ are required to attend their call ceremony in person⁴, and provision is made as to the order of seniority in which they will be called⁵. Before being called to the Bar, every student must duly complete and sign his call declaration⁶, by which he declares and undertakes:

- 1603 (1) that the declaration he made for the purpose of obtaining admission as a student member of his Inn⁷ was and remains true and accurate in every respect⁸; and 1604 (2) that so long as he remains a barrister he will observe the Code of Conduct⁹; and must declare whether, while he has been a student:

- 1605 (a) he has engaged for a period exceeding three months in any occupation not stated in his admission declaration or notified to the Inn¹⁰;
1606 (b) he has been convicted of any relevant criminal offence¹¹ in any part of the world, or has criminal proceedings pending against him in respect of any relevant offence¹²;
1607 (c) he has had a bankruptcy order¹³ made against him in any part of the world¹⁴;
1608 (d) he has been made the subject of an order, or has given an undertaking or promise, restricting him from instituting any form of legal proceedings¹⁵; or 1609 (e) he knows of any other matter which might reasonably be expected to affect the mind of a bencher¹⁶ considering his application¹⁷.

The making of a declaration which is false in any material respect, or any breach of any undertaking embodied in the declaration, constitutes professional misconduct¹⁸. The declarant must declare that he understands this¹⁹.

1078. Special provision for solicitors, other qualified lawyers and academics, and temporary admission.

Solicitors¹, Northern Ireland barristers, Scottish advocates and certain qualified legal practitioners from other common law jurisdictions are eligible for admission to permanent membership of an Inn² and call to the Bar³ without gaining the qualifications required of, or satisfying the other requirements imposed on, the generality of students⁴. In addition, certain European lawyers⁵ are eligible to be called to the Bar, and to practise, on the strength of their existing qualifications⁶. A lawyer seeking to exercise this right must satisfy the requirements specified for his particular situation⁷, and is not prevented by his entitlement from seeking admission and call via the normal route⁸. Certain distinguished academics may also be called⁹, and qualified lawyers may be temporarily called to the Bar for the purpose of conducting a particular case or cases¹⁰.

1079. Readmission of disbarred barristers.

A former barrister who has been disbarred may apply to the Masters of the Bench¹ for readmission to the Bar². If the Masters decide to entertain the application they must cause notice thereof³ to be screened in the hall, benchers' rooms⁴, and Treasurer's office⁵ of the Inn for not less than eight days, and must cause a copy of the notice so screened to be sent to each of the other Inns for screening⁶, and at any time within three months after such screening may admit the applicant⁷. Before being readmitted to the Bar, a former barrister must duly complete and sign his call declaration⁸, by which he declares and undertakes that so long as he remains a barrister he will observe the Code of Conduct⁹, and declares whether:

- 1610 (1) he has engaged during the 12 months immediately before the date of declaration in any occupation which he has not disclosed to the Under-Treasurer¹⁰;
- 1611 (2) he has been convicted of any relevant criminal offence¹¹ in any part of the world, or has criminal proceedings pending against him in respect of any relevant offence¹²;
- 1612 (3) he has had a bankruptcy order¹³ or directors disqualification order¹⁴ made against him in any part of the world¹⁵;
- 1613 (4) he has entered into any individual voluntary arrangement with his creditors¹⁶;
- 1614 (5) he has been prohibited or suspended from practising as a member of any professional body in any part of the world¹⁷; and
- 1615 (6) he has provided and authenticated such further information about himself as may reasonably be regarded as relevant to be considered by the Masters in connection with his proposed readmission¹⁸.

The making of a declaration which is false in any material respect, or any breach of any undertaking embodied in the declaration, constitutes professional misconduct¹⁹. The declarant must declare that he understands this²⁰.

These provisions apply both to barristers who have been disbarred at their own request and to those who have been disbarred for a disciplinary offence: regs 56(a), 57(a). As to disbarment for a disciplinary offence see PARAS 1278-1279. As to the powers of the benchers in this regard see PARA 1051. An application from a barrister who has been disbarred for a disciplinary offence must be accompanied by a statement signed by the applicant setting out all relevant matters affecting him since disbarment, including his record of employment and any relevant medical certificate, and must be supported in writing by: (1) at least one practising or employed barrister of not less than ten years' standing or a Master of the Bench; (2) the applicant's employer or last employer if applicable; and (3) two other references as to general character (in the form adapted from certificate A in Sch 3): reg 57(b). The Complaints Committee must consider the matter in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Conduct and must in writing inform the Masters of its recommendation or of the fact that it makes no recommendation: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 57(d). Upon receipt of the views of the Complaints Committee, the Masters must decide whether or not to entertain the application; and, if they decide so to do, they may impose such conditions on the applicant as to further training, assessment or pupillage as they think fit: reg 57(e). (v) Pupillage

1080. Obligation to undertake pupillage.

A person who intends to practise at the Bar¹ of England and Wales must train as a pupil² for an aggregate period of not less than 12 months³, of which six months are non-practising⁴ and six months are spent in practice⁵. He may also be required to complete such further training after completion of the vocational stage of training⁶ as the Bar Standards Board⁷ may require⁸. In general, a person may not practise as a barrister unless he has complied with these requirements⁹, although the requirements may be waived, in whole or part, in respect of certain qualified persons¹⁰. Pupillage is undertaken under the supervision of a pupil supervisor¹¹, who must take all reasonable steps to provide his pupil with adequate tuition, supervision and experience¹².

1081. Requirements of a pupillage.

Pupillage must be undertaken with a registered approved pupil supervisor¹ and in a pupillage training organisation² authorised by the Bar Standards Board³. The Board has the power to invalidate (in whole or in part) any pupillage where the failures or deficiencies in that pupillage are such that the value of any pupillage training has or is likely to have been seriously compromised⁴.

² The Bar Standards Board may authorise, or refuse to authorise, any chambers, organisation, firm, company or other body as a pupillage training organisation, subject to such terms as the Board may from time to time determine: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 47(2)(i), (ii). It may withdraw such authorisation at any time: reg 47(2)(iii).

Where the Bar Standards Board refuses or withdraws authorisation (or invalidates a pupillages under reg 47.3 (see text and note 4)) it must give notice of its decision in writing to all parties affected by that decision (reg 47.4(i)). A party affected by such a decision may apply for a review, provided that such application is made to the Bar Standards Board in writing within one month of receipt of notification in writing of the decision (reg 47.4(ii)). Where either there is no application for a review of that decision or following such a review the decision is confirmed, the chambers, organisation, firm, company or other body will not be entitled to claim any refund or reimbursement of any payment made to any pupil or prospective pupil as the case may be in respect of any pupillage award, pupillage funding, travelling or other payments or expenses (reg 47.4(iv)). For these purposes the following are parties affected by such a decision: (1) the chambers, organisation, firm, company or other body in respect of which authorisation has been refused or withdrawn (reg 47.4(iii)(a)); (2) any person whose pupillage or (where an offer of pupillage has been accepted but the pupillage has not yet commenced) prospective pupillage is or may be affected by a decision to refuse or withdraw authorisation, or to invalidate a pupillage or any part thereof, and the chambers, organisation, firm, company or other body where such a person has undertaken pupillage or from whom an offer of pupillage has been accepted but the pupillage has not yet commenced (reg 47.4(iii)(b)).

As to the meaning of 'Bar Standards Board' see PARA 1060 note 3.

⁴ Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 47.3. This power may be exercised irrespective of whether the Bar Standards Board has exercised its power to refuse or withdraw authorisation under reg 47.2 (see note 2) (reg 47.3). As to procedure with regard to, and review of, a decision to invalidate a pupillage see note 2.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(2) EDUCATION AND TRAINING/(v) Pupillage/B. PUPIL SUPERVISORS/1082. Eligibility for registration as an approved pupil supervisor.

B. PUPIL SUPERVISORS

1082. Eligibility for registration as an approved pupil supervisor.

In order to be entered on the register of approved pupil supervisors kept by the Bar Council¹, a barrister must be approved as a pupil supervisor by his Inn². Each Inn must, from time to time, provide the Bar Standards Board³ with a list of approved pupil supervisors⁴.

A practising barrister⁵ may apply to his Inn to be approved as a pupil supervisor. An applicant⁶ must at the date of his application:

- 1616 (1) have practised in the United Kingdom or another member state⁷ as a barrister (other than as a pupil who has not completed pupillage in accordance with the Consolidated Regulations) or as a member of another authorised body for a period (which need not have been continuous and need not have been as a member of the same authorised body) of at least six years in the previous eight years⁸; and
- 1617 (2) have made his practice his primary occupation and been entitled to exercise a right of audience⁹ as a barrister during the two years immediately preceding the date of the application¹⁰.

No Queen's Counsel¹¹ other than an employed barrister¹² may be registered as a pupil supervisor¹³.

1083. Application for registration as an approved pupil supervisor.

An eligible barrister¹ who wishes to act as a pupil supervisor must submit to the Masters of the Bench an appropriately supported² application³. If the Masters approve the application⁴, they must notify the applicant⁵ and the Bar Council⁶, which must cause the applicant to be entered on the register of approved pupil supervisors accordingly⁷. If the Masters of the Bench refuse the application they must notify the applicant accordingly⁸.

1 As to eligibility see PARA 1082.

2 The application must be supported in the following respects:

541 (1) in the case of a barrister in independent practice, by the applicant's Head of Chambers, and in the case of an employed barrister by a more senior lawyer employed in the same organisation and having direct knowledge of the work of the applicant (Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 49(ii)(a)); or

542 (2) if the applicant is himself the Head of Chambers, or there is no more senior lawyer employed in the same organisation with such direct knowledge, or for any other reason the support referred to in (1) above is not available, by an independent person who is a Master of the Bench of an Inn, a Queen's Counsel, a Leader of a Circuit, a Recorder or Deputy High Court Judge, Treasury Counsel or a person of comparable standing who is able to comment from personal knowledge on the applicant's suitability to act as a pupil supervisor (reg 49(ii)(b)); and 543 (3) in every case, by a second person falling within the requirements in (2) above (reg 49(ii)(c)).

1084. Training of pupil supervisors.

The Bar Standards Board¹, in consultation with the Inns' Council², must prescribe what training, if any, is to be undertaken by persons either before or after they have been entered on the register of approved pupil supervisors³. He must also have regard to the pupillage guidelines issued from time to time by the Bar Standards Board⁴, and to the Equality and Diversity Code for the Bar⁵. A pupil supervisor may not be responsible for more than one pupil at a time save with the approval in writing of the Bar Standards Board⁶.

UPDATE

1085 Duties of pupil supervisors

NOTE 2--Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe B amended on 1 September 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(2) EDUCATION AND TRAINING/(v) Pupillage/B. PUPIL SUPERVISORS/1086. Complaints against pupil supervisors and removal from the register.

1086. Complaints against pupil supervisors and removal from the register.

Any complaint or other matter which appears to affect the fitness of a barrister to continue as a pupil supervisor¹, or the desirability of his continued registration as such, must be referred to the Masters of the Bench². They will then investigate the complaint³, and may resolve that a barrister's registration as a pupil supervisor be suspended pending the outcome of their inquiries⁴.

If it is the opinion of the Masters of the Bench that the barrister's conduct is such as to render him unfit to continue as a pupil supervisor, they may resolve⁵ that the barrister be removed from the register or suspended from the register for such period as they may determine⁶. Alternatively, they may either dismiss the complaint⁷, take no action⁸, refer the case to the Complaints Committee of the Bar Standards Board⁹, or, if they are of the opinion that the case is such as to require informal treatment, draw it to the barrister's attention in writing and, if thought necessary, direct him to attend upon the Treasurer of his Inn or some other person nominated by the Treasurer¹⁰.

1 As to eligibility to act as a pupil supervisor, authorisation, registration, training and duties see PARAS 1082-1085.

2 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 50.1. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060. As to the meaning of 'Masters of the Bench' see PARA 1060 note 13.

4 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 50.2. If such a resolution is passed, the Masters of the Bench must notify the barrister accordingly: regs 50.2, 50.5. A pupil supervisor suspended under this provision may appeal: see regs 50.6, 51.

5 If such a resolution is passed, the Masters of the Bench must notify the pupil supervisor accordingly: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 50.5. A pupil supervisor removed or suspended under this provision may appeal: see regs 50.6, 51.

6 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 50.3(v). In the version of the Consolidated Regulations published by the Inns and the Bar Council, there are two provisions numbered 50.3(ii). However, as the second reg 50.3(ii) follows reg 50.3(iv), these provisions have accordingly been cited in this paragraph as it seems that they were intended to be numbered and not as they appear in the published version.

If a resolution to remove or suspend a pupil supervisor is passed, the Masters of the Bench must notify the pupil supervisor accordingly: reg 50.5. A pupil supervisor removed or suspended under this provision may appeal: see regs 50.6, 51.

1087. Removal from the register on other grounds.

A barrister's name will be removed from the register of pupil supervisors¹ if:

- 1619 (2) not being an employed barrister⁴, he is appointed as Queen's Counsel⁵;
- 1620 (3) he ceases to practise as a barrister or is suspended from practice as a barrister⁶; or
- 1621 (4) the Masters of the Bench⁷ resolve to remove his name from the register because he has not taken a pupil for five years⁸.

COMMENCEMENT, REGISTRATION AND UNDERTAKING OF PUPILLAGE/1088. Commencement and registration of pupillage.

C. COMMENCEMENT, REGISTRATION AND UNDERTAKING OF PUPILLAGE

1088. Commencement and registration of pupillage.

A person who is required to train as a pupil¹ may not commence pupillage unless:

- 1622 (1) he has completed the vocational stage of training²;
- 1623 (2) he has been authorised to be called to the Bar³ in pursuance of any of the special provisions relating to qualified lawyers or academics⁴ and, if required so to do, has passed the aptitude test⁵ or a relevant part of it⁶; or
- 1624 (3) he has been authorised to be readmitted to the Bar⁷ and, if required so to do, has passed the aptitude test or a relevant part of it⁸.

In any event, a person may not commence pupillage after the expiration of a period of five years⁹ from the date when he was certified as having completed and passed a vocational course¹⁰, a vocational conversion course or any relevant part of the aptitude test, or as having successfully completed any further training which he was required by the Bar Standards Board to undertake before commencing pupillage¹¹.

A person may not commence a pupillage unless it has been registered with the Bar Standards Board¹². The Board may refuse to register a pupillage if the chambers with which the pupillage is proposed to be undertaken has not made proper arrangements for dealing with pupils and pupillage¹³. A pupil must also notify the Bar Standards Board of any material changes in the arrangements for his pupillage¹⁴.

1 Ie required by the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 41: see PARA 1080. The provisions of the Consolidated Regulations concerned with admission, training, call, and pupillage (ie Pts I-III (regs 2-25) and Pt V (regs 41-54)) are applicable to the generality of students wishing to undertake a course of study with a view to being called to the Bar; however, certain persons (generally lawyers already holding relevant qualifications, and some distinguished academics) may be exempted from fulfilling some or all of these requirements: see Pt IV (regs 26-40), reg 55; and PARAS 1078, 1098-1108. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

2 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 43(1). As to the vocational stage of training see PARAS 1069-1072. A person who has completed the vocational stage by passing the Bar Examination must also have successfully completed a vocational conversion course, or such other training as the Bar Standards Board may require, before commencing pupillage: reg 43(1). As to the meaning of 'Bar Standards Board' see PARA 1060 note 3.

3 As to the Bar as a profession see PARA 1034. As to call to the Bar generally see PARAS 1075-1078.

4 Ie the provisions of the Consolidated Regulations (2007) Pt IV or reg 55, under which solicitors, Northern Ireland barristers, Scottish advocates, qualified legal practitioners from common law jurisdictions outside England and Wales, certain European lawyers and, in exceptional circumstances, distinguished academics, may be called to the Bar without gaining the qualifications required of the generality of students: see PARAS 1078, 1098-1108.

9 Or such other period as the Bar Standards Board may stipulate: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 44.1. This period may be extended by the Bar Standards Board in an individual case for such period and on such terms as it thinks fit including the requirements as to further courses of study or training to be undertaken by the person seeking the extension: reg 44.2.

10 As to the meaning of 'vocational course' see PARA 1069.

11 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 44.1. A person who intends to practise as a barrister may be required to complete such further training after completion of the vocational stage as may be required from time to time by the Bar Standards Board: see reg 41.1(ii); and PARA 1080. These provisions do not apply to persons who registered for the vocational course or vocational conversion course or were required to take the aptitude test or any section or sections or part or parts of it before 1 September 1998: reg 44.3.

12 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 43(3). A pupil is required, on arranging his pupillage (which includes any period of external training under reg 46 (see PARA 1090)), to give notice in writing to the Bar Standards Board in the form specified in Sch 14 Pt 1 (application to be register a pupillage/external training placement): see reg 42.1.

13 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 42.2. In particular, chambers are required to take reasonable steps to ensure: (1) that all pupillage vacancies are advertised in the manner prescribed by the Bar Council (Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 404.2(c)(i)); (2) that such arrangements are made for the funding of pupils by chambers as the Bar Council may by resolution from time to time require (para 404.2(c)(ii)); and (3) that in making arrangements for pupillage, regard is had to the pupillage guidelines issued from time to time by the Bar Council and to the Equality and Diversity Code for the Bar (para 404.2(c)(iii)). As to the Equality and Diversity code for the Bar see PARA 1095. Where the Bar Standards Board refuses to register a pupillage, it must inform the pupil in writing of its decision giving the reasons on which the decision was based: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 42.3.

14 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 42.4. Notification must be in the form specified in Sch 14 Pt 2.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(2) EDUCATION AND TRAINING/(v) Pupillage/C. COMMENCEMENT, REGISTRATION AND UNDERTAKING OF PUPILLAGE/1089. Pupil's non-practising six months.

1089. Pupil's non-practising six months.

The non-practising six months of pupillage¹ must be undertaken in a continuous period of six months in England and Wales², and must be spent with one or more pupil supervisors³. On completion of the non-practising six months, the pupil must obtain from his pupil supervisor a certificate for submission to the Bar Standards Board⁴ certifying that he has satisfactorily completed the period⁵. Provided that the pupil has also completed such further training as the Board may require⁶, it must register the certificate and, if the pupil has been called to the Bar⁷, issue him with a Provisional Qualification Certificate⁸.

1 As to the obligation to undertake pupillage, and the division of the period of pupillage into non-practising and practising parts, see PARA 1080. The provisions of the Consolidated Regulations (2007) concerned with admission, training, call, and pupillage (ie Pts I-III (regs 2-25) and Pt V (regs 41-54)) are applicable to the generality of students wishing to undertake a course of study with a view to being called to the Bar; however, certain persons (generally lawyers already holding relevant qualifications, and some distinguished academics) may be exempted from fulfilling some or all of these requirements: see Pt IV (regs 26-40), reg 55; and PARAS 1078, 1098-1108. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

5 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 52.1. The Bar Standards Board may in certain circumstances accept a certificate from the pupil supervisor's head of chambers or another acceptable person (see reg 52.3), and the Qualifications Committee may, on the pupil's request, grant a certificate themselves on the grounds that the pupil supervisor's signature has been wrongly withheld (see reg 52.4). In either case, the Bar Standards Board must issue a Provisional Qualification Certificate forthwith: reg 52.5. A pupil who has made an application to the Qualifications Committee and who is dissatisfied may request in writing that the Committee review its decision: see regs 51, 52.6. There is a fee: Sch 10 para 11.

1090. Pupil's practising six months.

The practising six months of pupillage¹ may be undertaken in any member state². The whole of the practising six months must be undertaken after call³, and must be commenced after, but not later than 12 months after, the completion of the non-practising six months⁴. It must comprise either a continuous period of six months or a total period of six months completed within an overall period of nine⁵, except that⁶:

- 1625 (1) up to six months may be satisfied by an equivalent period of training spent with a solicitor⁷ who is practising in the United Kingdom or in another member state⁸;
- 1626 (2) up to six months may be satisfied by an equivalent period of training spent with a lawyer qualified and practising in another member state⁹;
- 1627 (3) six months may be satisfied by undertaking a stage of five months duration or more in the legal departments of the European Commission¹⁰, or a placement at the European Commission in London¹¹;
- 1628 (4) up to six weeks may be satisfied by serving as a marshal with a judge of the High Court of Justice or with a circuit judge¹²;
- 1629 (5) up to four weeks may be satisfied by working with a solicitor or other professional person whose work is relevant to his pupil supervisor's practice¹³; and
- 1630 (6) up to four weeks may be satisfied by working under supervision for a body which supplies legal services to the public without a fee or for a nominal fee¹⁴.

The Qualifications Committee may also, in an individual case, recognise such other form of training as satisfying part of pupillage as it considers appropriate having regard to the particular circumstances of the person concerned¹⁵. Subject to these exceptions, the practising six months must be spent with one or more pupil supervisors¹⁶.

On completion of the practising six months, the pupil must obtain from his pupil supervisor and from any person with whom he has undertaken external training a certificate for submission Bar Standards Board¹⁷ certifying that he has satisfactorily completed the period¹⁸. Provided that the pupil has also completed such further training as the Board may require¹⁹, it must register the certificate and issue the pupil with a Full Qualification Certificate²⁰.

5 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 41.2(ii)(1). No interval within the nine-month period may exceed one month: reg 41.2(ii)(1). The requirement that the practising period comprises either a continuous period of six months or a total period of six months completed within an overall period of nine months may be varied in writing by the Qualifications Committee: reg 41.2(ii)(2). Variation may be subject to such conditions as to additional training as the Qualifications Committee considers appropriate: reg 41.3.

6 Pupils may avail themselves of the exceptions (which are known as 'external training') only with the prior approval of the Qualifications Committee: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 46.1. An approved period of such training constitutes a period of practising pupillage for the purpose of reg 41.2(ii) (see text and notes 1-5). It may be undertaken at any time, but in no case counts towards the non-practising six months of pupillage: reg 46.3. 1092 Professional duties of a pupil

NOTE 3--Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe B amended on 1 September 2009.

1093. Pupil's supply of legal services during non-practising six months.

During the non-practising six months of pupillage¹, a pupil may accept a noting brief². A pupil who has completed or been exempted from the non-practising six months³ may supply legal services as a barrister⁴ and exercise a right of audience which he has by reason of being a barrister⁵. In either case, the pupil must have the permission of his pupil supervisor⁶ or head of chambers⁷.

1 As to the obligation to undertake pupillage see PARA 1080. As to the non-practising six months see PARA 1089.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 802. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

3 Certain solicitors, Northern Ireland barristers, Scottish advocates, qualified legal practitioners from common law jurisdictions outside England and Wales, European lawyers and, in exceptional circumstances, distinguished academics, who wish to be called to the Bar and practise as a barrister, may be wholly or partly exempted from undertaking a period of pupillage: see PARAS 1078, 1098-1108.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 802. As to the meaning of 'legal services' see PARA 1152 note 3.

6 As to pupil supervisors see PARAS 1082-1087.

1094. Pupil's entitlement to receive remuneration.

A barrister must pay any pupil (or, in the case of an employed barrister¹, ensure that a pupil is paid) for any work done for him which because of its value to him warrants payment², although a pupil is not, by virtue of his pupillage, entitled to be paid the national minimum wage³. The Bar Council has made specific provision in connection with the payments, including expenses, that members of chambers must make to each non-practising and practising pupil⁴.

1 As to employed barristers see PARA 1037.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 805. This is the case except where the pupil is in receipt of an award or remuneration which is paid on terms that it is in lieu of payment for any individual item of work: para 805. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

3 See Edmonds v Lawson [2000] QB 501, [2000] 2 WLR 1091, CA; and PARA 1096. As to the national minimum wage, and qualification for it, see EMPLOYMENT vol 39 (2009) PARA 142 et seq.

1095. Discrimination in relation to offers of pupillage.

It is unlawful for a barrister or a barrister's clerk in offering, or omitting to offer, a pupillage, or in administering or terminating a pupillage, to discriminate in any way against a woman¹ or against any person on grounds of race² or disability³. It is also unlawful for a barrister or a barrister's clerk to subject to harassment a person who is, or has applied to be, a pupil⁴.

The Bar Standards Board Equality and Diversity Code sets out the law and professional rules which prohibit discrimination and recommends good practice to chambers in relation to access to pupillages⁵.

1 See the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 s 35A(1), (2); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 374. As to what constitutes discrimination under this Act see ss 1-5; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 344 et seq.

2 See the Race Relations Act 1976 s 26A(1), (2); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 456. As to what constitutes racial discrimination see ss 1-3; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 439 et seq.

3 See the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 7A(1), (2); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 547. As to what constitutes disability discrimination see ss 1-3, 3A; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 511 et seq. It is thought that the enactment of s 7A has rendered nugatory the decision in Horton v Higham [2004] EWCA Civ 941, [2004] 3 All ER 852 (that a barrister's chambers did not discriminate on disability grounds against an applicant for pupillage because although the chambers was a 'trade organisation' for the purposes of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 13 (as originally enacted) (which made it unlawful for such an organisation to discriminate against a disabled person in determining who should be offered membership of the organisation: see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 541), pupillage did not amount to membership (see PARA 1097) and the applicant was not therefore protected by the legislation). Barristers and their clerks are under a duty to make adjustments to any provision, criterion or practice they apply, or any physical feature of premises they occupy, which disadvantages disabled persons applying for pupillages: see the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 7B; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 548.

1096. Employment status of pupils.

A pupil who undertakes a period of pupillage¹ with a pupil supervisor² who is an employed barrister³ may be employed by the pupil supervisor's employer⁴, although for employment law purposes an agreement to undertake a period of pupillage is not in itself a 'contract of employment' and a pupil is not as such a 'worker'⁵. A pupillage agreement is neither a contract of apprenticeship nor anything analogous to it⁶, and a pupil is not a 'worker' because he does not undertake to perform any work or services for any other person⁷. Pupils are accordingly not as such entitled to be paid the national minimum wage⁸, and it is submitted that they are also unable to avail themselves of the provisions of the principal employment protection statutes⁹.

A. SOLICITORS

1098. Admission of solicitors.

A solicitor¹ who has been permitted by the Law Society to exercise the right of audience² in all higher courts in relation to proceedings both civil and criminal is entitled to be called to the Bar³ and to practise as a barrister⁴ notwithstanding that he has not satisfied the requirements relating to the keeping of terms or to the passing of the examination for call to the Bar or the completion of the vocational course⁵. He is also exempt from all parts of the aptitude test⁶ and from the requirements as to the undertaking of pupillage⁷, although he must then keep terms by attending at least six qualifying sessions⁸ and must complete and sign the call declaration⁹. A solicitor who has been permitted to exercise the right of audience in the higher courts in relation to either civil or criminal proceedings (but not both), or who has no rights of audience, is also entitled to be called and to practise on the same terms, although he may be required to undertake a period of pupillage¹⁰, and a solicitor with no higher rights of audience may also be required to pass either or both of the oral parts of the aptitude test¹¹. Provision is made for the retention of a solicitor's rights of audience where he ceases to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Law Society in these circumstances¹².

1 As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 1063 note 14. This provision applies also to solicitors admitted and enrolled in Northern Ireland: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 35(a).

2 As to solicitors' rights of audience see PARA 732.

3 As to the Bar as a profession see PARA 1034. As to the requirements for call to the Bar generally see PARAS 1075-1078. Such a person is also entitled to be admitted to an Inn as a student without holding the required educational qualifications or a certificate of good character (ie as required by the Consolidated Regulations (2007) regs 2, 3: see PARAS 1064-1065), provided that before admission he declares (and if so required furnishes evidence) that he has ceased to practise and to be financially involved in any practice of a solicitor or legal attorney in any part of the world: reg 35(e)(iv). As to the meaning of 'Inn' see PARA 1063 note 4.

4 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 35(e)(ii), (v), (vii). Entitlement is subject to certification by the Qualifications Committee, who must deal with applications as soon as reasonably practicable and may refuse an application: see reg 35(d), (e)(i), (ii), (h), (i). As to the meaning of 'Qualifications Committee' see PARA 1060 note 12. The Qualifications Committee's functions under Pt IV (regs 26-40) have been delegated by the Bar Council and the Inns: see reg 27. As to the Bar Council see PARAS 1042-1048. As to applications for certification see PARA 1099. As to practising as a barrister see PARA 1152 et seq.  - 3. (c) he is not aware of any circumstances which might lead to an event falling within either of these circumstances taking place¹⁶; and
 - 4. (d) he has disclosed to the Qualifications Committee in writing any circumstances affecting him which might reasonably be considered to be relevant to the question whether he should be permitted to be called to the Bar¹⁷;

B. NORTHERN IRELAND BARRISTERS, SCOTTISH ADVOCATES AND OTHER COMMON LAW PRACTITIONERS

1100. Admission of Northern Ireland barristers, Scottish advocates and common law practitioners.

Members of the Bar of Northern Ireland¹, members of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland², and certain other common law practitioners³, are entitled, subject to the certification of the Qualifications Committee⁴, to practise as barristers in England and Wales without gaining the qualifications required of, or satisfying the other requirements imposed on, the generality of students⁵. Such a practitioner is eligible for call to the Bar⁶ notwithstanding that he has not satisfied the requirements relating to the keeping of terms or to the passing of the examination for call to the Bar or the completion of the vocational course⁷, although he must then keep terms by attending at least six qualifying sessions⁸ and may, at the discretion of the Qualifications Committee, be required to pass the aptitude test⁹ or a part of it¹⁰.

On being called to the Bar in accordance with these provisions, a practitioner is required to complete and sign the call declaration¹¹. Scottish advocates and other common law practitioners will then be required to undertake a period of pupillage¹².

The Qualifications Committee may refuse to authorise a practitioner to practise at the Bar of England and Wales: Consolidated Regulations (2007) regs 30(e)(iv), (f), 36(h). - 1642 (2) the original or a duly authenticated copy of every document relied upon as establishing those qualifications⁵;
- 1643 (3) particulars showing that he has reasonable grounds to expect that, upon call, he will be able to practise at the Bar of England and Wales or the Channel Islands⁶;
- 1644 (4) such evidence as is relied upon by the applicant to establish⁷ that:
 - 23 5. (a) he is of good character and repute⁸;
 - 6. (b) he has not on the ground of professional misconduct or the commission of a criminal offence been prohibited from practising in any jurisdiction in relation to which he is qualified, and is not currently suspended from practising⁹; and

(A) REGISTERED EUROPEAN LAWYERS

1102. Registration of European lawyers.

Registration as a European lawyer¹ enables a European practitioner to practise in England and Wales by following one of two routes: he may either apply to be called to the Bar under the special provisions applicable to registered European lawyers² or exercise his right to practise under his home professional title³.

A European lawyer who wishes to apply for registration with a view to practising in England and Wales may apply to the Qualifications Committee⁴ for a direction that he be registered by the Bar Standards Board⁵ and the Inn⁶ of his choice⁷; and, on receipt of the necessary certification and declarations⁸, the Qualifications Committee must direct that the applicant⁹ be registered by the Board and one of the Inns as a registered European lawyer¹⁰, unless it is of the opinion that a direction should not be given on public policy grounds¹¹. There are restrictions on multiple registrations¹² and provision is made for the consideration and rejection of applications and the withdrawal and suspension of registrations¹³. A registered European lawyer must observe the Code of Conduct¹⁴.

Registered European lawyers have a right to practise in England and Wales¹⁵ and rights of audience before all relevant courts¹⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'European lawyer' see PARA 535.

2 As to these provisions see the Consolidated Regulations (2007) regs 29, 31, 32; and PARA 1104. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

3 See the European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, regs 6-14; and PARAS 534, 1166. In relation to a European lawyer, 'home professional title' means the professional title or any of the professional titles specified in relation to his home state in the European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, reg 2 (see PARA 535 note 3) under which he is authorised in his home state to pursue professional activities; and 'home state' means the state listed in reg 2 in which a European lawyer acquired the authorisation to pursue professional activities under any of the professional titles appearing in reg 2 and, if he is authorised in more than one of those states, any of those states: reg 2(1); Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1; Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001. A person so registered is known as a 'registered European lawyer': European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, reg 2(1); Introduction and Constitutions (2008) Pt I (Introduction) para 1; Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1; Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001. The Inns and the Bar Standards Board are required to maintain a register of registered European lawyers: European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, reg 15; Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe B (Registered European Lawyers Rules) r 1. register see Annexe B (Registered European Lawyers Rules) r 2. As to the Introduction and Constitutions see PARA 1042 note 8.

9 As to the meaning of 'applicant' see PARA 1060 note 13.

10 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 28(c). Note that registration is not the same as call to the Bar, for which there are further procedures: see PARA 1104. The direction must be given effect by the Bar Standards Board and such of the Inns as received the applicant's application for membership: European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, reg 17(1); Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 28(c). 'Home professional body' means the body in a member state which authorises a European lawyer to pursue professional activities under any of the professional titles specified in the European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, reg 2 (see PARA 535 note 3) and, if he is authorised in more than one member state, means any such body: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001.

5 'Diploma' means any diploma, certificate or other evidence of formal qualifications awarded by a competent authority in a relevant state: Consolidated Regulations (2007) Sch 1. There are two types of diploma for these purposes. The first is one which shows that the holder: (1) has successfully completed a post-secondary course of at least three years' duration (or equivalent duration part-time) at a university or establishment of higher education or establishment of similar level; (2) has successfully completed any additional professional training required; and (3) has the qualifications required for practising a regulated profession in that state: Sch 1. Regarding this type of diploma, either the education and training so attested must have been received mainly within the European Union, or the holder must have had at least three years' professional experience certified by a competent authority in that state (being a state which recognised a qualification obtained in a non-member state): Sch 1.

The second type of diploma is one awarded by a competent authority in a member state on the successful completion of education and training received within the European Union, and which: (a) has been recognised by a competent authority in that state as equivalent in level to the first type of diploma; and (b) confers the same rights in respect of the practice of a regulated profession in that state: Sch 1.

9 The Qualifications Committee may entertain an application where an applicant is unable to establish any of the matters referred to in the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 30(b)(iii) (see text to notes 10-15) if it is satisfied that the circumstances are not such as to make it undesirable for him to be called to the Bar and to practise as a barrister: see the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 30(c).

1108. Call to the Bar.

An experienced and distinguished legal academic¹ may be called to the Bar² notwithstanding that he has not satisfied the requirements for call applicable to the generality of students³, and for this purpose may apply to the Qualifications Committee⁴ for a relaxation⁵ of the applicable requirements⁶. In considering the application⁷, the Committee must have regard to all the circumstances of the case including (but not limited to):

- 1660 (1) the applicant's academic achievements⁸;
- 1661 (2) his standing and distinction as a teacher of law⁹;
- 1662 (3) the nature and extent of the applicant's contacts with self-employed barristers¹⁰;
- 1663 (4) the applicant's intentions in relation to practise at the Bar and any arrangements made for the purpose of fulfilling those intentions¹¹; and
- 1664 (5) the benefits to the Bar which may be expected to flow from the applicant's call¹².

The applicant may also be required to pass the aptitude test¹³ or one or more parts of it¹⁴.

This is an exceptional route by which a person may be called to the Bar and a relaxation should be granted only in cases where the Legal Academics Committee and the Qualifications Committee are satisfied both that the applicant is of such academic distinction, or likely to be of such value to the profession, that his admission by such a route is justified, and that no useful purpose would be satisfied by requiring him to comply with the requirements or provisions proposed to be relaxed¹⁵. There is no right of appeal, although the Qualifications Committee may review a negative decision¹⁶.

1 le a person who is a teacher of the law of England and Wales: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 55(a). As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

4 As to the meaning of 'Qualifications Committee' see PARA 1060 note 12. Applications are to be made in such manner as the Qualifications Committee may prescribe and must be accompanied by a fee: see Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 55(b).

5 For these purposes, 'relaxation' includes, but is not limited to, the relaxation or modification of, the complete or partial exemption from, the complete or partial dispensation from compliance with, and the conditional or unconditional waiver or excusing of, any breach of or non-compliance with any requirement or provision contained in the Consolidated Regulations (2007) Pts I-V (see PARA 1063 et seq): reg 55(g). 'Relax' is to be construed accordingly: reg 55(g). These powers of relaxation are in addition to and not in substitution for the power referred to in reg 58 (see PARA 1060) and every other power of relaxation conferred by the Consolidated Regulations: reg 55(i).

6 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 55(a).

- 7 The application is considered in the first instance by a sub-committee of the Qualifications Committee known as the Legal Academics Committee, which must make such recommendations as it thinks fit as to the relaxation (if any) which in its opinion ought to be granted, but the Qualifications Committee is not bound to accept any such recommendation: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 55(c).

(A) GENERAL RIGHTS OF AUDIENCE

1109. Barristers having rights of audience before every court.

Until a day to be appointed, rights of audience are determined solely in accordance with the provisions of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990¹. Every barrister who has been called to the Bar by an Inn of Court² and has not been disbarred or suspended from practice³ is deemed by virtue of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990⁴ to have been granted by the Bar Council⁵ a right of audience in relation to all proceedings before every court⁶. The rights of audience thus deemed to have been granted to barristers are exercisable in accordance with the qualification regulations and rules of conduct of the Bar Council which have been approved for this purpose⁷. Such rights of audience are not exclusive⁸.

As from a day to be appointed a right of audience is a reserved legal activity for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007⁹, and a barrister is authorised by the Bar Standards Board to carry on that activity¹⁰. During the transitional period¹¹, every barrister is deemed to be authorised by the Bar Standards Board to exercise a right of audience¹² in accordance with the Board's regulatory arrangements¹³, and provided he has a current practising certificate¹⁴.

1 The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 ss 27 (see PARA 497), 31 and 31C are repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 paras 83, 84(d), (g), Sch 23 as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 As to call to the Bar see PARAS 1075-1078. As to the Inns of Court see PARAS 1050-1052.

3 As to disbarment and suspension see PARAS 1278-1279.

4 Prior to the enactment of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, it was for the judges of each court collectively to decide, as an incident of their inherent jurisdiction to regulate their own proceedings, what categories of person should be permitted to appear as advocates in that court, and to promulgate any changes to established general practice by practice directions: see Abse v Smith [1986] QB 536, [1986] 1 All ER 350, CA.

5 The Bar Council is an authorised body for the purposes of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990: see s 27(9); and PARA 497. As to the meaning of 'authorised body' see PARA 329 note 2. As to the meaning of 'right of audience' see PARA 495 note 3. As to the meaning of 'proceedings' see PARA 495 note 3. As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 426 note 12.

6 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 31(1), (3) (s 31 substituted by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 36). See also note 1.

7 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 31(1) (as substituted: see note 6). See note 1. The relevant qualification regulations and rules of conduct are contained in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) (see PARA 1150) and the Consolidated Regulations (2007) (see PARA 1060).

8 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 ss 27, 31(2)(a), 31C; and PARAS 497, 508.

9 As to reserved legal activities see PARA 512.

10 As to authorised persons see PARA 515 et seq. The Bar Standards Board is an existing regulator for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007: see s 20, Sch 4 para 1; and PARA 358 et seq. The Legal Services Act 2007 refers to the General Council of the Bar (see PARA 1042 note 1). However the body responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

11 As to the meaning of 'transitional period' see PARA 516 note 9.

12 Legal Services Act 2007 s 22, Sch 5 para 4(1), (2)(a). During the transitional period every barrister is also authorised to carry on the following activities: (1) reserved instrument activities; (2) probate activities; (3) the administration of oaths: Sch 5 para 4(1), (2)(b)-(d). During the transitional period every registered European lawyer is also deemed to be authorised to carry on such activities: see Sch 5 para 5. As to registered European lawyers see PARA 1102. Members of the Bar not in actual practice are to continue to have the rights conferred by the Patents Act 1977 s 102A(2) (see PATENTS AND REGISTERED DESIGNS vol 79 (2008) PARA 640): see Sch 5 para 6. As to non-practising barristers see PARA 1035.

1110. Power to determine rights of audience in absence of statute.

In the absence of any statutory provision in point there is no common law right to be legally represented¹. A tribunal is master of its own procedure and has, as an incident of this power, a discretion, where the matter is not governed by statute, to determine whether or not to permit legal representation and, if so, what categories of person to admit as advocates². This discretion must, however, be exercised in accordance with the rules of natural justice³ and the right to a fair hearing enshrined in the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms⁴. Whether a fair hearing requires that the parties be legally represented in a particular case, so that the tribunal could not properly refuse such representation, will depend on such factors as the nature and complexity of the proceedings, the seriousness of the potential outcome to the person affected, the need for a speedy determination, and the capacity of the person affected to present his case⁵.

The House of Commons together with the House of Lords and the Sovereign form the High Court of Parliament which, though not a judicial body in the accepted sense, is a court in respect of which barristers have rights of audience¹. Counsel may be heard on behalf of persons whose conduct is the subject of select committee investigations or whose rights and interests, as distinct from the general interests of the country, are directly affected by a public Bill or other matter which has been referred to the consideration of such a committee². Counsel may also be heard before committees on opposed private Bills³, but will not be heard in connection with unopposed private Bills⁴.

On appeals to the House of Lords sitting as an appellate court¹, the lodgment of a case² carries the right to be heard by two counsel, one of whom may be leading counsel³. Where a petition for leave to appeal is referred for an oral hearing before the House of Lords Appeal Committee, one counsel may appear on each side⁴.

1113. Barristers who are members of the legislature.

A barrister who is a member of the House of Commons is not by virtue of that membership prevented from appearing in any judicial case before the House of Lords, but he may not appear as an advocate before that House or any parliamentary committee nor (save in very exceptional cases with leave of the House) act as counsel in connection with any bill before the House of Lords¹. A barrister who is also a peer may appear as an advocate on an appeal to the House of Lords, but may not appear before a committee of the House of Lords or before the House when sitting under the Presidency of the Lord High Steward in a criminal case².

1 Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice (23rd Edn, 2004) pp 136-137. As well as being contrary to the usage of Parliament, such conduct would also constitute a breach of the rules of professional conduct of the Bar: see the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 603(d); and PARA 1186. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. BARRISTERS/(3) LEGAL RIGHTS AND DUTIES/(i) Rights of Audience/A. COURTS IN ENGLAND AND WALES/(B) Particular Courts and Tribunals/1115. Commissions and disciplinary proceedings.

1115. Commissions and disciplinary proceedings.

There is normally no right for anyone to appear before a royal commission except for the persons summoned, but counsel are often allowed to present, examine and cross-examine witnesses by leave of the commissioners¹. The Charity Commissioners will occasionally hear counsel².

Barristers are entitled to appear before both barristers' and solicitors' disciplinary tribunals³. There is also a statutory right to be represented by a barrister in various other disciplinary proceedings, including those before:

- 1665 (1) the Disciplinary Committee of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons⁴;
- 1666 (2) a fitness to practise committee of the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain⁵;
- 1667 (3) a fitness to practise committee of the General Dental Council⁶;
- 1668 (4) a fitness to practise committee of the General Optical Council⁷;
- 1669 (5) a fitness to practise committee of the General Medical Council⁸;
- 1670 (6) the Disciplinary Committee of the Hearing Aid Council⁹;
- 1671 (7) the Conduct and Competence Committee of the Nursing and Midwifery Council¹⁰;
- 1672 (8) the Health Committee and the Professional Conduct Committee of the General Osteopathic Council¹¹;
- 1673 (9) the Investigating Committee, the Professional Conduct Committee and the Health Committee of the General Chiropractic Council¹²;
- 1674 (10) the Disciplinary Committee of the Farriers Registration Council¹³;
- 1675 (11) the Professional Conduct Committee of the Architects Registration Board¹⁴;
- 1676 (12) the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal¹⁵;
- 1677 (13) tribunals required to determine why an order should not be made prohibiting a person from doing estate agency work, and appeals therefrom¹⁶; and
- 1678 (14) certain tribunals hearing charges of disciplinary offences alleged to have been committed by police officers, and appeals to police appeals tribunals¹⁷.

In the absence of statutory provision, whether barristers may appear at disciplinary proceedings will normally depend on whether fairness and natural justice entitle the person against whom charges have been made to be legally represented¹⁸.

1116. Arbitrations.

There is no statutory provision concerning whether barristers have a right of audience before arbitrators. Such matters are in the first place for the choice of the parties to the arbitration, pursuant to the principle that they should be free to agree how their disputes are resolved subject only to such safeguards as are necessary in the public interest¹. In the absence of any agreement between the parties governing the matter, it is for the arbitration tribunal to decide what representation to allow.

The legislation governing the settlement of international investment disputes² recognises that parties to such disputes may be represented by counsel³.

(C) EXERCISING RIGHTS OF AUDIENCE

1117. Duties of barristers exercising rights of audience.

When exercising a right of audience¹ a barrister owes a duty to the court to act with independence in the interests of justice, and to comply with the code of conduct of the bar².

1 As to rights of audience, see PARAS 497, 512 text and note 3.

2 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 27(2A) (prospectively repealed by the Legal Service Act 2007 Sch 21 paras 83, 84(a), Sch 23); and PARA 497. This duty is restated in the Legal Services Act 2007 s 188 (not yet in force): see PARA 513.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(3) LEGAL RIGHTS AND DUTIES/(i) Rights of Audience/A. COURTS IN ENGLAND AND WALES/(C) Exercising Rights of Audience/1118. Appearance in person.

1118. Appearance in person.

There are some applications in the High Court which, if made in open court, may be made only by counsel, in particular, relator actions brought in the name of the Attorney General¹, and applications to strike a solicitor off the rolls². An application for a writ of habeas corpus should normally be made by counsel or by a solicitor but may be made in person in urgent cases³.

In criminal proceedings in the Crown Court prosecutions must be conducted by counsel, who, when acting in this capacity, are said to be in the nature of public officers⁴.

A barrister who is a party in a case must elect either to conduct his own case or to have it conducted by counsel⁵; if he appears on his own account, he cannot claim the rights of counsel but will be accorded only those rights enjoyed by a member of the public⁶.

When not engaged in a case, a barrister has no higher right to be present in court than a member of the general public⁷.

1119. Precedence of counsel.

There are certain rules governing the precedence of barristers when appearing in court. These rules are a matter of the discretion of the bench and of the etiquette of the profession¹.

The Attorney General takes precedence over all other barristers in the Supreme Court². Next in order of precedence is the Solicitor General, and then come other Queen's Counsel, who rank amongst themselves according to the date of their patents³. Last come junior barristers, whose precedence amongst themselves is determined by the dates of their call to the Bar⁴.

When two or more barristers are briefed together on the same side, the leader has the conduct of the case and the court will not generally allow a junior barrister to pursue a different argument from that taken by the leader⁵.

B. FOREIGN AND INTERNATIONAL COURTS

1120. Foreign courts generally.

Whether a barrister will be permitted to present a case before a foreign court will normally depend on whether the court in question will allow a right of audience to members of the English Bar¹.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(3) LEGAL RIGHTS AND DUTIES/(i) Rights of Audience/B. FOREIGN AND INTERNATIONAL COURTS/1121. European Court of Justice and Court of First Instance.

1121. European Court of Justice and Court of First Instance.

Parties directly participating in litigation before the European Court of Justice or the Court of First Instance¹ must be represented².

Member states, states which are parties to the EEA Agreement, EC institutions and the EFTA Surveillance Authority are represented by an agent, who may be assisted by an adviser or by a lawyer authorised to practise before a court of a member state or of another state which is a party to the EEA Agreement or by a university teacher who is a national of a member state whose law affords him rights of audience³. Other parties must be represented by a lawyer authorised to practise before a court of a member state or of another state which is a party to the EEA Agreement or by a university teacher who is a national of a member state whose law affords him rights of audience⁴, who must sign every pleading⁵.

Accordingly, barristers are entitled to represent parties before the courts⁶; the right of audience is not restricted to barristers, however, but also includes solicitors⁷.

Before a lawyer assisting an agent or representing a party may practise before either court, he must submit credentials to the registrar of the court certifying that he is appropriately qualified⁸; credentials normally take the form of a certificate from the appropriate professional body of which the lawyer is a member.

Agents, advisers and lawyers appearing before the court enjoy the rights and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties⁹. An adviser or lawyer whose conduct before the court is incompatible with the dignity of the court or who abuses the rights and immunities which he has been granted may be excluded from the proceedings¹⁰.

1 The official names of the courts are the Court of Justice of the European Communities and the Court of First Instance of the European Communities. Rules similar to those applied in those courts apply in the EFTA Court (ie the court established by the Agreement on the European Economic Area (Oporto, 2 May 1992; Cm 2073 (OJ L1, 3.1.94, p 3)) as adjusted by the Protocol (Brussels, 17 March 1993; Cm 2183 (OJ L1, 3.1.94, p 572)) art 108.

2 See the Treaty Establishing the European Community (Rome, 25 March 1957; TS 1 (1973); Cmnd 5179) (Protocol on the Statute of the Court of Justice) arts 19, 53. There is no provision for the parties to appear in person without legal representation or assistance; the parties may only address the court through their agent, adviser or lawyer: Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice of the European Communities art 58; Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance of the European Communities art 59. There is no exception to this rule for parties who are themselves lawyers authorised to practise before the courts of a member state: see Case C-126/90P Viciano v EC Commission [1991] ECR I-781, ECJ; Case C-174/96P Lopes v European Court of Justice [1996] ECR I-6401, ECJ; Case T-79/99 Euro-Lex European Law Expertise GmbH v Office for Harmonisation in the Internal Market (Trade Marks and Designs) [1999] ECR II-3555, CFI. An application for legal aid need not be made though a lawyer: Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice of the European Communities art 76(2); Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance of the European Communities art 95(1). In certain references to the Court of Justice, the Court takes into account, as regards the representation and attendance of the parties, the rules of procedure of the national court which made the reference: Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice of the European Communities art 104(2). In such cases, the Court will allow parties to appear without legal representation if they would be permitted to do so before the national court or tribunal which made the reference: see eg Case C-168/91 Konstantinidis v Stadt Altensteig-Standesamt [1993] ECR I-1191, [1993] 3 CMLR 401, ECJ; Case C-19/92 Kraus v Land Baden-Württemberg [1993] ECR I-1663, ECJ.

4 Statute of the Court of Justice arts 19, 53.

5 Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice of the European Communities art 37(1); Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance of the European Communities art 43(1).

6 Barristers are not confined to representing British nationals. Although it is usual for parties to be represented by lawyers of their own nationality, this is not obligatory: see eg Case 19/62 Fédération Nationale de la Boucherie en Gros et du Commerce en Gros des Viandes v Council of EEC [1962] ECR 491, [1963] CMLR 160, ECJ (where a French lawyer appeared for a Dutch party); Joined Cases C-89, 104, 114, 116, 117, 125-129/85 Åhlström Osakeyhtiö v EC Commission [1988] ECR 5193, ECJ (where English barristers appeared for United States and Canadian parties).

7 See eg Case 175/80 Tither v EC Commission [1981] ECR 2345, ECJ (where the applicant in a direct action was represented only by an English solicitor; no objection was taken by the court). Where the European Court of Justice takes into account, as regards the representation and attendance of the parties, the rules of procedure of the national court which made the reference (see note 2), it has been suggested that only those who would be entitled to address the national court should be entitled to address the European Court of Justice; however, there are examples of parties to references from the English High Court being represented before the European Court of Justice by lawyers who did not have rights of audience before the English High Court: see eg Case 234/81 El Du Pont de Nemours Inc v Customs and Excise Comrs [1982] ECR 3515, ECJ (Scottish advocate); Case C-324/93 R v Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex p Evans Medical Ltd [1995] ECR I-563, ECJ (English solicitors).

8 Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice of the European Communities art 38(3); Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance of the European Communities art 44(3). As a matter of law, whether a person is qualified to appear before the European Court of Justice is a matter for the court to decide by applying the law of the place where that person claims to be entitled to practise as a lawyer: see Nold KG v High Authority (1957) 2 Valentin 245, ECJ.

9 Statute of the Court of Justice arts 19, 53. The rights and immunities accorded to those appearing before the court are: (1) immunity in respect of words spoken or written by them concerning the case or the parties; (2) freedom from search or seizure of papers relating to proceedings; (3) freedom of movement and the allocation of such foreign currency as may be necessary for the performance of their duties: Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice of the European Communities art 32; Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance of the European Communities art 38. To be accorded these rights and immunities an agent must have an official certificate issued by the state or institution he represents and an adviser and lawyers must have credentials signed by the registrar of the court: Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice of the European Communities art 33; Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance of the European Communities art 39.

10 See the Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice of the European Communities art 35; and the Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance of the European Communities art 41. The Advocate General must be heard, and the person concerned given the opportunity to reply to the complaint, before an order barring that person is made: Rules of Procedure of the Court of Justice of the European Communities art 35; Rules of Procedure of the Court of First Instance of the European Communities art 41.

Contracting parties before the European Court of Human Rights¹ must be represented by agents, who may have the assistance of advocates or advisers, including barristers². Persons, non-governmental organisations or groups of individuals may initially present applications³ themselves or through a representative⁴. Following notification of the application to the respondent contracting party, the President of the Chamber of the Court may direct that the applicant should be represented⁵; and the applicant must be represented at any hearing, unless the President of the Chamber exceptionally grants leave to the applicant to present his own case, subject, if necessary, to being assisted by an advocate or other approved representative⁶. The representative of an applicant must be either an advocate authorised to practise in any of the contracting states and resident in the territory of one of them, or any other person approved by the President of the Chamber⁷. Where an applicant is represented, the representative must supply a power of attorney or written authority to act⁸. In exceptional circumstances and at any stage of the procedure, the President of the Chamber may, where he considers that the circumstances or the conduct of the advocate or other representative so warrant, direct that the advocate or other representative may no longer represent or assist the applicant⁹.

Parties¹ to proceedings before the International Court of Justice² must be represented by agents, who may be assisted by counsel or advocates, all of whom enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary to the independent exercise of their duties³.

1 Only states may be parties to proceedings before the International Court of Justice: Statute of the International Court of Justice (San Francisco, 26 June 1945; TS 67 (1946); Cmnd 7015) art 34 para 1.

(ii) Eligibility for Offices and Appointments

1124. Queen's Counsel.

The only degree in the common law is the degree of barrister, conferred by the Inns of Court¹. There are, however, numerous offices which a barrister may fill and some which may be held only by barristers². That of greatest significance within the practising Bar is the office of Queen's Counsel³. Queen's Counsel are appointed by the Crown on the advice of the Secretary of State⁴. They wear silk gowns⁵, and are also called leading counsel, silks or leaders⁶.

Appointment as Queen's Counsel is a mark and recognition by the Crown of the professional eminence of the barrister concerned⁷. It also confers a right of precedence over junior barristers, and affects the instructions which a barrister is obliged to accept; in particular, a Queen's Counsel is not obliged to accept instructions to settle alone any document of a kind generally settled only by or in conjunction with a junior barrister, or to act without a junior if he considers that the interests of the lay client require that a junior should also be instructed⁸.

1 See PARA 1033. As to call to the Bar see PARAS 1075-1078.

3 As to the origin of the office of Queen's Counsel see PARA 1039.

4 A person who applies to be recommended for appointment as Queen's Counsel in England and Wales must pay a fee, the amount of which is specified by order: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 45(1), (2) (amended by SI 2003/1887; prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 208(1), Sch 21 paras 127, 130). Orders are made by statutory instrument which are subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 45(3). At the date at which this volume states the law, the prescribed fee is £720: see the Appointment of Queen's Counsel (Fees) Order 2002, SI 2002/2037, art 2. In determining the amount of the fee regard must be had to the expenses incurred in considering applications for appointment as Queen's Counsel: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 45(2) (as so amended; and prospectively amended). None of these provisions affects the Great Seal (Offices) Act 1874 s 9 (under which fees are charged in respect of the grant of Letters Patent under the Great Seal for appointment as Queen's Counsel: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 922): Access to Justice Act 1999 s 45(4).

As from a day to be appointed the Lord Chancellor assumes the functions of the Secretary of State described above: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 45 (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 208(1), Sch 21 paras 127, 130).

In practice applications are considered by an independent selection panel comprising a retired senior judge, senior barristers, senior solicitors and lay members. The panel passes its recommendations to the Secretary of State (as from a day to be appointed, the Lord Chancellor) who then passes them to the Crown for the issue of letters patent. The question of the appointment of honorary QC's (recognising lawyers who have made a major contribution to the law of England and Wales outside practice) is a matter for the Secretary of State (or Lord Chancellor). For a description of the application process see The Bar Handbook 2008 Pt IX.

5 As to barristers' robes see PARA 1215.

6 All other barristers who are not Queen's Counsel, and who wear stuff gowns and sit outside the Bar in court, are called junior counsel or juniors (the term 'stuff gownsmen' to describe junior counsel having fallen into disuse).

7 'The position occupied by Queen's Counsel is in the nature of an office under the Crown, although any duties which it entails are almost as unsubstantial as its emoluments; and it is also in the nature of an honour or dignity to this extent, that it is a mark and recognition by the Sovereign of the professional eminence of the counsel': A-G for Dominion of Canada v A-G for Province of Ontario [1898] AC 247 at 252, HL, per Lord Watson.

1125. Administration of oaths.

Until a day to be appointed every barrister has the power conferred by statute on a commissioner for oaths¹, and the right to use the title 'commissioner for oaths'².

As from a day to be appointed³ the administration of oaths is a reserved legal activity for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007⁴ and a person may be authorised to carry on such activities by the Bar Standards Board⁵. During the transitional period⁶ every barrister holding a current practising certificate⁷ is deemed to be authorised by the Board to carry on the administration of oaths⁸.

TEXT AND NOTES--Day appointed for purpose of these provisions is 1 January 2010: SI 2009/3250.

Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

1126. Judicial offices, appointments, tribunals and committees.

A barrister (provided, in many cases, that he has been qualified for a specified number of years) is eligible for appointment to many judicial and quasi-judicial offices¹. Barristers are also eligible to be appointed, and in some cases are required to be appointed, to the panel of, or as the chairmen of, or as legal assessors to, various tribunals and committees constituted under statute. The constitutions of the bodies concerned make specific provision as to the relevant eligibility requirements².

The holders of many of these offices are prohibited by statute from providing advocacy or litigation services or practising as a barrister³.

1 The relevant periods of qualification are defined by reference to the length of time that the person concerned has had a right of audience in relation to specified proceedings: see the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 71; and PARA 742. As to the rights of audience acquired by barristers upon being called to the Bar see PARA 1109. A barrister holds a relevant qualification for the purposes of the judicial appointment eligibility condition under the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007: see s 50; and COURTS.

1128. Restrictions on practice.

A barrister who holds certain judicial offices, or who is a member or chairman of a relevant tribunal¹ may not provide advocacy or litigation services², or practise as a barrister³.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General may not undertake any business on behalf of private clients⁴. Even where a barrister is not prohibited from practising, it is a rule of professional conduct that a barrister may not accept instructions⁵ in any case where by reason of his connection with the court⁶ the impartial administration of justice might appear to be prejudiced⁷.

(iii) Drafting of Documents and Giving of Advice

1129. Right to draft documents.

Barristers are among the categories of person¹ who are entitled, in expectation of fee, gain or reward², directly or indirectly to draw or prepare³ relevant legal documents⁴. As from a day to be appointed such drafting is a reserved instrument activity, and therefore a reserved legal activity for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007⁵.

1 For the other categories of persons entitled to draft documents for reward see PARA 595.

2 It is not necessary for these purposes that the person who draws or prepares the instrument in question should be the person who receives the fee, gain or reward: Reynolds v Hoyle [1975] 3 All ER 934, [1975] 1 WLR 207, CA. Furthermore, there need be no legal right to recover, but merely an expectation that some reward will be forthcoming as a result of the action taken: Pacey v Atkinson [1950] 1 KB 539 at 543, [1950] 1 All ER 320 at 322, DC, per Lord Goddard CJ.

3 The concept of 'draws or prepares' involves the use of the intellect to compose the relevant instrument by the selection of the correct words and to place them in the right sequence so that the instrument expresses the intention of the parties: see Green v Hoyle [1976] 2 All ER 633, [1976] 1 WLR 575, CA.

1130. Law reports.

A barrister is entitled to authenticate by his name a report of a case decided in any of the superior courts¹.

Reports by solicitors and other persons having a right of audience in relation to all proceedings in the Supreme Court have the same authority as those made by barristers: see the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 115; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 106. As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court is renamed the Senior Courts: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1), Sch 11 Pt 1; and COURTS. On appeals to the House of Lords the statement of facts and the cases of the parties must be signed by one or more counsel who have attended as counsel in the court below or will be briefed for the hearing before the House¹. In the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council a petition for special leave to appeal must be signed by the counsel who attends the hearing²; and the printed cases required for the appeal must be signed by at least one counsel who attends at the hearing of the appeal, or by the party himself if he conducts his appeal in person³.

Where a statement of case or skeleton argument has been settled by counsel, it is customary for counsel's (typed) signature to appear at the end. Historically, to sign counsel's name to a statement of case without his authority is a contempt of court⁴.

In some circumstances the certificate of counsel is necessary. Thus in cases where leave to appeal to the House of Lords is not required, the petition of appeal must be signed and the reasonableness of the appeal certified by two counsel¹. A petitioner who seeks special leave to appeal as a poor person to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council requires a certificate of counsel that he has reasonable ground of appeal².

1133. When counsel's advice protects solicitor.

Where a matter falls within counsel's expertise, for instance advising in specialist areas of law, drafting pleadings or deciding which witnesses to call at trial, a solicitor is not liable to the client for negligence even if counsel has acted incorrectly, provided the solicitor exercises his own independent judgment and reasonably thinks counsel's advice is correct¹. Assuming the exercise of independent judgment, and therefore even in respect of a matter falling within counsel's expertise, if a solicitor reasonably thinks counsel's advice is obviously, or glaringly wrong, it is his duty to reject it².

If counsel's advice is mistaken in respect of a matter within a solicitor's expertise, it is no defence for the solicitor to claim that he relied on that advice³.

Likewise, and subject to the same caveat, where costs are incurred by a solicitor acting on the advice of properly instructed counsel, such costs are not viewed, save in exceptional circumstances, as having been incurred unreasonably and will be allowed in a costs assessment between a solicitor and his client⁴.

Counsel's mistaken advice does not, however, negative a solicitor's prior negligence⁵; and if a solicitor does not supply counsel with material information which would, if known to counsel, have altered his opinion, the opinion of counsel does not protect the solicitor⁶.

A solicitor is sometimes justified in acting on the advice of counsel contrary to the wishes of his client; for example, where a client wished his solicitor to insert a number of letters in an affidavit, and the solicitor, acting on the advice of counsel that the letters were irrelevant, declined to insert them, the solicitor was held not liable⁷. Where, however, a solicitor enters into a compromise acting against the express instructions of his client, it is no defence that he was acting on the advice of counsel, however beneficial to the client⁸.

1134. Protection of client.

In a claim for a malicious or fraudulent proceeding, the fact that the defendant has acted on the advice of counsel after putting the facts fully and fairly before him is a potent though not conclusive factor in considering whether the defendant had reasonable and probable cause to initiate the proceeding¹. Counsel's opinion will not, however, provide any protection if it was not based on a full, clear and sufficient statement of the facts², nor if the defendant did not act bona fide upon counsel's advice³.

Whilst the advice of counsel may be evidence of the good faith of those who follow it, it cannot alter the nature of what is done nor render lawful acts which the client is under a strict duty to do or to avoid⁴. The fact that a breach of an undertaking or court order is committed on the strength of the opinion of counsel does not prevent it from being a contempt of court; but the fact of counsel's advice is a mitigating factor in determining the punishment to be imposed⁵.

A mistake by counsel, for instance as to the time limit within which an appeal may be brought, is not a special circumstance entitling the court to extend time for appealing where the court's power to extend time is expressly confined to cases where special circumstances exist⁶; but such a mistake may be a reason for giving an extension of time where the discretion to grant it is not so restricted⁷, and the illness⁸ or inadvertence⁹ of counsel have in appropriate circumstances been held to be sufficient reasons.

If trustees, acting under the advice of counsel, make a wrong payment, they will nonetheless be liable for the money if they are sued by the beneficiary¹⁰, unless the beneficiary has acquiesced in the advice and has accepted the payment with full knowledge of the facts¹¹.

It is no ground for resisting an order for costs that the unsuccessful party was acting on the advice of counsel; for instance, where a purchaser of land relying on the opinion of counsel declines to accept a title, he will nonetheless be ordered to pay the vendor's costs, if the court holds that a good title can be made¹².

Differing orders as to costs have been made in circumstances where trustees, acting on the advice of counsel, have made proceedings necessary, in which they have been unsuccessful. It does not follow that because a claim is advised by counsel it is necessarily one which the trustees may properly bring¹³; and, if the court considers that the claim was not reasonably brought, or defended, for the benefit of the trust estate, the trustees will not be allowed to recover their costs out of the trust fund¹⁴. In some cases, the court has taken the view that it ought not to be too hard on trustees who have acted bona fide on counsel's advice and has made no order as to costs¹⁵. In other cases, the court has held that the advice of counsel cannot exonerate trustees from the consequences of their own acts and has ordered them to pay the costs of the successful party¹⁶.

(iv) Authority of Counsel

1135. Instruction of counsel.

A barrister's authority to appear in proceedings is conferred by his instructions¹. When a barrister appears in court and states that he is instructed, the court will not inquire into his authority to appear², nor as to by whom he is instructed³, except when different barristers appear instructed by different solicitors claiming to represent the same party⁴.

If during the course of a hearing a litigant wishes to dispense with the services of his counsel and conduct his own case, it is a matter for the discretion of the judge whether to allow him to do so, but no one ought to have counsel forced upon him against his will and such an application should therefore normally be allowed⁵.

1136. Implied authority of counsel.

Apart from such express authority as is conferred by his instructions¹, a barrister is ordinarily instructed on the implied understanding that he is to have complete control over the way in which the case is conducted, and has, unless and until his instructions are withdrawn, unlimited authority to do whatever he considers best for the interests of his client with regard to all matters that properly relate to the conduct of the case². This authority extends to all matters relating to the claim, including the calling and cross-examination of witnesses³, challenging a juror⁴, deciding what points to take⁵, choosing which of two inconsistent defences to put forward⁶, and even to agreeing to a compromise of the claim, or to a verdict, order or judgment⁷. The implied authority of counsel to agree a compromise is limited, however, to the issues in the claim, and a compromise affecting collateral matters will not bind the client unless he expressly assents⁸.

1137. Limitation of authority by client.

It is open to the client expressly to limit counsel's implied authority, for instance, to agree a compromise of the case¹, or, if the client considers that counsel is taking a course contrary to his interests, to withdraw his instructions². If counsel accepts any limitation on his authority, he must act accordingly; but he is not bound to do so, and, if the client attempts to fetter counsel's discretion as to how the case is to be conducted, counsel is entitled to return the brief³. It is objectionable for a barrister to undertake the conduct of a case giving up his discretion as to how to conduct it⁴, or to share the conduct of the case with the client; a litigant must elect either to conduct the case entirely in person or entrust the case entirely to his counsel⁵, even if the litigant is himself a barrister⁶. If the litigant instructs counsel, he cannot himself be heard, unless he revokes his counsel's authority and himself assumes the conduct of the case⁷.

1138. Compromise in excess of authority.

Questions of difficulty have arisen where the authority of counsel to compromise a case has been expressly limited by the client, and counsel has entered into an agreement or consented to an order or judgment in spite of the dissent of the client, or on terms differing from those which the client authorised.

If the limitation of authority is communicated to the other side, consent by counsel which exceeds the limits of his authority will be of no effect¹. The position is more uncertain where the authority of counsel is limited, but the limitation is unknown to the other side, who enters into the compromise believing that the opponent's counsel has the ordinary unlimited authority. Counsel has an apparent or ostensible authority, at least as wide as his implied authority, to compromise a claim²; and in some cases, where the matter is within the apparent authority of counsel, the courts have refused to inquire whether there was any limitation, when it was not communicated to the other side, and have refused to set aside a compromise entered into by counsel³. The true rule seems to be, however, that in such a case the court has power to interfere; that it is not prevented by the agreement of counsel from setting aside the compromise; that it is a matter for the discretion of the court; and that when, in the particular circumstances of the case, grave injustice would be done by allowing the compromise to stand, it may be set aside, even though the limitation of counsel's authority was unknown to the other side⁴. It may be, however, that the court will not interfere on this ground if the compromise has been embodied in an order of the court which has been perfected⁵.

1139. When agreement of counsel is not binding.

Apart from the cases in which a compromise entered into by counsel in excess of his authority will not be enforced¹, where counsel has consented to a judgment or order on behalf of his client under a mistake as to essential facts, the court will allow the consent to be withdrawn before the judgment or order is drawn up². If, with his client's apparent authority and consent, however, counsel agrees to an order and there is no mistake or surprise, the client cannot arbitrarily withdraw the consent³, nor will he be allowed to do so because he subsequently discovers that he has a good ground of defence⁴.

Once an order or judgment obtained by the consent of counsel has been drawn up and passed, it cannot form the subject of an appeal and cannot be set aside except in a fresh claim brought for that purpose⁵. In such a claim, the compromise may be set aside on a ground which would invalidate any other agreement between the parties, including mistake, illegality or duress, but not otherwise⁶.

An agreement made in the course of a claim by counsel for a minor or other person under a disability is not binding on the person concerned, unless it is sanctioned by the court as being for the benefit of that person⁷. The court cannot, however, force a compromise on a minor against the opinion of his counsel⁸.

Admissions made by counsel in court in the presence of the lay client or his solicitor or other representative must be taken to have been made with the authority of the client, and are binding on the client unless and until withdrawn¹. Such an admission may subsequently be withdrawn by the client, however, unless the other party has acted to his detriment on the faith of it, so that the circumstances give rise to an estoppel². An admission made by counsel for the purpose of a particular trial will not in any event be binding at a retrial³. Even if withdrawn, an admission made by counsel in court is admissible as evidence against the client at subsequent hearings of the facts stated⁴; and an agreed statement of facts, signed by counsel for each party, may be used as evidence of the facts there stated at a subsequent hearing by one party against the other⁵.

The court will not accept an undertaking from counsel on behalf of his client in circumstances where counsel states that he has no instructions to give such an undertaking, and any undertaking given by counsel in such circumstances will not bind the client provided that notice of an application to set aside the order is given before the order has been perfected⁶. An undertaking given in court by counsel with his client's authority ought, however, to be observed as scrupulously as an order of the court, and breach of such an undertaking is punishable by committal⁷.

Though a statement made by counsel for a party that he does not intend to appeal ought to be carried out in good faith, it is no bar to an appeal if not embodied in any court order⁸.

In non-litigious matters, the statements of counsel can bind the client only when counsel has express authority or when his opinion is adopted by the client.

In negotiations for the purchase of property, the approval of title by counsel for the purchaser on the basis of an abstract laid before him does not amount to a waiver by the purchaser of all objections to title⁹, unless the purchaser adopts the opinion of his counsel and deals with the vendor upon that view, in which case he may become estopped from afterwards repudiating his counsel's opinion¹⁰. A statement of case signed by counsel on behalf of a party may constitute a sufficient written note or memorandum to satisfy the Statute of Frauds¹¹; but a denial by counsel in a statement of case on behalf of a tenant of the landlord's title is insufficient to give rise to a right of forfeiture¹².

1141. Notice to counsel.

Notice given to counsel instructed by a party is not to be imputed to the client where the notice is given to counsel when employed by another client in another matter¹; and the adventitious presence in court of counsel when an injunction was continued against his client has been held not to be such notice to the client as to justify committal for contempt². A barrister has no general authority to accept service of documents on behalf of a client and is perfectly entitled to decline to do so; but if a barrister, after the client and his instructing solicitor have left court, accepts documents relevant to the matter in issue from the other party, this will constitute good service³.

A communication made to counsel out of court by the opposing solicitor or party, or a statement made by counsel out of court, does not have the same effect as a communication to or from the solicitor who instructs counsel⁴.

In relation to the sale of land a purchaser is deemed to have had notice of any instrument or matter, if it is not capable of registration⁵, or any fact or thing which has come to the knowledge of his counsel as such in the same transaction with respect to which the question of notice to the purchaser arises⁶.

1143. Absolute privilege for defamatory statements.

No claim will lie against counsel in respect of words uttered in the course of any judicial proceedings¹, even if it is alleged that the words were uttered maliciously and without justification or excuse and even if the words are irrelevant to every issue contested in the proceedings². The reason for this absolute privilege is not a desire to prevent claims from being brought against persons who have acted maliciously; it is to secure the freedom and independence of counsel and to protect persons who have acted innocently and bona fide from the vexation of defending unmeritorious claims³.

The privilege covers everything spoken or written in the ordinary course of any proceedings before any court or tribunal recognised by law⁴, including statements made in the course of preparing for the proceedings⁵. It does not protect the separate publication of a speech containing defamatory matter⁶. The privilege applies whether the claim is framed in defamation or in some other cause, such as malicious prosecution or conspiracy⁷. It does not apply, however, to a claim brought in respect of a malicious prosecution or arrest or an abuse of the process of the court merely because one step in the conduct complained of involved the utterance of words in court and where the utterance of those words is not the substance of the complaint⁸.

The privilege is not confined to counsel, but applies equally to judges, parties and witnesses⁹, and to solicitors acting as advocates¹⁰. The privilege of counsel extends to the client in the sense that the client cannot be sued in respect of defamatory statements made by counsel on the client's behalf¹¹.

1144. No immunity from liability for negligence.

The immunity from claims in negligence which barristers (and other advocates) formerly possessed in respect of their conduct of cases in court¹ has been held no longer to be in the public interest². Liability for negligence is accordingly governed by the same principles as are applicable to other professional persons³.

A barrister presumably remains immune from suit over advice which culminates in a settlement which requires the approval of the court⁴; and a claim that a barrister has been negligent in criminal proceedings will ordinarily be struck out as an abuse of process so long as the criminal conviction stands, as the claim would otherwise involve a collateral attack on the verdict of the criminal trial⁵.

2 See Arthur JS Hall & Co (a firm) v Simons [2002] 1 AC 615, [2000] 3 All ER 673, HL. Stated grounds for the removal of the immunity included: that none of the reasons said to justify it (ie the 'cab rank' rule, the analogy with the immunities of witnesses and others involved in legal proceedings, the duty of the advocate to the court and the public policy against re-litigating a decision of a court of competent jurisdiction) had sufficient weight to sustain the immunity in relation to civil proceedings; that the principles of res judicata, issue estoppel and abuse of process were sufficient to prevent any negligence action being maintained which would be unfair or would bring the administration of justice into disrepute; and that the obstacle of proving that a better standard of advocacy would have produced a different outcome and the ability of the court to strike out unsustainable claims under CPR 24.2 (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 524) would restrict the ability of clients to bring unmeritorious and vexatious claims against advocates in any case. 1145. Duty of care.

Although a barrister does not ordinarily enter into a contract for the provision of his services with his professional or lay client¹, he owes a duty of care in tort to his clients² and may in some circumstances owe such a duty to other persons for whose benefit his services are obtained³. In general no duty is owed to parties with adverse interests⁴.

The standard of care is that of the ordinary skilled practitioner in the relevant sector of the profession⁵. Not every error made by a barrister will constitute negligence⁶. In order to amount to a breach of duty, the act or omission must be such as no reasonably well-informed and competent member of the profession could have done or omitted to do⁷. Thus the mere fact that a barrister omits to plead or argue a point which is reasonably arguable cannot of itself demonstrate negligence⁸.

1 There is, however, no longer any rule of law which prevents a barrister from entering into such a contract: see PARA 1293.

1146. Legal professional privilege.

Confidential communications passing between a barrister and his professional or lay client for the purpose of requesting or giving legal advice, such as instructions to counsel and counsel's advice, are privileged from disclosure; the court will not, at the instance of a third party, compel the client, and will not allow the barrister, to disclose them¹. The privilege is not confined to such communications as are made in the course of, or in anticipation of, litigation², but the communications must be made in a professional capacity³; and the communications must be of a confidential character⁴. Statements of case and counsel's indorsement on his brief are not confidential communications⁵, but drafts of statements of case and other documents settled by counsel are privileged, as are observations and notes written by counsel on his instructions⁶. The mere fact that counsel has been retained is not ordinarily privileged⁷. The privilege does not extend to communications made for the purpose of committing a fraud or crime⁸; but where legal professional privilege exists, it is absolute and is not capable of being overridden by any other public interest⁹. The right to the confidentiality of communications between lawyer and client is also protected by Community law¹⁰ and by the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms¹¹.

Legal professional privilege is not merely a rule of evidence but is a substantive legal right of great constitutional importance, being a necessary bulwark of the citizen's right of access to justice¹². The privilege is the privilege of the client and not of the barrister or other legal professional adviser¹³. It may be waived by the client, but never ceases unless waived by the client or his successors in title¹⁴. Privilege is not waived by referring to a document in a statement of case¹⁵, affidavit¹⁶ or list of documents¹⁷; but it is waived when a document is disclosed to the other party in the course of litigation¹⁸, unless the other party has procured inspection of the document by fraud or the document has been made available for inspection as a result of an obvious mistake¹⁹. When privilege is waived by disclosure of a document before trial or by its use in cross-examination, the waiver relates only to the document itself (and to any document from which it cannot fairly be severed²⁰); but if a privileged document is adduced in evidence, the waiver extends to the transaction to which the evidence goes and to other documents relevant to that transaction²¹. If a client sues or makes a complaint about his barrister or other legal adviser, he impliedly waives privilege in relation to all matters relevant to the claim or complaint²².

Where no waiver of privilege has taken place, an injunction may be granted to compel another party into whose hands a privileged document has come to deliver up the document and any copies or notes of it and not to disclose or make any use of any information contained in the document²³.

1147. Counsel as witness.

A barrister may be called as a witness in the same way as any other person¹. A barrister cannot, however, be compelled to give evidence of matters communicated to him in confidence by or on behalf of his lay client which are covered by legal professional privilege²; and he is under a duty not to give evidence voluntarily of confidential matters without the consent of the client³. What a barrister has seen or heard in court when appearing as counsel in an earlier proceeding is neither confidential nor covered by privilege and may be given in evidence⁴.

A barrister is required by the Code of Conduct of the Bar to refuse or cease to act as counsel in a case in which he is or becomes a witness⁵, although certain exceptions have been made to this requirement in earlier times⁶.

1 It has been held that a barrister is not entitled to compensation for giving evidence for loss of time as a barrister: see Fraser v Fraser (1845) 4 Notes of Cases 319; but quaere.

See, however, Curry v Walter (1796) 1 Esp 456 (where it was held that a barrister cannot be compelled to give evidence of what he said at a former hearing, and that, if counsel did not volunteer to testify, the matter should be proved by other means).

6 In several cases barristers have, at the request of their clients, given evidence as to what occurred during negotiations for the settlement of the claim or as to the circumstances in which they consented to a compromise. In some such cases counsel have made statements from their places at the bar without being sworn: see Kempshall v Holland (1895) 14 R 336, CA; Hickman v Berens [1895] 2 Ch 638, CA. In other cases counsel have given evidence on oath, either from their places at the bar, or from the witness box: see Baillie's Case (1788) 21 State Tr 340; Wilding v Sanderson [1897] 2 Ch 534 at 539, CA; Owen v Lord Rothermere (1927) Times, 12 February, 16 February; Schwarz v Clements (1944) 171 LT 305; Appleby v Errington (1952) Times, 18 October. See also Corley v Lord Stafford, Campbell v Corley (1857) 1 De G & J 238 (where a settlement prepared by a barrister before his marriage to the testator in which he gave himself an interest in stock expectant on her death was set aside in favour of the next of kin). If such undue influence exists when the deed is executed, it is immaterial that the relation of counsel and client has ceased: Broun v Kennedy. 1149. Rules governing the professional conduct of barristers.

The professional conduct of barristers is regulated by rules derived from three principal sources: the law of England and Wales; directions regarding practice before particular courts; and the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales¹. In addition to the Code of Conduct, the Bar Council² and the Bar Standards Board³ have published written standards for the conduct of professional work and other guidance to which barristers are required or encouraged to have regard⁴. There are also various unwritten customs and practices of the profession to which barristers are conventionally expected to adhere⁵.

1 As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

2 As to the meaning of 'Bar Council' see PARA 1042 note 1.

3 As to the Bar Standards Board see PARA 1049.

4 See PARA 1150.

5 Examples are the practice whereby a barrister notifies his opponent in advance of a hearing of any authorities which he proposes to cite, the practice of notifying an opponent whose statement of claim it is intended to apply to strike out (Annual Statement 1956 p 28) and the convention that a barrister should not criticise his instructing solicitor in open court (Annual Statement 1970-71 p 31). For further examples see The Bar Handbook 2008 paras 3.185-3.244.

1150. The Code of Conduct.

The Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales is issued by the Bar Council, and administered by the Bar Standards Board¹. It is a private or domestic system of rules which has no effect outside the profession and is neither binding on nor enforceable by a court².

The general purpose of the Code of Conduct is to provide the requirements for practice as a barrister and the rules and standards of conduct applicable to barristers which are appropriate in the interests of justice³. It aims to provide common and enforceable rules and standards for self-employed barristers⁴ and to make appropriate provision for employed barristers taking into account the fact that such barristers are employed to provide legal services to or on behalf of their employer⁵.

Amendments and additions to the Code of Conduct may be made by resolution of the Bar Council⁶. Every barrister who exercises before any court a right of audience granted by the Bar Council has a statutory duty to comply with those rules of conduct which overrides any inconsistent obligation which he may have (otherwise than under the criminal law)⁷.

The Code of Conduct applies to all barristers whenever called to the Bar⁸. It applies to international work⁹ and whether a barrister is practising in England and Wales or elsewhere¹⁰. A failure by a barrister to comply with the Code of Conduct may constitute professional misconduct¹¹.

Both the Bar Council and the Board have issued various written guidance to barristers¹² including, in the latter case, the Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work¹³. A practising barrister is specifically required by the Code of Conduct to have regard to such written standards¹⁴, and a self-employed barrister¹⁵ is required to have regard to any guidance relevant to the administration and conduct of his practice¹⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'Bar Council' see PARA 1042 note 1. As to the Bar Standards Board see PARA 1049. At the date at which this volume states the law, the current edition of the Code of Conduct was the eighth edition, which was adopted by the Bar Council on 18 September 2004 and came into force on 31 October 2004 (Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 101). This edition of the Code of Conduct does not apply to anything done or omitted to be done before 31 October 2004 (para 1101(a)); in such cases, and notwithstanding para 101, the edition of the Code of Conduct in force at the relevant time applies as if the eighth edition had not been adopted by the Bar Council (para 1101(b)). The first edition of the Code of Conduct was approved by the Bar in General Meeting on 15 July 1980. As to the history of self-regulation by the Bar see PARA 1040-1041.

The Code of Conduct has strong persuasive force, however, and will be taken into account by a court when deciding if a barrister has acted properly: see eg R v Ulcay [2007] EWCA Crim 2379, [2008] 1 All ER 547, [2008] 1 WLR 1209. It is for the Bar to determine the rules of conduct governing its members, subject to the possibility that a rule might be held to be ineffective if the judges decide it is contrary to public policy or liable to undermine the proper administration of justice: Re T (a barrister) [1982] QB 430, [1981] 2 All ER 1105. The rules contained in the Code of Conduct in respect of professional conduct must be within the scope of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1973); Cmd 8969) (see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS): see Re P (a Barrister) [2005] 1 WLR 3019.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 104(a). As to self-employed barristers see PARA 1036. The Code of Conduct requires self-employed barristers: (1) to be completely independent in conduct and in professional standing as sole practitioners (para 104(a)(i)); (2) to act only as consultants instructed by solicitors and other approved persons, save where instructions can be properly dispensed with (para 104(a)(ii)); and (3) to acknowledge a public obligation based on the paramount need for access to justice to act for any client in cases within their field of practice (para 104(a)(iii)).

6 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 103. Such amendments and additions are operative on such date as the resolution appoints or if no such date is appointed on the later of: (1) the date of the resolution; and (2) the date when approval of the amendment or addition, if required, is given under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 4 (see PARA 329 et seq): Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 103(a), (b). However, such alteration will not have effect without the agreement of the Secretary of State: see PARA 336.

8 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 105. However, the application of the Code of Conduct may differ depending on whether the barrister in question is employed, self-employed or non-practising (as to these distinctions see PARAS 1035-1037). The Code of Conduct also applies to European lawyers registered with the Bar Council: para 107 (and see PARA 1151). The Bar Council may waive the duty imposed on a barrister to comply with the Code of Conduct in such circumstances and to such extent as it thinks fit and either conditionally or unconditionally: see para 108. The Code of Conduct has no application to student members of the Inns of Court, who are subject to the Consolidated Regulations (see PARA 1060).

9 In its application to international work, the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) is subject to Annexe A (International Practice Rules): see PARA 1164.

1151. Code of Conduct for lawyers in the European Union.

The Council of the Bars and Law Societies of Europe (CCBE), of which the Bar Council is a member, has issued a Code of Conduct for European Lawyers¹. This code has been incorporated as part of the Code of Conduct of the Bar². It applies to cross-border activities of lawyers within the European Union and European Economic Area³, that is, all professional contacts with lawyers of member states other than the lawyer's own and the professional activities of the lawyer in a member state other than his own (whether or not the lawyer is physically present in that member state)⁴.

1 The code was originally adopted on 28 October 1988, and has been subsequently amended on 28 November 1998, 6 December 2002 and 19 May 2006.

2 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe Q (Code of Conduct for European Lawyers). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

3 I.e. such lawyers as are defined by Council Directive 77/249/EC of 22 March 1977 (OJ L078, 26.03.77, p 17) to facilitate the effective exercise by lawyers of freedom to provide services, and Council Directive 98/5/EC of 16 February 1998 (OJ L077, 14.3.98, p. 36) to facilitate practice of the profession of lawyer on a permanent basis in a member state other than that in which the qualification was obtained: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe Q (Code of Conduct for European Lawyers) para 1.4. The Code of Conduct for European Lawyers also applies to lawyers of the Observer members of the CCBE: para 1.4.

1152. Practice as a barrister.

For the purposes of the Code of Conduct of the Bar¹, a barrister practises as a barrister² if he supplies legal services³ and in connection with their supply either holds himself out (or allows himself to be held out) as a barrister⁴ or exercises a right which he has by reason of being a barrister⁵.

For the purposes of the Code of Conduct, 'legal services' includes legal advice, representation, and drafting or settling statements of case, witness statements⁶, affidavits or other legal documents⁷, but does not include:

- 1679 (1) sitting as a judge or arbitrator or acting as a mediator⁸;
- 1680 (2) lecturing in or teaching law or writing or editing law books, articles or reports⁹;
- 1681 (3) examining newspapers, periodicals, books, scripts and other publications for libel, breach of copyright, contempt of court and the like¹⁰;
- 1682 (4) communicating to or in the press or other media¹¹;
- 1683 (5) exercising the powers of a commissioner for oaths¹²;
- 1684 (6) giving advice on legal matters free to a friend or relative or acting as unpaid or honorary legal adviser to any charitable, benevolent or philanthropic institution¹³; or
- 1685 (7) in relation to a barrister who is a non-executive director of a company or a trustee or governor of a charitable, benevolent or philanthropic institution or a trustee of any private trust, giving to the other directors, trustees or governors the benefit of his learning and experience on matters of general legal principle applicable to the affairs of the company, institution or trust¹⁴.

⁴ Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 201(a)(i). The Bar Standards Board Guidance on Holding Out as a Barrister provides a non-exhaustive list of examples of behaviour which might amount to 'holding out', including: (1) describing oneself as a barrister in any printed material used in connection with the provision of legal services, in particular in advertising or publicity, on a card or letterhead, or on premises; (2) describing oneself as a barrister to clients or prospective clients; (3) indicating to opposing parties or their representatives (eg in correspondence) that one is a barrister; (4) describing oneself as a barrister or as 'counsel', wearing robes, or sitting in a place reserved for counsel, in court; and (5) using other descriptions in such contexts which imply that the individual is a barrister (eg membership of an Inn of Court). As to guidance see PARA 1150.

1153. The right to practise.

A barrister may practise as a barrister¹ provided that:

1686 (1) he has complied with the training requirements which were in force at the date of his call to the Bar²;

1687 (2) he has complied with any applicable requirements of the regulations for continuing professional development³;

1688 (3) he has a current practising certificate⁴; and 1689 (4) he has provided the Bar Council with details of his current practising address⁵.

Barristers may, however, by notifying certain information to the Bar Council and to their clients, exempt themselves from the provisions of the Code of Conduct applying only to practising barristers⁶.

A barrister who is a pupil⁷ may also supply legal services as a barrister, subject to certain conditions⁸. Barristers who are members of other authorised bodies⁹ and barristers who hold certain offices are prevented from, or restricted in, exercising their right to practise¹⁰.

1 As to practising as a barrister see PARA 1152 et seq.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 202(a). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. The relevant training requirements are those set out in the Consolidated Regulations (2007): see para 202(a). For requirements relating to admission, education, pupillage, examination and call to the Bar see PARAS 1060-1108. A barrister who was called to the Bar before 1 January 2002 but who has not completed or has been exempted from 12 months' pupillage in accordance with the Consolidated Regulations in force at the relevant time may practise as a barrister, but the exercise of his rights of audience is restricted: see the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) paras 203.4, 1102. As to the restriction on such a person's rights of audience see PARA 1158 note 2. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

3 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 202(b). As to the continuing professional development requirements see Annexe C (Continuing Professional Development Regulations); and PARA 1154.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 202(c). A current practising certificate is a certificate issued by the Bar Council in accordance with Annexe D (The Practising Certificate Regulations): see PARA 1155. As to the meaning of 'Bar Council' see PARA 1042 note 1.

5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 202(d). This requirement is satisfied by a barrister providing in writing to the Bar Council details of the current address or addresses, with telephone numbers, of the chambers or office from which he supplies legal services and (if he is an employed barrister) the name, address, telephone number and nature of the business of his employer: para 202(d). 'Chambers' means a place at or from which one or more self-employed barristers carry on their practices, and also refers, where the context so requires, to all the barristers (excluding pupils) who for the time being carry on their practices at or from that place: para 1001. As to employed barristers and their employers see PARA 1037.

6 A barrister who was called to the Bar before 31 July 2000 and who is deemed to be practising on the grounds that he holds himself out or allows himself to be held out as a barrister (ie by virtue of the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 201(a)(i) (see PARA 1152)) in England and Wales, and a barrister whenever called who is deemed to be practising by virtue of para 201(a)(i) outside England and Wales and who is not subject to Annexe A (International Practice Rules) r 4(e) (see PARA 1164), is not subject to the rules in the Code of Conduct applying only to practising barristers provided that certain requirements are satisfied: paras 206.1, 206.2. The first requirements are that if the barrister supplies any legal services to any person, he must provide in writing to the Bar Council the contact and employment details set out in note 5 and, unless he is employed only to offer services to his employer, he (or, if he is supplying legal services to clients of his employer, that employer) is currently insured by insurers authorised to conduct such business against any and all claims in respect of civil liability for professional negligence arising out of or in connection with the supply of legal services for at least the first £250,000 of each and every claim, with an excess not exceeding £500: paras 206.1(a), 206.2. The second requirements are that before supplying legal services to any person or employer, and when first dealing with any third party in the course of supplying legal services, the barrister informs them fully and comprehensibly in writing: (1) of his status and the fact that he does not hold a practising certificate under the Code of Conduct; (2) of the relevant limitations under the Code of Conduct on the legal services he may undertake; (3) that he is not fully regulated by the Bar Council; and (4) of the absence of available compensatory powers for any inadequate professional service he may render: paras 206.1(b), 206.2. Any barrister who before 31 July 2000 had delivered to the Bar Council the notification and information referred to in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (6th Edn) para 212(b)(ii) or was exempted by waiver from that requirement remains entitled until 31 July 2005 to supply legal services to the public on condition that he complies with those requirements of para 212(b)-(e) which on 31 July 2000 applied to him and provided that he may not thereby be entitled to exercise any right of audience which he has by reason of being a barrister: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1106. As to the meaning of 'legal services', and as to the supply of legal services, see PARA 1152. As to practising certificates see PARA 1155. As to inadequate professional services see PARA 1248. A barrister who is exempted under para 206.1 is not authorised to provide immigration advice or services under the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 84 (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 170): see R v K [2008] EWCA Crim 1900, [2008] All ER (D) 93 (Aug).

7 As to pupillage see PARAS 1080-1097.

8 See PARA 1093.

9 'Authorised body' means any body other than the Bar Council authorised to grant rights of audience or rights to conduct litigation under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001.

10 See PARA 1157.

1154. Continuing professional development.

A barrister may not practise¹ unless he has complied with the Bar Council's² requirements as to continuing professional development³. These requirements are contained in regulations⁴, and their application to an individual barrister depends upon when he was called⁵. The requirements may be waived in whole or in part⁶.

1 As to practising as a barrister see PARA 1152.

2 As to the meaning of 'Bar Council' see PARA 1042 note 1.

3 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 202(b); and PARA 1153. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. A barrister who is practising as a foreign lawyer and who does not give advice on English law or supply legal services in connection with any proceedings or contemplated proceedings in England and Wales (other than as an expert witness on foreign law) need not, in relation to international work substantially performed outside England and Wales, show that he has complied with the continuing professional development requirements: Annexe A (International Practice Rules) r 4(e). A foreign lawyer is a person (other than a registered European lawyer) who is authorised by a competent professional body to practise in a system of law other than English law: para 1001. As to the meaning of 'European lawyer' see PARA 535. As to the meaning of 'registered European lawyer' see PARA 1102 note 7. 'English law' includes international law and the law of the European Union: para 1001. As to the meaning of 'legal services' see PARA 1152. As to international work see PARA 1164. 1154 Continuing professional development

NOTE 3--Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe B amended on 1 September 2009.

1155. Practising certificates.

A barrister may not practise as a barrister¹ unless he holds a current practising certificate issued by the Bar Standards Board². The Board is authorised by statute to require applicants for practising certificates to pay fees³. Different fees may be set for different descriptions of barrister⁴, but fees may not be set with a view to raising a total amount in excess of that applied by the Board for designated purposes⁵.

A barrister qualifies for a practising certificate if he satisfies the other requirements which confer upon him the right to practise⁶, has paid the prescribed fee⁷, and has paid any required insurance premium so as to be insured against claims for professional negligence⁸. The Board may, however, refuse to issue a certificate to a barrister if it is satisfied that he has failed to comply with any of these requirements or would be practising in breach of relevant provisions of the Code of Conduct⁹. A practising certificate is valid until the due date for renewal¹⁰ unless the barrister's status changes¹¹ or the holder is disbarred or suspended from practice¹².

1 As to practising as a barrister see PARA 1152.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 202(c); and see PARA 1153. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049). The rules relating to and requiring the holding of practising certificates apply to all barristers and registered European lawyers holding themselves out as offering legal services as barristers to the public or to their employer, although they do not apply to non-practising barristers: Annexe D (The Practising Certificate Regulations) reg 4. As to the meaning of 'European lawyer' see PARA 535. As to the meaning of 'registered European lawyer' see PARA 1102 note 7. As to the meaning of 'legal services' see PARA 1152. As to the meaning of 'employer', in the context of an employed barrister, see PARA 1037 note 10. As to non-practising barristers see PARA 1035. 'The public' includes any lay client of a practising barrister (or in the case of an employed barrister, of the barrister's employer) other than any of the persons referred to in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 501 (see PARA 1161); and 'lay client' means the person on whose behalf a practising barrister (or where appropriate in the case of an employed barrister, his employer) is instructed: see para 1001.

Full practising certificates must be issued to all barristers and registered European lawyers notifying the Board that they wish to commence or recommence practice and annually thereafter on each renewal date (Annexe D (The Practising Certificate Regulations) reg 10), although the Board may not issue a practising certificate to any barrister who has been disbarred or is subject to an order suspending him from practice (Annexe D (The Practising Certificate Regulations) reg 14). As to the responsibility to ensure that all barristers practising from chambers have current practising certificates see para 404.2(j); and PARA 1241. As to the meaning of 'chambers' see PARA 1153 note 5.

3 See the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 46(1). No provision of rules made by the Bar Standards Board about practising certificates has effect unless approved by the Secretary of State: see s 46(5) (amended by SI 2003/1887). As from a day to be appointed the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 46(5) is repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007, ss 208(1), 210, Sch 21, paras 127, 131(b), Sch 23. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. and fundamental freedoms; and (5) the promotion of relations between the Bar Council and bodies representing the members of legal professions in jurisdictions other than England and Wales: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 46(2)(b)(i)-(v) (as so amended). As to the power to amend the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 46(2)(b) see the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 46(3), (4) (amended by SI 2003/1887). As to the application of fee revenue see the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe D (The Practising Certificate Regulations) regs 5-9.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(ii) Practising Rights/A. BARRISTERS GENERALLY/1156. Fitness to practise.

1156. Fitness to practise.

For the purposes of the Code of Conduct of the Bar¹, a barrister is unfit to practise if he is suffering from serious incapacity due to his physical or mental condition² as a result of which his fitness to practise is seriously impaired³, and his suspension or the imposition of conditions is necessary for the protection of the public⁴. Where information or a complaint in writing is received by the Bar Standards Board⁵ about any barrister who holds a practising certificate which raises a question whether the barrister is unfit to practise, the Complaints Commissioner may refer the case to a medical panel⁶ which may, if having heard the case against the barrister it is satisfied that he is or is about to become unfit to practise, suspend him, prohibit him from carrying out any public access instructions, or make his continued practice subject to conditions⁷. Barristers suspended or prohibited from practising by medical panels may apply for their cases to be reviewed⁸, and decisions of a medical panel may also be appealed against⁹.

The Commissioner must refer the case if: (1) the case having been referred to him under Annexe O (Fitness to Practise Rules) r 7, he considers a barrister may be unfit to practise; (2) a complaint of professional misconduct or inadequate professional service has been referred to the Commissioner or the Complaints Committee during the investigation of which it appears that a barrister may be unfit to practise; (3) in any other circumstances it appears to the Commissioner, the Complaints Committee or any other disciplinary panel or tribunal that a barrister may be unfit to practise; or (4) a barrister requests the Commissioner in writing to refer his case to a medical panel: Annexe O (Fitness to Practise Rules) r 8. As to what constitutes professional misconduct see PARA 1247. As to the meaning of 'inadequate professional service' see PARA 1248. 1157. Barristers who are members of other authorised bodies.

A barrister who is a member of another authorised body¹ and is currently entitled to practise as such may not practise as a barrister². Additionally, a barrister who:

- 1690 (1) has had his name struck off the roll of solicitors³ or been excluded from membership of an authorised body;
- 1691 (2) has at any time been found guilty of any professional misconduct or is the subject of any continuing disciplinary proceedings in relation to his professional conduct as a member of an authorised body; or
- 1692 (3) has at any time been refused a practising certificate as a solicitor⁴ or had his practising certificate suspended or made subject to a condition, may not practise as a barrister until the Complaints Committee⁵ has considered his case and, if it decides to refer the case to a disciplinary tribunal⁶, until the case is finally determined⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'authorised body' see PARA 1153 note 9.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 808.1. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. A barrister who is a member of another authorised body and currently entitled to practise as a member of that body is not deemed to be practising as a barrister if he holds himself out as a barrister provided that before supplying legal services to any person or employer, and when first dealing with any third party in the course of supplying legal services, he informs them fully and comprehensibly in writing: (1) of his status and the fact that he does not hold a practising certificate under the Code of Conduct; (2) of the relevant limitations under the Code of Conduct on the legal services he may undertake; (3) that he is not fully regulated by the Bar Council; and (4) of the absence of available compensatory powers for any inadequate professional services he may render: para 808.4. As to the meaning of 'legal services', as to the supply of legal services, and for examples of behaviour which might amount to 'holding out' as a barrister, see PARA 1152. As to the meaning of 'employer', in the context of an employed barrister, see PARA 1037 note 10. As to practising certificates see PARA 1155. As to inadequate professional services see PARA 1248.

A barrister who becomes entitled to practise as a member of another authorised body must forthwith inform the Bar Council and the Inn or Inns of which he is a member in writing of that fact: para 808.2. As to the Bar Council see PARAS 1042-1048. As to the Inns of Court see PARAS 1050-1052.

7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 808.3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(ii) Practising Rights/A. BARRISTERS GENERALLY/1158. Exercise of rights of audience.

1158. Exercise of rights of audience.

A barrister may exercise any right of audience which he has by reason of being a barrister¹, provided that he is entitled to practise as a barrister², although if he is of less than three years' standing³, this is subject to the requirement that his principal place of practice is either:

1693 (1) a chambers⁴ or annexe of chambers which is also the principal place of practice of a qualified person⁵ who is readily available to provide guidance to the barrister⁶; or

1694 (2) an office of an organisation of which an employee, partner or director is a qualified person who is readily available to provide guidance to the barrister⁷.

A barrister who is a pupil may also exercise a right of audience which he has by reason of being a barrister, subject to certain conditions⁸.

1 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 203.1. As to the meaning of 'right of audience', and as to the rights of audience a person has by reason of being a barrister, see PARA 1109. Any barrister who on 31 July 2000 was entitled to exercise any right of audience which he had by reason of being a barrister is entitled to exercise that right of audience: paras 203.4, 1103. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 203.1(a). As to entitlement to practise as a barrister see the Code of Conduct para 202; and PARA 1153. A barrister who was called to the Bar before 1 January 2002 but who has not completed or been exempted from 12 months' pupillage in accordance with the Consolidated Regulations in force at the relevant time may practise as a barrister but cannot exercise a right of audience unless he has notified the Bar Standards Board in writing of his wish to do so and either: (1) he has complied with any conditions as to further training which the Board may require; or (2) he has been informed by the Board that he is not required to comply with any such conditions: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) paras 203.4, 1102. The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049). As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

3 A barrister is treated for these purposes as being of a particular number of years' standing if for a period (which need not be continuous and need not have been as a member of the same authorised body) of at least that number of years he: (1) has been entitled to practise and has practised as a barrister (other than as a pupil who has not completed pupillage in accordance with the Consolidated Regulations) or as a member of another authorised body (Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 203.2(a)); (2) has made such practice his primary occupation (para 203.2(b)); and (3) has been entitled to exercise a right of audience before every court in relation to all proceedings (para 203.2(c)). Note that any barrister who during any period before 31 July 2000 was entitled to exercise a right of audience as an employed barrister may for the purpose of para 203.2(c) (see head (3) above) count that period as if he had been entitled during that period to exercise a right of audience before every court in relation to all proceedings, provided that he has notified the Bar Standards Board in writing of his wish to do so and either: (a) he has complied with any conditions (including any conditions as to further training) which the Board may require; or (b) he has been informed by the Board that he is not required to comply with any such conditions: paras 203.4, 1104. As to the meaning of 'authorised body' see PARA 1153 note 9. As to rights of audience generally see PARAS 1109-1123. 'Court' includes any court or tribunal or any other person or body, whether sitting in public or in private, before whom a barrister appears or may appear as an advocate: para 1001. As to pupillage see PARAS 1080-1097.

4 As to the meaning of 'chambers' see PARA 1153 note 5.

5 A person is a qualified person for these purposes if he: (1) has been entitled to practise and has practised as a barrister (other than as a pupil who has not completed pupillage in accordance with the Consolidated Regulations) or as a member of another authorised body for a period (which need not have been as a member of the same authorised body) of at least six years in the previous eight years (Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 203.3(a)); (2) has for the previous two years made such practice his primary occupation (para 203.3(b)(i)) and has been entitled to exercise a right of audience before every court in relation to all proceedings (para 203.3(b)(ii)); (3) is not acting as a qualified person in relation to more than two other persons (para 203.3(c)); and (4) has not been designated by the Bar Standards Board as unsuitable to be a qualified person (para 203.3(d)). Note that any person who became entitled before 31 July 2002 to exercise a right of audience before every court in relation to all proceedings is a qualified person without having satisfied para 203.3(b)(ii) if he has: (a) has satisfied the other requirements of para 203.3; (b) notified the Board in writing of his wish to act as a qualified person; and (c) been designated by the Board as suitable so to act: paras 203.4, 1105.

In respect of a barrister who is exercising a right to practise in a member state other than the United Kingdom pursuant to EC Council Directive 98/5 of 16 February 1998 (OJ L078, 14.03.98, p 36) to facilitate practice of the profession of lawyer on a permanent basis in a member state other than that in which the qualification was obtained (the 'Establishment Directive'), a person is also a qualified person for these purposes if he: (i) has been designated by the Board as possessing qualifications and experience in that state or country which are equivalent to the qualifications and experience required by the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 203.3(a), (b); (ii) is not acting as a qualified person in relation to two or more than two other persons; and (iii) has not been designated by the Board as unsuitable to be a qualified person: Annexe A (International Practice Rules) r 5. For the purposes of the Code of Conduct, 'member state' means a state which is a member of the European Communities: para 1001.

- 6 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 203.1(b)(i).
- 7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 203.1(b)(ii).
- 8 See PARA 1093.

- 1695 (1) he complies with the requirements as to the exercise of rights of audience⁴;
- 1696 (2) he is insured against claims for professional negligence arising out of the supply of his services⁵.

In general⁶, a practising barrister may not supply legal services to the public through or on behalf of any other person⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'practising barrister' see PARA 1152 note 2.

2 As to the meaning of 'legal services', and as to the supply of legal services, see PARA 1152. The requirements set out in this paragraph do not apply in relation to international work substantially performed outside England and Wales by a barrister who is practising as a foreign lawyer and who does not give advice on English law or supply legal services in connection with any proceedings or contemplated proceedings in England and Wales (other than as an expert witness on foreign law): see the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annex A (International Practice Rules) r 4(e). 5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 204(b). A practising barrister may supply legal services to the public provided he is covered (and in the case of an employed barrister his employer is covered) by insurance against claims for professional negligence arising out of the supply of his services in such amount and upon such terms as are currently required by the Bar Standards Board: see para 204(b). As to the insurance requirement (which is varied in the case of barrister who is undertaking international work) see further PARA 1239. As to employed barristers and their employers see PARA 1037. 1161 Supply of legal services by employed barristers

NOTES 14, 17--Day appointed is 1 January 2010: SI 2009/3250.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(ii) Practising Rights/C. EMPLOYED BARRISTERS/1162. Employed barristers' rights to conduct litigation.

1162. Employed barristers' rights to conduct litigation.

The Bar Standards Board¹ is authorised, though not required, by statute to grant to barristers rights to conduct litigation², but it has exercised this power only in respect of employed barristers³, who have a right to conduct litigation in relation to every court⁴ and all proceedings before any court⁵. The right may be exercised by any employed barrister who is entitled to practise as a barrister⁶ and has spent a period of at least 12 weeks working under the supervision of a qualified person⁷, subject to certain additional requirements which apply during the initial period of entitlement to exercise the right⁸.

1 The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

2 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 28(2)(a)(i), (5)(aa), (5A); and PARA 498. As to the meaning of 'right to conduct litigation' see PARA 1161 note 14. As to rights to conduct litigation see also COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 331-332.

3 As to employed barristers see PARA 1037. Note that a barrister is eligible to be appointed to the office of Official Solicitor (see the Supreme Court Act 1981 Sch 2 Pt I para 2; and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 647-648, 667), who has the right to conduct litigation (see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 90(3A); and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 667). As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is renamed the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 1158 note 3.

5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 504. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. Any breach of an undertaking given by an employed barrister in the conduct of litigation constitutes professional misconduct: Annexe I (Employed Barristers (Conduct of Litigation) Rules) r 4. As to what constitutes professional misconduct see PARA 1247.

6 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe I (Employed Barristers (Conduct of Litigation) Rules) r 1(a). As to entitlement to practise as a barrister see PARA 1152 et seq.

7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe I (Employed Barristers (Conduct of Litigation) Rules) r 1(b). 'Qualified person' is not defined for the purposes of r 1(b), but cf the definition of 'qualified person' for the purposes of r 1(c) (see note 8). The Bar Standards Board may exempt a person from the requirement contained in r 1(b) on the grounds of his relevant experience: Annexe I (Employed Barristers (Conduct of Litigation) Rules) r 1(b).

8 An employed barrister of less than one year's standing (or three years' standing in the case of a barrister who is supplying litigation services to any person other than a person to whom he is entitled to provide legal services in the course of his employment (see the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 501; and PARA 1161)) may exercise the right to conduct litigation only if his principal place of practice is an office which is also the principal place of practice of a qualified person who is able to provide guidance to him: Annexe I (Employed Barristers (Conduct of Litigation) Rules) r 1(c). For these purposes, an employed barrister is treated as being of a particular number of years' standing if he has been entitled to practise and has practised as a barrister (other than as a pupil who has not completed pupillage in accordance with the Consolidated Regulations (2007) (see PARAS 1080-1097)) or as a member of another authorised body, has made such practice his primary occupation, and has been entitled to exercise a right to conduct litigation in relation to every court and all proceedings, for a period (which need not be continuous and need not have been as a member of the same authorised body) of at least that number of years: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe I (Employed Barristers (Conduct of Litigation) Rules) r 2. As to the meaning of 'authorised body' see PARA 1153 note 9. 'Litigation services' are any services which it would be reasonable to expect a person who is exercising, or contemplating exercising, a right to conduct litigation in relation to any proceedings, or contemplated proceedings, to provide: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 119(1); Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001. 'Proceedings' means proceedings in any court: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 119(1). As to the meaning of 'legal services' see PARA 1152. For the purposes of the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe I (Employed Barristers (Conduct of Litigation) Rules) r 1(c), a person is a qualified person if he: (1) has been entitled to practise and has practised as a barrister (other than as a pupil who has not completed pupillage in accordance with the Consolidated Regulations (2007)) or as a member of another authorised body for a period (which need not have been as a member of the same authorised body) of at least six years in the previous eight years; (2) has for the previous two years made such practice his primary occupation and been entitled to exercise a right to conduct litigation in relation to every court and all proceedings; (3) is not acting as a qualified person in relation to more than two other people; and (4) has not been designated by the Bar Council as unsuitable to be a qualified person: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe I (Employed Barristers (Conduct of Litigation) Rules) r 3. As to the Consolidated Regulations (2007) see PARA 1060.

In addition, an employed barrister of less than three years' standing may exercise the right to conduct litigation only if he completes at least six hours of continuing professional development on an approved litigation course during any year in which he is required to undertake continuing professional development under the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe C (The Continuing Professional Development Regulations) (see PARA 1154): Annexe I (Employed Barristers (Conduct of Litigation) Rules) r 1(d).

1162 Employed barristers' rights to conduct litigation

NOTE 3--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

D. EUROPEAN AND INTERNATIONAL PRACTICE

1163. Right to practise in the European Union.

A barrister is entitled to practise before all the national courts of the European Community provided he complies with the local rules and acts in conjunction with a local lawyer¹.

The Code of Conduct of the Bar makes special provision in relation to international practice by barristers² and incorporates the Code of Conduct for Lawyers in the European Union which applies to cross-border activities³.

1 See PARA 534.

2 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe A (International Practice Rules); and PARA 1164. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

3 The Code of Conduct for Lawyers in the European Union is annexed to the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004): see Annexe Q (The Code of Conduct for European Lawyers); and PARA 1151.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(ii) Practising Rights/D. EUROPEAN AND INTERNATIONAL PRACTICE/1164. Rules of conduct applicable to international work.

1164. Rules of conduct applicable to international work.

The Code of Conduct contains special rules which apply to international work¹, that is, practice as a barrister where:

1707 (1) the work relates to matters or proceedings essentially arising, taking place or contemplated outside England and Wales, and is to be substantially performed outside England and Wales²; or 1708 (2) the lay client³ carries on business or usually resides outside England and Wales, the instructions⁴ emanate from outside England and Wales, and the work does not involve the barrister in providing advocacy services⁵.

A barrister undertaking international work must comply with any applicable rule of conduct prescribed by the law or by any national or local Bar of either the place where the work is, or is to be, performed or the place where any proceedings or matters to which the work relates are taking place or contemplated⁶. He is exempted from the rules restricting public access to self-employed barristers⁷ and from the 'cab-rank rule'⁸. In relation to international work which is substantially performed outside England and Wales, the restrictions on the services which a self-employed barrister may supply⁹ are also inapplicable¹⁰; provision with regard to fees¹¹ applies on the basis that the applicable law is that of the place where the work is performed¹²; and a practising barrister may enter into any association, including partnership, with any lawyer other than a member of another authorised body¹³ for the purpose of sharing any office, services or fees¹⁴.

A barrister who is practising as a foreign lawyer¹⁵ and does not give advice on English law¹⁶ or supply legal services¹⁷ in connection with any proceedings or contemplated proceedings in England and Wales, other than as an expert witness on foreign law, is not treated as a practising barrister¹⁸ for the purposes of the Code of Conduct¹⁹, and a practising barrister employed by a foreign lawyer or foreign legal practice may supply legal services to any client²⁰ of his employer²¹.

A practising barrister who supplies legal services as a barrister (other than to his employer) outside England and Wales must be covered by insurance against claims for professional negligence arising out of the supply of his services²².

A barrister who solicits work in any jurisdiction outside England and Wales must not do so in a manner which would be prohibited if the barrister were a member of the local Bar²³.

4 'Instructions' means instructions or directions in whatever form (including a brief) given to a practising barrister to supply legal services whether in a contentious or in a non-contentious matter; and 'instructed' has a corresponding meaning: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 1001. As to the meaning of 'proceedings' see PARA 1162 note 8. As to rights of audience see PARAS 1109-1123.

6 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annex A (The International Practice Rules) r 2. This does not apply, however, if the rule is inconsistent with any requirement of the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Pt III (paras 301-307) (see PARAS 1168-1172): Annex A (The International Practice Rules) r 2.

BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(ii) Practising Rights/E. FOREIGN LAWYERS/1165. Right to practise deriving from temporary membership of the Bar.

E. FOREIGN LAWYERS

1165. Right to practise deriving from temporary membership of the Bar.

A member of the Bar of Northern Ireland, a member of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland, other common law practitioner¹, or European lawyer² who is qualified to apply for permanent membership of the Bar³ is also eligible to be admitted to temporary membership of an Inn⁴ and of the Bar for the purpose of conducting a particular case before a court or courts of England and Wales⁵.

A person who is granted such temporary membership is required to give undertakings in his call declaration⁶ that he will not while in England and Wales do anything in relation to the provision of legal services in England and Wales which may not properly be done by a self-employed barrister⁷ in England and Wales⁸, that he will not provide any other legal services⁹ to any person¹⁰, and that he will not, whether in England or Wales or elsewhere, rely on the fact that he is or has been a member of the Bar for any purpose whatsoever other than for the purpose of conducting the relevant case or cases¹¹, as well as an undertaking that he will comply with the Code of Conduct of the Bar¹².

A person temporarily called to the Bar on this basis may not practise as a barrister other than to conduct the case or cases for the purposes of which he was admitted¹³, and his temporary membership automatically ceases on the conclusion of that case or cases¹⁴.

1 Is a legal practitioner in a common law jurisdiction other than England and Wales who has for a period of not less than three years regularly exercised rights of audience in superior courts which administer law which is substantially equivalent to the common law of England and Wales: Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 36(a) (iii). As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1060.

2 As to the meaning of 'European lawyer' see PARA 535.

3 Is qualified to apply for permanent membership under the Consolidated Regulations (2007) regs 28-34 (European lawyers) (see PARAS 535, 1102-1107) or under reg 36 (Irish, Scottish and other qualified lawyers) (see PARAS 1100-1101): reg 37. For these purposes, such a person is referred to as a 'qualified lawyer': reg 37. As to the Bar as a profession see PARA 1034. As to the requirements for call to the Bar generally see PARAS 1075-1078.

4 As to the meaning of 'Inn' see PARA 1063 note 4.

5 Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 37. An applicant for temporary membership must obtain a certificate from the Qualifications Committee that he is a qualified lawyer: reg 38. Before issuing such a certificate the Qualifications Committee will normally require to see the applicant's certificate of good standing (see Sch 9) and evidence which establishes that a solicitor or solicitors wish to brief the applicant to appear in the case or cases in respect of which he seeks temporary membership (reg 38). The certification issued by the Qualifications Committee must specify the case or cases in respect of which the applicant seeks temporary membership: reg 38. There is provision for these decisions to be reviewed by the Committee, and for an appeal from such a review to the Visitors of the Inns of Court: see reg 40, Sch 10 para 11. As to the meaning of 'Qualifications Committee' see PARA 1060 note 12. As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court is renamed the Senior Courts: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1), Sch 11 Pt 1; and COURTS. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

1166. Registered European lawyers.

A European lawyer¹ is entitled to be registered as such by the Bar Standards Board² and one of the Inns of Court³, and having been so registered is entitled to carry out under his home professional title⁴ any professional activity that may lawfully be carried out by any other barrister⁵. The Board has made rules as part of the Code of Conduct of the Bar⁶ under which a European lawyer registered as such by the Board may supply legal services⁷, and exercise rights of audience⁸, using his home professional title⁹, subject to certain conditions¹⁰.

A registered European lawyer undertaking professional work in England and Wales must comply with all the provisions of the Code of Conduct as if he were a self-employed barrister¹¹ or an employed barrister¹², as the case may be, and as if references in the Code of Conduct to barristers included references to registered European lawyers¹³. He is exempted, however, from the provisions of the Code of Conduct concerning the requirements that must be satisfied in order to practise as a barrister, exercise rights of audience and supply legal services to the public¹⁴, the provisions restricting direct access and the work which may be undertaken by self-employed barristers¹⁵, and the provisions relating to pupillage¹⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'European lawyer' see PARA 535.

2 The European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, refer to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

3 As to the registration of European lawyers see PARA 1102. As to the meaning of 'Inn' see PARA 1063 note 4.

4 As to the meaning of 'home professional title' see PARA 1102 note 3. As to the use of a home professional title when practising in England and Wales see the European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, reg 7.

5 European Communities (Lawyer's Practice) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/1119, reg 6(1). Any enactment or rule of law or practice with regard to the carrying out of professional activities by barristers is to be interpreted and applied accordingly: reg 6(1). A registered European lawyer who is in salaried employment may carry out professional activities under his home professional title to the same extent that an employed barrister may do so: reg 6(2). As to employed barristers see PARA 1037. Registered European lawyers may also carry out professional activities in a joint practice with other European lawyers (see regs 8-10), although their rights in connection with the preparation of instruments creating or transferring interests in land or for obtaining title to administer the estate of a deceased person are restricted (see regs 12, 13).

7 As to the meaning of 'legal services' see PARA 1152.

8 As to the rights of audience of registered European lawyers see PARA 537.

9 A registered European lawyer must in connection with all professional work undertaken in England and Wales use his home professional title, indicate the name of his home professional body or the court before which he is entitled to practise in the relevant member state, and indicate that he is registered with the Bar Standards Board as a European lawyer: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe B (The Registered European Lawyers Rules) r 4.

10 The conditions are:

- 544 (1) that he has a current practising certificate issued by the Bar Standards Board in accordance with the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe D (The Practising Certificate Regulations) (see PARA 1155) (Annexe B (The Registered European Lawyers Rules) r 5(1));
- 545 (2) that, if he supplies legal services to the public, he is covered by insurance against claims for professional negligence arising out of the supply of his services in England and Wales in such amount and upon such terms as are required by the Bar Council and has delivered to the Board a copy of the current insurance policy or the current certificate in insurance issued by the insurer (Annexe B (Registered European Lawyers Rules) r 5(2)), although he may apply to be exempt from this requirement (see the Consolidated Regulations (2007) reg 28(f)); and for this purpose a European lawyer so practising is exempt from the provisions of the Code of Conduct relating to professional insurance (ie the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 402 (see PARA 1239)) (Annexe B (Registered European Lawyers Rules) r 6)); and
- 546 (3) that where the professional activities in question may be lawfully provided only by a solicitor or barrister, he acts in conjunction with a solicitor or barrister who is entitled to practise before the court, tribunal or public authority concerned and who could lawfully provide those professional activities (Annexe B (Registered European Lawyers Rules) r 5(3)).

NOTES 6, 9, 10, 13--Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe B amended on 1 September 2009.

1167. Other foreign lawyers.

A foreign lawyer¹ (other than a registered European lawyer²) may be permitted to practise from a barrister's chambers³, in which case he is required to give a written undertaking that he will comply with the Code of Conduct of the Bar as is he were a self-employed barrister⁴, except in so far as any requirement of the Code of Conduct conflicts with the rules of his own profession⁵.

(iii) Fundamental Principles

1168. Barristers' duties.

Certain duties set out in the Code of Conduct of the Bar are classified as 'fundamental principles'¹. Foremost of these is the general duty, which applies to every barrister, whether practising or not², not to engage in any conduct, whether in pursuit of his profession or otherwise, which is:

- 1709 (1) dishonest or otherwise discreditable to a barrister³;
- 1710 (2) prejudicial to the administration of justice⁴; or
- 1711 (3) likely to diminish public confidence in the legal profession or the administration of justice or otherwise bring the legal profession into disrepute⁵.

As a corollary to this duty, a barrister must not engage in any occupation if his association with that occupation may adversely affect the reputation of the Bar or, in the case of a practising barrister, prejudice his ability to attend properly to his practice⁶.

1169. Overriding duty to the court.

A practising barrister¹ has an overriding duty to the court² to act with independence in the interests of justice³. He must assist the court in the administration of justice and must not deceive or knowingly or recklessly mislead the court⁴.

Further examples of the duty to the court are the responsibilities of counsel to conduct proceedings economically⁵, to bring all relevant authorities to the attention of the court whether or not they assist the party for whom he appears⁶, to bring to the attention of the court any procedural irregularity which occurs during the course of the trial⁷, to ensure that the court is not invited to enforce an illegal transaction⁸, and not to make allegations of dishonesty without a proper basis to support them⁹.

1 As to the meaning of 'practising barrister' see PARA 1152 note 2.

2 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 1158 note 3.

3 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 302. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. This duty has been given statutory force in relation to every person who exercises before any court a right of audience granted by an authorised body: see the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 27(2A)(a) (added by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 42(1); prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 208(1), 210, Sch 21, paras 83, 84(d), Sch 23). As to the meaning of 'authorised body' see PARA 1153 note 9. As from a day to be appointed a person who exercises before any court a right of audience, or conducts litigation in relation to proceedings in any court, by virtue of being an authorised person in relation to the activity in question, has a duty to the court in question to act with independence in the interests of justice: see the Legal Services Act 2007 s 188(1), (2). This duty overrides any obligations which the person may have (otherwise than under the criminal law) if they are inconsistent with them: see s 188(3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See also para 513. As to the meaning of 'authorised person' see PARA 515.

The duty is also recognised at common law: see eg Rondel v Worsley [1969] 1 AC 191 at 227, [1967] 3 All ER 993 at 998, HL, per Lord Reid; Abse v Smith [1986] QB 536 at 546, [1986] 1 All ER 350 at 354, CA, per Sir John Donaldson MR; and see Beevis v Dawson [1957] 1 QB 195 at 201, [1956] 3 All ER 837 at 839, CA, per Singleton LJ; Arthur JS Hall & Co (a firm) v Simons [2002] 1 AC 615 at 686, [2000] 3 All ER 673 at 687, HL, per Lord Hoffmann; Geveran Trading Co Ltd v Skjevesland [2002] EWCA Civ 1567 at [37], [2003] 1 All ER 1 at [37] per Arden LJ. The duty does not, in civil proceedings, require a barrister to disclose evidence favourable to the other side: Khudados v Hayden [2007] EWCA Civ 1316, [2007] All ER (D) 203 (Dec).

Although, at time before case reports were available on the internet, the Court of Appeal stated that if a case is listed for trial at a place where there is insufficient access to authorities, it is counsel's responsibility to alert the court and to seek to get the case transferred to a court where the necessary material can be made available: R v Madden [1975] 3 All ER 155 at 157, [1975] 1 WLR 1379 at 1382 per James LJ. 1170. Duty to the lay client.

Subject only to his duty to the court¹, a practising barrister² must promote and protect fearlessly and by all proper and lawful means the best interests of his lay client³, and do this without regard to his own interests or to any consequences to himself or to any other person⁴. As between the lay client and any professional client or other intermediary, the barrister's primary duty is owed to the lay client, and he must not permit the intermediary to limit his discretion as to how the interests of the lay client can best be served⁵.

1171. Independence and responsibility.

A practising barrister¹ must not:

- 1712 (1) permit his absolute independence, integrity and freedom from external pressures to be compromised²;
- 1713 (2) do anything (for example, accept a present) in such circumstances as may lead to any inference that his independence may be compromised³;
- 1714 (3) compromise his professional standards in order to please his client⁴, the court⁵, or a third party, including any mediator⁶;
- 1715 (4) give a commission or present or lend any money for any professional purpose to, or accept any money by way of loan or otherwise from, any client or any person entitled to instruct him as an intermediary⁷;
- 1716 (5) make any payment to any person for the purpose of procuring professional instructions⁸; or
- 1717 (6) receive or handle client money, securities or other assets other than by receiving payment of remuneration or (in the case of an employed barrister) where the money or other asset belongs to his employer⁹.

A barrister is individually and personally responsible for his own conduct and for his professional work, and must exercise his own personal judgment in all his professional activities¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'practising barrister' see PARA 1152 note 2.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 307(a). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

3 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 307(b). A barrister should refrain from becoming personally involved in a case in any way. Thus a barrister who has been engaged in a criminal defence should not in any ordinary circumstances act as surety for his client (Annual Statement 1933 p 9); nor should he lobby members of Parliament about the dismissal of a client from public employment following a conviction (Annual Statement 1938 p 10); nor sign a petition or otherwise take part publicly in movements for a reprieve (Annual Statement 1935 p 6); nor attend an identification parade in a case in which he is or may be professionally engaged (Annual Statement 1932 p 2); nor offer to pay his client's contribution for a legal aid certificate (Annual Statement 1971-72 p 33).

7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 307(d). This rule does not prevent a barrister from accepting money as a remuneration in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Conduct: para 307(d). As to barristers' remuneration see PARAS 1293-1316.

8 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 307(e). This rule does not prevent a barrister from making a payment for advertising or publicity permitted by the Code of Conduct (see PARA 1216) or, in the case of a self-employed barrister, by way of remuneration paid to any clerk or other employee or staff of his chambers: para 307(e). As to self-employed barristers see PARA 1036.

Nothing in para 307(d) (see text and note 7) or (e) prevents a barrister from paying a reasonable fee or fees required by an alternative dispute resolution body that appoints or recommends persons to provide mediation, arbitration or adjudication services, or from entering into such a reasonable fee-sharing arrangement required by such a body, if the payment or arrangement is of a kind similar to that made by other persons who provide such services through the body: para 307(e).

1172. Duty not to discriminate.

As a matter of professional conduct a practising barrister¹ must not in relation to any other person² discriminate directly or indirectly or victimise because of race, colour, ethnic or national origin, nationality, citizenship, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, religion or political persuasion³.

In addition it is unlawful for a barrister, in the provision of his professional services, or for a barrister or a barrister's clerk in offering, or omitting to offer, a pupillage or tenancy, or in administering or terminating a pupillage or tenancy, to discriminate in any way against a woman⁴ or against any person on grounds of race⁵ or disability⁶. It is also unlawful for a barrister or a barrister's clerk to subject to harassment a person who is, or has applied to be, a pupil or a tenant⁷.

The Bar Standards Board Equality and Diversity Code sets out the law and professional rules which prohibit discrimination and recommends good practice to chambers in relation to the provision of services⁸.

A. SELF-EMPLOYED BARRISTERS

1173. Instruction of self-employed barristers.

There is no rule of law which prevents a self-employed barrister¹ from accepting instructions² directly from a member of the public³, or from entering into a contract with a lay client⁴ for the provision of his services as a barrister⁵. Until recently, however, the professional rules of the Bar⁶ prohibited a self-employed barrister from accepting instructions from, or entering into a contract for the supply of legal services by him with, any person other than a professional client⁷. The principal reason for this restriction was to allow barristers to specialise in their characteristic work of advocacy, drafting and advising, and to ensure that, so far as possible, the facts of a case were accurately ascertained before proceedings were instituted or advice was given⁸.

The restriction has now been relaxed⁹. Under the current rule, a self-employed barrister may generally supply legal services¹⁰ only if he is appointed by the court¹¹ or is instructed by a professional client¹² or by a licensed access client¹³; but, in addition, provided that he is of more than three years' standing¹⁴, that he has complied with such training requirements as may be notified by the Bar Standards Board¹⁵ and that he notifies the Board that he holds himself out as willing to accept instructions from lay clients, a self-employed barrister may supply legal services by or on behalf of any other lay client¹⁶. This rule does not extend to international work¹⁷ or to the supply of legal services on a voluntary or part-time basis at a legal advice centre¹⁸.

8 'In contentious business which frequently affects the rights of other persons, it is most important that the facts should be, as far as possible, accurately ascertained before advice is given. For this purpose a barrister cannot himself make proper inquiry as to the actual facts; it is essential that he should be able to rely on the responsibility of a solicitor as to the statement of facts put before him' (extract from a memorandum by the Attorney General, Sir Richard Webster, reproduced in (1888) 85 LT Jo 176).

1175. Licensed access.

A self-employed barrister¹ may accept instructions² in relation to certain matters from persons and organisations who have been approved as authorised licensed access clients³ by the Bar Council⁴.

Members of designated professional bodies are deemed to be authorised licensed access clients⁵, as are arbitrators⁶ and certain ombudsmen⁷. The Access to the Bar Committee⁸ may also approve any other person or organisation, on the application of that person or organisation or otherwise, and on such terms as the committee may think appropriate, as an authorised licensed access client⁹.

A barrister who is instructed by a licensed access client must comply with the Licensed Access Rules¹⁰. These Rules require a barrister who accepts instructions from a licensed access client promptly to send him a statement in writing confirming the terms on which the instructions have been accepted¹¹, to advise the licensed access client forthwith if at any stage he considers it in the interests of the lay client or in the interests of justice that a solicitor or other authorised litigator or some other appropriate intermediary be instructed either together with or in place of the barrister¹², and to keep a case record and copies of various documents¹³.

1 As to self-employed barristers see PARA 1036.

2 As to the meaning of 'instructed' see PARA 1164 note 4.

3 As to the meaning of 'licensed access client' see PARA 1173 note 13.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 401(a)(ii). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. As to the meaning of 'Bar Council' see PARA 1042 note 1. A self-employed barrister may accept instructions from a licensed access client only in circumstances authorised in relation to that client by the Licensed Access Recognition Regulations, whether that client is acting for himself or for another: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules) r 1. As to the Licensed Access Recognition Regulations see Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations). The barrister may accept instructions only if at the time of giving instructions the licensed access client is identified and sends the barrister a copy of the licence issued by the Access to the Bar Committee: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules) r 3. In addition, a barrister must not accept instructions from a licensed access client unless he and his chambers are able to provide the services required of them by that licensed access client or if the barrister considers it in the interests of the lay client or the interests of justice that a solicitor or other authorised litigator or some other appropriate intermediary be instructed either together with or in place of the barrister: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules) r 4. As to the meaning of 'chambers' see PARA 1153 note 5. As to the meaning of 'lay client' see PARA 1155 note 2. As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 1063 note 14. Administrators; the Association of Average Adjusters; the Chartered Institute of Loss Adjusters; and the Chartered Insurance Institute: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) Sch 1. The regulations refer to the Institute of Direct Taxation, but it is assumed that the Institute of Indirect Taxation is intended. They also refer to the Chartered Association of Certified Accountants which body has been renamed the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants; and the Architects Registration Council of the United Kingdom which body has been renamed the Architects Registration Board (see the Housing Grants, Reconstruction and Development Act 1996 s 118(1) (repealed); and BUILDING CONTRACTS, ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, VALUERS AND SURVEYORS vol 4(3) (Reissue) PARA 226 et seq). Members of these bodies are authorised only in matters of a kind which fall generally within the professional expertise of the members of the relevant body, and are not authorised for the purpose of briefing counsel to appear in or exercise any right of audience before the Judicial Committee of the House of Lords, the Privy Council, the Supreme Court, the Crown Court, a county court, or the Employment Appeals Tribunal: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 7. Subject to this, the authorisation extends to matters concerning the member's clients or customers: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 7. As to the meaning of 'right of audience', and as to barristers' rights of audience before the courts mentioned, see PARA 1109 et seq. As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court is renamed the Senior Courts: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1), Sch 11 Pt 1; and COURTS. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 8(a). An arbitrator for these purposes includes an adjudicator under the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 8(a). An arbitrator (or adjudicator) is authorised only when instructing counsel for the purpose of advising on any point of law, practice or procedure arising in or connected with an arbitration or adjudication in which he has been or may be appointed: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 8(a). As to arbitrators see generally ARBITRATION. As to adjudicators under the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996 see s 108; and BUILDING CONTRACTS, ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, VALUERS AND SURVEYORS vol 4(3) (Reissue) PARA 207 et seq.

7 Is any person who has been appointed to one of the following offices: Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration (see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARAS 41-44); Commissioner for Local Administration (England) or Commissioner for Local Administration (Wales) (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 839 et seq); Health Service Commissioner (see HEALTH SERVICES vol 54 (2008) PARA 461 et seq); and Legal Services Ombudsman (see PARA 1252): Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 8(b), Sch 2 paras 1-4, 9. The regulations also provide that the holders of the offices of Banking Ombudsman, Building Society Ombudsman, Insurance Ombudsman and Personal Investment Authority Ombudsman are deemed to be licensed access clients (see Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 8(b), Sch 2 paras 5-8), although these offices have now been subsumed within the Financial Ombudsman Service (see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVI (ss 225-234A); and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 575 et seq), to which Annexe F1 does not refer. A person mentioned above is authorised only when instructing counsel for the purpose of advising on any point of law, practice or procedure arising in the course of the performance of his duties: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 8(b).

8 Is the Committee of the Bar Standards Board with responsibility for authorising persons as licensed access clients and for administering the licensed access scheme.

9 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) regs 2-6, 9. 'Authorised licensed access clients' are those persons and organisations, their members, and their, or their members', employees, who have from time to time been approved as such by the Access to the Bar Committee: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 1. The committee issues a licence to every person or organisation approved as an authorised direct access client: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Recognition Regulations) reg 4.

10 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 401(a)(ii). As to the Licensed Access Rules see Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules).

11 See Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules) r 6(a)(i). A barrister who accepts instructions from a licensed access client otherwise than on the terms of the Licensed Access Terms of Work as approved from time to time by the Access to the Bar Committee must first agree in writing the terms upon which he has agreed to do the work and the basis upon which he is to be paid, and must keep a copy of the agreement in writing with the licensed access client setting out the terms upon which he has agreed to do the work and the basis upon which he is to be paid: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules) r 5. Unless the instructions are on the terms of the Licensed Access Terms of Work, the barrister must at the same time advise the client in writing of the effect of para 401, the fact that the barrister cannot be expected to perform the functions of a solicitor or other authorised litigator (in particular that he cannot be expected to fulfil limitation obligations, disclosure obligations and other obligations arising out of the conduct of litigation), and the fact that circumstances may require the client to retain a solicitor or other authorised litigator at short notice and possibly during the case: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules) r 6(b). As to the restrictions imposed by para 401 on the services which a self-employed barrister may supply see PARA 1160.

If at any stage a barrister who is instructed by a licensed access client considers that there are substantial grounds for believing that the licensed access client has in some significant respect failed to comply either with the terms of the licence granted by the Access to the Bar Committee or (where applicable) with the terms of the Licensed Access Terms of Work, the barrister must forthwith report the facts to the Access to the Bar Committee: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules) r 8.

12 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules) r 7(a). Unless a solicitor or other authorised litigator or other appropriate intermediary is instructed as soon as reasonably practicable after the giving of such advice, the barrister must cease to act and must return any instructions: Annexe F1 (The Licensed Access Rules) r 7(b).

TEXT AND NOTES--Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F1 amended on 1 November 2009.

NOTE 5--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(iv) Instructions/A. SELF-EMPLOYED BARRISTERS/1176. Public access.

1176. Public access.

A self-employed barrister¹ who satisfies certain conditions² may as a general rule accept instructions³ directly from any lay client⁴, although a barrister may not accept direct instructions from or on behalf of a lay client in, or in connection with, any matter or proceedings concerning immigration or asylum, any family business⁵ or family proceedings⁶, or any criminal cause or matter, unless certain requirements as to the nature of those instructions are satisfied⁷. In any case where a barrister is not prohibited from accepting instructions, it is a matter for consideration in the circumstances of the case whether it is in the best interests of the client or in the interests of justice for the lay client to instruct a solicitor⁸ or other professional client⁹.

A barrister who accepts public access instructions must forthwith notify his lay client in writing, and in clear and readily understandable terms, of the work which he has agreed to perform¹⁰ and of the various conditions on which such work must be undertaken¹¹. The barrister must keep a case record which sets out specified information¹² and must retain for at least seven years after the date of the last item of work done copies of various documents¹³. Save where otherwise agreed, the barrister is entitled to copy all documents received from the lay client and to retain such copies permanently¹⁴, must return all documents received from his lay client on demand, whether or not the barrister has been paid for any work done for the lay client¹⁵, and is not required to deliver to his lay client any documents drafted by the barrister in advance of receiving payment from the lay client for all work done for that client¹⁶.

A barrister who has accepted public access instructions in any matter may take a proof of evidence from his client in that matter¹⁷.

1 As to self-employed barristers see PARA 1036.

2 For these conditions see Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 204(c); and PARA 1173. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

3 As to the meaning of 'instructions' see PARA 1164 note 4.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 401(a)(iii); and see PARA 1173. Instructions given to a barrister by or on behalf of a lay client pursuant to this provision are known as 'public access instructions': para 1001. As to the meaning of 'lay client' see PARA 1155 note 2. A self-employed barrister who accepts instructions directly from a lay client must comply with the Public Access Rules (see Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules)): para 401(a)(iii).

5 As to the meaning of 'family business' see the Matrimonial and Family Proceedings Act 1984 s 32; and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 576 (definition applied by virtue of the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 3(2)(a)).

7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 3. The requirements are: (1) that the barrister is instructed by the lay client and not by or through an intermediary on behalf of the lay client; and (2) that the barrister is instructed solely: (a) to provide advice or draft documents (but not to attend interviews conducted by prosecuting or investigating authorities) other than in connection with proceedings which have been commenced (ie when the defendant is charged or a summons is issued); or (b) in, or in connection with, proceedings before the European Court of Human Rights or the Courts of the European Communities, on appeal to the House of Lords or the Privy Council, on appeal to the Court of Appeal (provided that there is no reason to believe that any party to the proceedings will seek to adduce new evidence), on appeal to the High Court by way of case stated by a magistrates' court or the Crown Court, on appeal to the Crown Court from a sentence imposed by a magistrates' court (provided that there is no reason to believe that the appeal will involve a Newton hearing, or on appeal to the Child Support Appeal Tribunal or the Child Support Commissioners: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 3. As to the meaning of 'intermediary' see PARA 1161 note 16. A 'Newton hearing' is a hearing to determine the facts for sentencing purposes: see R v Newton (1982) 77 Cr App Rep 13, 4 Cr App Rep (S) 388, CA; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(3) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1354.

8 As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 1063 note 14.

9 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 4. As to the meaning of 'professional client' see PARA 1174. Before accepting any public access instructions from or on behalf of a lay client who has not also instructed a solicitor or other professional client, a barrister must take such steps as are reasonably necessary to ascertain whether it would be in the best interests of the client or in the interests of justice for the lay client to instruct a solicitor or other professional client: Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 2. If the barrister is satisfied that it is not in the client's best interests or in the interest of justice for him to accept the instructions or, having accepted the instructions, to continue with the case, he must refuse or return them: see PARAS 1189, 1192. In considering whether to accept, and in carrying out, any public access instructions, a barrister must have regard to guidance published from time to time by the Bar Standards Board: Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 5. The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

10 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 6(a). Save in exceptional circumstances, a barrister will have complied with this requirement if he has written promptly to the lay client in the terms of the draft letter annexed to the Public Access Rules: Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 7. In any case where a barrister has been instructed by an intermediary, he must give the notice required both directly to the lay client; and to the intermediary: Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 8.

11 le: (1) the fact that in performing his work the barrister will be subject to the requirements of the Code of Conduct, in particular para 401(b) (services which a self-employed barrister may not supply: see PARA 1160) and para 608 (withdrawal from case and return of instructions: see PARAS 1192-1194); (2) the fact that the barrister cannot be expected to perform the functions of a solicitor or other authorised litigator (in particular, that he cannot be expected to fulfil limitation obligations, disclosure obligations and other obligations arising out of or related to the conduct of litigation); (3) the fact that the barrister is a sole practitioner, is not a member of a firm and does not take on any arranging role; (4) in any case where the barrister has been instructed by an intermediary, the fact that he is independent of and has no liability for the intermediary and that the intermediary is the agent of the lay client and not of the barrister; (5) the fact that the barrister may be prevented from completing the work by reason of his professional duties or conflicting professional obligations, and what the client can expect of the barrister in such a situation; (6) the fees which the barrister proposes to charge for the work, or the basis on which his fee will be calculated; (7) the barrister's contact arrangements; and (8) the barrister's complaints procedure and that of the Bar Standards Board: Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 6(b)-(i). Save in exceptional circumstances, a barrister will have complied with these requirements if he has written promptly to the lay client in the terms of the draft letter annexed to the Public Access Rules: Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 7. In any case where a barrister has been instructed by an intermediary, he must give the notice required both directly to the lay client; and to the intermediary: Annexe F2 (The Public Access Rules) r 8.

B. ACCEPTANCE AND REFUSAL OF INSTRUCTIONS

(A) ACCEPTANCE OF INSTRUCTIONS

1177. Receipt of instructions.

A barrister must read all instructions¹ delivered to him expeditiously². As soon as practicable after receipt of any brief³ or instructions a barrister must satisfy himself that there is no reason why he ought to decline to accept it⁴. A barrister is not considered to have accepted a brief or instructions unless he has had an opportunity to consider it and has expressly accepted it⁵.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 701(c). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

A barrister should always be alert to the possibility of a conflict of interest: para 3.3; and see further PARAS 1187, 1202. As to a barrister's duty not to accept instructions if to do so would cause him to be professionally embarrassed see PARAS 1182-1189. As to the duty not to act if to do so might prejudice the administration of justice see PARA 1186.

BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(iv) Instructions/B. ACCEPTANCE AND REFUSAL OF INSTRUCTIONS/(A) Acceptance of Instructions/1178. Duty to consider client's interests.

1178. Duty to consider client's interests.

A barrister must in the case of all instructions¹ consider whether, consistently with the proper and efficient administration of justice and having regard to the circumstances of the case², the nature of his practice, his ability, experience and seniority, and his relationship with the client³, the best interests of the client would be served by instructing or continuing to instruct him in that matter⁴. Where a barrister is instructed in any matter with another advocate or advocates he must also consider whether it would be in the best interests of the client to instruct only one advocate or fewer advocates⁵.

A barrister who in any matter is instructed either directly by the lay client⁶ or by an intermediary⁷ who is not a solicitor⁸ or other authorised litigator⁹ should consider whether it would be in the interests of the lay client or the interests of justice to instruct a solicitor or other authorised litigator or other appropriate intermediary either together with or in place of the barrister¹⁰.

In cases involving several parties, a barrister must on receipt of instructions and further in the event of any change of circumstances consider whether, having regard to all the circumstances including any actual or potential conflict of interest¹¹, any client ought to be separately represented or advised or whether it would be in the best interests of any client to be jointly represented or advised with another party¹².

If at any time in any matter a barrister considers that it would be in the best interests of any client to have different representation, he must immediately so advise the client¹³.

BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(iv) Instructions/B. ACCEPTANCE AND REFUSAL OF INSTRUCTIONS/(B) Duty to Accept Instructions/1180. The 'cab-rank rule'.

(B) DUTY TO ACCEPT INSTRUCTIONS

1180. The 'cab-rank rule'.

A self-employed barrister¹ is under a general duty in any field in which he professes to practise and in relation to work which is appropriate to his experience and seniority: (1) to accept any brief² to appear before a court³ in which he professes to practise⁴; (2) to accept any instructions⁵; and (3) to act for any person on whose behalf he is instructed⁶. This duty is known as the 'cab-rank rule', and it applies irrespective of whether the client⁷ is paying privately or is publicly funded, and irrespective of the party on whose behalf the barrister is instructed, the nature of the case, and any belief or opinion which the barrister may have formed as to the character, reputation, cause, conduct, guilt or innocence of the person⁸. There are circumstances, however, in which a self-employed barrister must refuse to accept instructions⁹, and others in which he may so refuse¹⁰.

The cab-rank rule does not apply to international work¹¹.

1181. Duty not to withhold advocacy services.

In addition to the cab-rank rule¹, there is a duty applying to every practising barrister² who supplies advocacy services³ not to withhold those services:

- 1725 (1) on the ground that the nature of the case is objectionable to him or to any section of the public⁴;
- 1726 (2) on the ground that the conduct, opinions or beliefs of the prospective client⁵ are unacceptable to him or to any section of the public⁶; or
- 1727 (3) on any ground relating to the source of any financial support which may properly be given to the prospective client for the proceedings in question (for example, on the ground that such support will be available as part of the Community Legal Service or Criminal Defence Service)⁷.

(C) GROUNDS ON WHICH INSTRUCTIONS MUST BE REFUSED

1182. Professional embarrassment.

A barrister must not accept any instructions¹ if to do so would cause him to be professionally embarrassed². Circumstances in which a barrister would be professionally embarrassed include, for example, lack of sufficient experience or existing professional commitments³.

1 As to the meaning of 'instructions' see PARA 1164 note 4.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 603. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. This prohibition overrides the general rule (ie the cab-rank rule: see PARA 1180) requiring a barrister to accept any instructions that are within the scope of his expertise: para 602. In addition, a barrister who has accepted instructions must cease to act if continuing to act would cause him to be professionally embarrassed: see PARAS 1192-1195.

3 See PARAS 1183-1189.

1183. Barrister's competence.

A practising barrister¹ is under a general duty not to undertake any task which he knows or ought to know he is not competent to handle², and accordingly must not accept any instructions³ if he lacks sufficient experience or competence to handle the matter⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'practising barrister' see PARA 1152 note 2. As to what constitutes practice as a barrister see PARA 1152 et seq.

1184. Insufficient time to prepare and existing professional commitments.

A practising barrister¹ is under a general duty not to undertake any task which he does not have adequate time and opportunity to prepare for or perform² or which he cannot discharge within the time requested or otherwise within a reasonable time having regard to the pressure of other work³; and accordingly a barrister must not accept any instructions⁴ if having regard to his other professional commitments he will be unable to do or will not have adequate time and opportunity to prepare that which he is required to do⁵.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 701(b)(ii). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. Insufficient time and opportunity to prepare does not of itself constitute an exception to the 'cab-rank rule' (see PARA 1180), in particular if it relates to the lateness of instruction, rather than accepting work over and above existing commitments: R v Ulcay [2007] EWCA Crim 2379, [2008] 1 All ER 547, [2008] 1 WLR 1209.

1185. Instructions which seek to limit authority.

A practising barrister¹ must not accept any instructions² which seek to limit his ordinary authority or discretion in the conduct of proceedings in court³ or require him to act otherwise than in conformity with law or with the provisions of the Code of Conduct of the Bar⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'practising barrister' see PARA 1152 note 2. As to what constitutes practice as a barrister see PARA 1152 et seq.

BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(iv) Instructions/B. ACCEPTANCE AND REFUSAL OF INSTRUCTIONS/(C) Grounds on which Instructions must be Refused/1186. Connection with the case, client or court.

1186. Connection with the case, client or court.

A practising barrister¹ must not accept any instructions² if the matter is one in which he has reason to believe that he is likely to be a witness³ or in which whether by reason of any connection with the client⁴ or with the court⁵ or a member of it or otherwise it will be difficult for him to maintain professional independence or the administration of justice might be or appear to be prejudiced⁶.

Even if he has formed the view that he is not professionally embarrassed, a barrister who is affected by a personal factor which there are reasonable grounds for concluding would prejudice the administration of justice or result in a procedural irregularity, such as would lead to an order made at trial being set aside on appeal, should not act: this follows from his duty to the court⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'practising barrister' see PARA 1152 note 2. As to what constitutes practice as a barrister see PARA 1152 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'instructions' see PARA 1164 note 4.

3 If, however, having accepted a brief or instructions, it later appears that he is likely to be a witness in the case on a material question of fact, a barrister may retire or withdraw only if he can do so without jeopardising his client's interests: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 3.6.

It is generally inappropriate for a barrister who has taken witness statements, as opposed to settling witness statements prepared by others, to act as counsel in that case because it risks undermining the independence of the barrister as an advocate: see the Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 6.2.6. As to the Written Standards see PARA 1150.

4 As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 1161 note 16.

6 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 603(d). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. To accept instructions in such circumstances would cause a barrister to be professionally embarrassed: see para 603; and PARA 1182. As to the duty of a barrister who has accepted instructions to cease to act if continuing to act would cause him to be professionally embarrassed see PARAS 1192-1195.

It is generally undesirable for a husband and wife or other cohabiting partners to appear against each other in a contested criminal matter: R v Batt [1996] Crim LR 910, CA; and see R v Smith (Winston) (1975) 61 Cr App Rep 128, CA (conviction set aside where the pupil of prosecuting counsel had previously met and discussed the case with the defendant, even though no confidential information was disclosed to the prosecution). However, the fact that a barrister practises from the same chambers as a barrister who is instructed by an opposing party or is sitting as the judge or arbitrator is not of itself a reason for declining to act: see Laker Airways Inc v FLS Aerospace Ltd [2000] 1 WLR 113, [1999] 2 Lloyd's Rep 45; Nye Saunders & Partners (a firm) v Alan E Bristow (1987) 37 BLR 92, CA.

If a barrister who has advised on, or been engaged in, a case is appointed to the bench, and the same case comes before him, the practice is for him to decline to adjudicate on it: see Thellusson v Lord Rendlesham (1859) 7 HL Cas 429 at 430; Phillips v Headlam (1831) 2 B & Ad 380 at 385; Lewis v Branthwaite (1831) 2 B & Ad 437 at 445; Doe d Wood v Elias (1846) 7 LTOS 45; Di Sora v Phillips (1863) 33 LJ Ch 129.

If counsel considers that he can act but the position can reasonably be regarded as open to objection, disclosure of the relevant facts should be made to the other side as soon as practicable and (unless that party duly accepts the position) to the court at the opening of the hearing, so that the court can consider the matter at an early stage: Geveran Trading Co Ltd v Skjevesland at [46].

BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(iv) Instructions/B. ACCEPTANCE AND REFUSAL OF INSTRUCTIONS/(C) Grounds on which Instructions must be Refused/1187. Conflict of interest and client confidentiality.

1187. Conflict of interest and client confidentiality.

A practising barrister¹ must not accept any instructions² if there is or appears to be a conflict or risk of conflict either between the interests of the barrister and some other person or between the interests of any one or more clients³, unless all relevant persons consent to the barrister accepting the instructions⁴. A barrister should always be alert to the possibility of a conflict of interests⁵.

If after a barrister has accepted a brief or instructions on behalf of more than one lay client, there is or appears to be a conflict or a significant risk of a conflict between the interests of any one or more of such clients, he must not continue to act for any client unless all such clients give their consent to his so acting⁶.

A barrister must also not accept instructions if there is a risk that information confidential to another client or former client might be communicated to or used for the benefit of anyone other than that client or former client without their consent⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'practising barrister' see PARA 1152 note 2. As to what constitutes practice as a barrister see PARA 1152 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'instructions' see PARA 1164 note 4.

3 As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 1161 note 16.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 603(e). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. Thus a barrister should not appear as a barrister: (1) in any matter in which he is a party or has a significant pecuniary interest; (2) either for or against any local authority, firm or organisation of which he is a member or in which he has directly or indirectly a significant pecuniary interest; or (3) either for or against any company of which he is a director, secretary or officer or in which he has directly or indirectly a significant pecuniary interest: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 3.7; and see eg Re Richards, Uglow v Richards (1901) 50 WR 90; Re Morgan, Brown v Jones (1927) 71 Sol Jo 650 (barrister should not act in the same matter for both a neutral trustee and a party interested in the trust fund). As to the Written Standards see PARA 1150. To accept instructions in any of these circumstances would cause a barrister to be professionally embarrassed: see the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 603; and PARA 1182. As to the duty of a barrister who has accepted instructions to cease to act if continuing to act would cause him to be professionally embarrassed see PARAS 1192-1195. Note, however, that the prohibition against appearing as a barrister in any matter in which he is a party does not disallow a barrister from recovering certain costs where he appears on his own behalf to answer a criminal charge: see Khan v Lord Chancellor [2003] EWHC 12 (QB), [2003] 2 All ER 367, [2003] 1 WLR 2385; and PARAS 1296, 1313.

If a brief is delivered to counsel to represent the defendant at a trial at which he has already been instructed to prosecute, the proper course is to write to the defendant's solicitors to explain that he cannot accept the brief because he has already been instructed for the prosecution and ask whether they or the defendant have in the circumstances any objection to the barrister appearing for the prosecution: Annual Statement 1971-72 p 36; and see R v Gluckstad (1972) 56 Cr App Rep 628, CA.

Even if there is no conflict of interest, when a barrister has accepted a brief or instructions for any party in any proceedings, he should not accept a brief or instructions in respect of an appeal or further stage of the proceedings for any other party without obtaining the prior consent of the original client: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 3.5. The information which the law is concerned to protect is information which: (1) was originally communicated in confidence; (2) at the date of the later proposed instructions is still confidential and may reasonably be considered remembered or capable, on the memory being triggered, of being recalled; and (3) is relevant to the subject matter of the subsequent proposed instructions: see Re A firm of Solicitors [1997] Ch 1 at 9-10, [1995] 3 All ER 482 per Lightman J. Refusal on grounds of remuneration.

(D) GROUNDS ON WHICH INSTRUCTIONS MAY BE REFUSED

1190. Refusal on grounds of remuneration.

A self-employed barrister¹ is not obliged to accept instructions² other than at a fee which is proper, having regard to the complexity, length and difficulty of the case, his ability, experience and seniority, and the expenses which he will incur³. He is also not obliged to accept any instructions unless and until his fees are agreed or, if having required his fees to be paid before he accepts the instructions, those fees are not paid⁴; and he may also refuse to do any work under a conditional fee agreement⁵.

A barrister must not, however, in any of these circumstances withhold advocacy services on any prohibited ground⁶.

1 As to self-employed barristers see PARA 1036.

2 As to the meaning of 'instructions' see PARA 1164 note 4. The general rule is that a barrister must accept any instructions that are within the scope of his expertise (the 'cab-rank rule'): see PARA 1180. Certain instructions must not be accepted: see PARAS 1182-1189.

3 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 604(b). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. For these purposes, any instructions in a matter funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Community Legal Service or the Criminal Defence Service (as to the Community Legal Service see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 31 et seq; as to the Criminal Defence Service see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 120 et seq) for which the amount or rate of the barrister's remuneration is prescribed by regulation or subject to assessment are, unless otherwise determined (either in a particular case or in any class or classes of case or generally), deemed to be at a proper professional fee: para 604(b). The Bar Council decided on 30 April 2001 that, with effect from 1 May 2001, all cases subject to family graduated fees are no longer deemed to be at a proper professional fee; and on 15 November 2003 the Bar Council decided that, with immediate effect, all cases subject to criminal graduated fees are no longer deemed to be at a proper professional fee: para 604(b) (notes). 4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 604(d)(i), (ii). A barrister may not, however, refuse on these grounds in a matter funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Community Legal Service or the Criminal Defence Service: para 604(d).

5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 604(c). BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(iv) Instructions/B. ACCEPTANCE AND REFUSAL OF INSTRUCTIONS/(D) Grounds on which Instructions may be Refused/1191. Other professional grounds.

1191. Other professional grounds.

A self-employed barrister¹ is not obliged to accept instructions²:

- 1728 (1) requiring him to do anything other than during the course of his ordinary working year³;
- 1729 (2) from anyone other than a professional client⁴ who accepts liability for the barrister's fees⁵;
- 1730 (3) in a matter where the lay client is also the professional client⁶;
- 1731 (4) to do any work on any contractual terms⁷; or
- 1732 (5) where the potential liability for professional negligence in respect of the case could exceed the level of professional indemnity insurance which is reasonably available and likely to be available in the market for him to accept⁸.

A barrister must not, however, in any of these circumstances withhold advocacy services on any prohibited ground⁹.

A self-employed Queen's Counsel is not obliged to accept instructions to settle alone any document of a kind generally settled only by or in conjunction with a junior¹⁰, or to act without a junior if he considers that the interests of the lay client¹¹ require that a junior should also be instructed¹².

Professional embarrassment.

C. WITHDRAWAL FROM CASE AND RETURN OF INSTRUCTIONS

(A) CIRCUMSTANCES IN WHICH BARRISTERS MUST CEASE TO ACT

1192. Professional embarrassment.

A barrister must cease to act if continuing to act would cause him to be professionally embarrassed¹. The circumstances in which continuing to act would cause professional embarrassment are the same as those where instructions must be refused on this ground: that is, where the barrister lacks sufficient experience or competence to handle the matter²; where he is unable to do, or does not have adequate time to prepare, the work he is required to do³; where the instructions seek to limit his authority or require him to act unlawfully or improperly⁴; where he is likely to be a witness or is otherwise unable to maintain professional independence⁵; where there is a conflict of interest or risk of disclosure of confidential information⁶; where the instructions are given by a solicitor⁷ who is subject to a Withdrawal of Credit Direction⁸; and where, having been instructed by or on behalf of a lay client⁹ who has not also instructed a solicitor or other professional client¹⁰, the barrister is satisfied that it is in the interests of the client or in the interests of justice for the lay client to instruct a solicitor or other professional client¹¹.

If the lay client completely changes his instructions counsel will be professionally embarrassed if, consistent with his obligations to his client, the court and the rules of his profession, he cannot continue to represent his client on the basis of the new instructions¹².

Although there is no prohibition on barristers accepting instructions on behalf of more than one client¹³, a barrister must cease to act if, having accepted instructions on behalf of more than one client, there is or appears to be a conflict or risk of conflict between the interests of any one or more of such clients, or a risk of a breach of confidence, and the clients do not all consent to him continuing to act¹⁴.

Providing that he can withdraw without jeopardising the client's interests, a barrister must also cease to act if having come into possession of a document belonging to another party by some means other than the normal and proper channels and having read it before he realises that it ought to have been returned unread to the person entitled to possession of it, he would thereby be embarrassed in the discharge of his duties by his knowledge of the contents of the document¹⁵.

1 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 608(a). If the barrister who ceases to act in these circumstances is self-employed (see PARA 1036), he must return any instructions: para 608. As to the meaning of 'instructions' see PARA 1164 note 4. It is for counsel to decide whether, consistent with his obligations to his client and the rules of his profession, he is so professionally embarrassed. If he so decides he must, without contravening the client's legal privilege, inform the court to enable the judge to decide how to proceed: see R v Ulcay [2007] EWCA Crim 2379, [2008] 1 All ER 547, [2008] 1 WLR 1209.

If a barrister would be professionally embarrassed only because it appears to him that he is likely to be a witness on a material question of fact, he may retire or withdraw only if he can do so without jeopardising the client's interests: para 608(a).

If, however, the barrister cannot return his brief or instructions without prejudicing his lay client (for example, by reason of the proximity of the trial), he should not return his brief or instructions and should, unless the court otherwise orders, make such use of the document as will be in his client's interests, having informed his opponent of his knowledge of the document and of the circumstances, so far as known to him, in which the document was obtained and of his intention to use it: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 7.3.2. Subject to certain limitations¹, a barrister may withdraw from a case where he is satisfied that his instructions² have been withdrawn³, that his professional conduct is being impugned⁴, that advice that he has given that it would be in the best interests of the client⁵ to have different representation⁶ has not been heeded⁷, or that there is some other substantial reason for so doing⁸.

1197. Return of brief to fulfil another engagement.

A barrister must not return a brief¹ which he has accepted and for which a fixed date has been obtained or (except with the consent of the lay client² and where appropriate the court³) break any other engagement to supply legal services⁴ in the course of his practice so as to enable him to attend or fulfil an engagement (including a social or non-professional engagement) of any other kind⁵.

5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 610(c). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. 'Non-professional engagement' refers to a person's practice as a barrister, and it is accordingly a violation of para 610(c) for a barrister to return a brief which has been accepted and for which a fixed date has been obtained in order to attend to vote in the House of Commons: see Hesford v General Council of the Bar (1999) Times, 20 August. A barrister who has accepted a brief for the defence of a person charged with a serious criminal offence should so far as reasonably practicable ensure that the risk of a conflicting professional engagement does not arise: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 4.1. A barrister may not return any instructions¹ or withdraw from a case, other than in circumstances where return or withdrawal is compulsory under the Code of Conduct of the Bar², in such a way or in such circumstances that the client³ may be unable to find other legal assistance in time to prevent prejudice being suffered by him⁴.

A barrister must in all his professional activities be courteous, act promptly, conscientiously, diligently and with reasonable competence, and take all reasonable and practicable steps to avoid unnecessary expense or waste of the court's¹ time and to ensure that professional engagements are fulfilled².

1201. Duty of confidence.

A barrister must preserve the confidentiality of his lay client's¹ affairs². He must not without the prior consent of the lay client or as permitted by law lend or reveal the contents of the papers in any instructions³ or communicate to any third person⁴ information which has been entrusted to him in confidence or use such information either to the lay client's detriment or to his own or another client's advantage⁵. This duty of confidentiality continues after the relation of counsel and client has ceased⁶, and prevents a barrister from accepting a brief⁷ to act against a former client, even if that client has refused to retain him, if by reason of his former engagement the barrister possesses any confidential information which might be prejudicial to his former client in the later litigation⁸.

The duty of confidentiality is not only a matter of professional conduct but also a matter of law⁹. The courts will interfere by injunction to prevent a barrister from disclosing client secrets or to restrain a barrister from acting if he has relevant confidential information¹⁰, and will set aside any deed or transaction by which the barrister has, by making use of the confidence reposed in him, gained a benefit to himself¹¹.

If a self-employed barrister¹ forms the view that there is a conflict of interest between his lay client² and a professional client³ or other intermediary⁴, he must consider whether it would be in the lay client's interest to instruct another professional adviser or representative⁵. If he considers that it would be, the barrister must so advise and must take such steps as he considers necessary to ensure that his advice is communicated to the lay client⁶. A lay client's failure to heed such advice may be grounds for a barrister withdrawing from a case⁷.

A barrister should not obtain or seek to obtain a document, or knowledge of the contents of a document, belonging to another party other than by means of the normal and proper channels for obtaining such documents or such knowledge¹. If a barrister comes into possession of a document belonging to another party by some means other than the normal and proper channels² he should make inquiries of his professional client in order to ascertain the circumstances in which the document was obtained by his professional or lay client (where appropriate)³, and, unless satisfied that the document has been properly obtained in the ordinary course of events, he must at once return the document unread to the person entitled to possession of it⁴.

(B) PREPARATION OF CASES

1204. Drafting documents.

A barrister must not devise facts which will assist in advancing the lay client's¹ case². He must not draft any statement of case, witness statement, affidavit, notice of appeal or other document containing:

- 1733 (1) any statement of fact or contention which is not supported by the lay client or by his instructions³;
- 1734 (2) any contention which he does not consider to be properly arguable⁴;
- 1735 (3) any allegation of fraud unless he has clear instructions to make such allegation and has before him reasonably credible material which as it stands establishes a prima facie case of fraud⁵; or
- 1736 (4) in the case of a witness statement or affidavit, any statement of fact other than the evidence which in substance according to his instructions the barrister reasonably believes the witness would give if the evidence contained in the witness statement or affidavit were being given in oral examination⁶.

These rules do not, however, prevent a barrister drafting a document containing specific factual statements or contentions included by the barrister subject to confirmation of their accuracy by the lay client or witness⁷.

1207. Contact with witnesses generally.

A barrister may have contact with witnesses for the purpose of interviewing them or discussing with them the substance of their evidence or the evidence of other witnesses¹. Indeed, it is a barrister's responsibility, especially when the witness is nervous, vulnerable or apparently the victim of criminal or similar conduct, to ensure that those facing unfamiliar court procedures are put as much at ease as possible². However, a barrister should exercise his discretion and consider very carefully whether and to what extent such contact is appropriate, bearing in mind in particular that it is not the barrister's function (but that of his professional client³) to investigate and collect evidence⁴. The guiding principle must be the obligation of counsel to promote and protect his lay client's⁵ best interests⁶ so far as that is consistent with the law and with counsel's overriding duty to the court⁷.

BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(v) Conduct of Cases/A. STANDARDS GENERALLY APPLICABLE/(C) Dealing with Witnesses/1208. Discussing the substance of the case with witnesses.

1208. Discussing the substance of the case with witnesses.

A barrister needs to be alert to the risks that any discussion of the substance of a case with a witness¹ may lead to suspicions of coaching², and thus tend to diminish the value of the witness's evidence in the eyes of the court³, or may place the barrister in a position of professional embarrassment⁴, for example if he thereby becomes himself a witness in the case⁵. He should also be alert to the fact that, even in the absence of any wish or intention to do so, authority figures can subconsciously influence lay witnesses and that discussion of the substance of the case may unwittingly contaminate the witness's evidence⁶.

Discussions which take place in the presence of more than one witness of fact or which involve the disclosure to one witness of fact of the factual evidence of another witness have been strongly deprecated by the courts as tending inevitably to encourage the rehearsal or coaching of witnesses and to increase the risk of fabrication or contamination of evidence⁷. It is not, however, always inappropriate to disclose one witness's evidence to another, but discretion is required, especially where the evidence of independent witnesses is involved⁸.

A barrister should not discuss the substance of the case or any evidence with the other side's witnesses except in rare and exceptional circumstances and then only with the prior knowledge of his opponent⁹. There is, however, no rule which prevents a barrister from exchanging common courtesies with the other side's witnesses¹⁰.

1 Discussion of the substance of a case with a witness is permitted: see PARA 1207.

1209. Taking witness statements.

Whilst there is now no rule that prevents a barrister from taking a witness statement in a civil case¹, there is a distinction between the settling of a witness statement and taking a witness statement². It is not appropriate for a barrister who has taken witness statements, as opposed to settling witness statements prepared by others, to act as counsel in that case, unless he is a junior member of the team of counsel and will not be examining the witness or there are exceptional circumstances³, because it risks undermining the independence of the barrister as an advocate⁴.

1 For the rule that a self-employed barrister may not take a proof of evidence in a criminal case see PARA 1160. As to self-employed barristers see PARA 1036.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 6.2.6. As to Bar Council guidance see PARA 1150. As to the duty of a barrister in relation to the drafting of witness statements see PARA 1204.

3 Exceptional circumstances include: (1) the witness is a minor one; or (2) Counsel has no choice but to take a proof and this is the only practical course in the interests of justice - this would apply, for instance, where a witness appears unexpectedly at court and there is no one else competent to take the statement: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 6.2.6.

(D) CONDUCT IN COURT

1210. Barrister's duties in court and mediations.

When conducting proceedings in court¹, a barrister is personally responsible for the conduct and presentation of his case and must exercise personal judgement upon the substance and purpose of statements made and questions asked². He must not adduce evidence obtained otherwise than from or through the client³, or devise facts which will assist in advancing his client's case⁴. He must not make a submission which he does not consider to be properly arguable⁵. He must not make statements or ask questions which are merely scandalous or intended or calculated only to vilify, insult or annoy either a witness or some other person⁶, and must not by assertion in a speech impugn a witness whom he has had an opportunity to cross-examine unless in cross-examination he has given the witness an opportunity to answer the allegation⁷. He must, if possible, avoid the naming in open court of third parties whose character would thereby be impugned⁸; and he must not suggest that a victim, witness or other person is guilty of crime, fraud or misconduct, or make any defamatory aspersion on the conduct of any other person, or attribute to another person the crime or conduct of which his lay client⁹ is accused, unless such allegations go to a matter in issue which is material to the lay client's case¹⁰, and appear to him to be supported by reasonable grounds¹¹.

A barrister when conducting proceedings in court must not assert to the court a personal opinion of the facts or the law¹². He must ensure that the court is informed of all relevant decisions and legislative provisions of which he is aware, whether the effect is favourable or unfavourable towards the contention for which he argues¹³; and he must bring any procedural irregularity to the attention of the court during the trial and not reserve such matter to be raised on appeal¹⁴.

A barrister instructed in a mediation must not knowingly or recklessly mislead the mediator or any party or their representative¹⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 1158 note 3.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 708(a). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. Whilst counsel has the right to seek the court's assistance where questions of honour or professional conduct are concerned, and to request an interview with the judge if a matter arises which cannot properly be discussed in open court, the right should be sparingly exercised, for the responsibility of presenting a case rests with counsel alone; it is also of vital importance to avoid giving rise to any suspicion that part of a public trial is being conducted behind closed doors: see Schlesinger v Schlesinger [1959] 1 All ER 155 at 160, [1959] 1 WLR 92 at 99, CA, per Hodson LJ; R v Turner [1970] 2 QB 321, [1970] 2 All ER 281, CA; R v Cullen (1984) 81 Cr App Rep 17, CA (judge should ensure there is someone present who takes a note of what takes place); Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 1 WLR 2870 (if the discussion relates to sentence defence counsel must disclose to his client what took place). If the judgment of a barrister who is briefed late in a matter prepared for trial by another barrister differs from that of his predecessor, he is not bound to accept that barrister's skeleton argument, even if it has been prepared pursuant to a court order: see Huntington v Secretary of State for the Environment (1998) Times, 2 October.

3 As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 1161 note 16.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 708(e). See further PARA 1219. A barrister should not mention facts which require proof and which he does not intend to prove, or which are irrelevant to the issue to be tried: see Stevens v Webb (1835) 7 C & P 60 at 61 per Parke B; Duncombe v Daniell

A barrister should also not inform the court of facts which he has personally investigated in the course of preparing for the case; where it is desired to bring facts to the attention of the court, proper evidence should be obtained: R v Benjamin (1913) 8 Cr App Rep 146, CCA.

5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 708(f). An advocate is not guilty of misconduct because he takes a point which the tribunal holds to be bad, unless he is dishonest, for example if he knowingly takes a bad point concealing from the court authority which shows it clearly to be a bad point: Abraham v Jutsun [1963] 2 All ER 402, [1963] 1 WLR 658, CA. It is not improper to present, on instructions, a case which the advocate regards as bound to fail, but he must not assist in an abuse of process of the court (for example, by pursuing a case known to be dishonest): Ridehalgh v Horsefield [1994] Ch 205 at 234, [1994] 3 All ER 848 at 863, CA, per Sir Thomas Bingham MR. 13 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 708(c). If, after the conclusion of argument in a civil case, and before judgment is given, counsel discovers an authority which is directly in point, he should bring it to the attention of the judge, having first informed his opponent of his intention to do so: see Boulton Conduct and Etiquette at the Bar (6th Edn, 1975) p 76. In a criminal trial, counsel for both the prosecution and the defence have a duty to familiarise themselves with the court's sentencing powers and to guide the judge accordingly: R v Street [1997] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 309, CA.

14 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 708(d). If any procedural irregularity comes to the attention of counsel in a criminal case before the verdict is returned, he must bring it to the attention of the court at the earliest possible moment so that the judge may consider whether to discharge the jury without giving a verdict; the point should not be held in reserve with a view to taking it on appeal: R v Neal [1949] 2 KB 590, [1949] 2 All ER 438, CCA, per Lord Goddard CJ. Similarly, any objection to the admissibility of evidence should be taken at the time the evidence is sought to be introduced; it is not proper for counsel to raise no objection to inadmissible evidence at trial in order to preserve a ground of objection for a possible appeal: Stirland v DPP [1944] AC 315, [1944] 2 All ER 13, HL, per Viscount Simon LC; and Re S (2007) Times, 2 July.

1211. Time-keeping.

Counsel should ensure that he is present at court at whatever time the case in which he is appearing is listed to come on¹. It is not a sufficient reason for absence that counsel had to attend another court², nor that he did not suppose from the position of the case in the list that it would be reached so early³. If an order is made or judgment is given against his client in the absence of counsel, it is the court may subsequently set it aside provided that there is sufficient reason for counsel's absence⁴.

A barrister must take all reasonable and practicable steps to avoid unnecessary expense or waste of the court's time⁵. He should, when asked, inform the court of the probable length of his case, and he should also inform the court of any developments which affect information already provided⁶. Without detracting from his duty to his client⁷, counsel can and should exercise in the interests of justice as a whole a proper discretion so as not to prolong cases unnecessarily; it is no part of his duty to raise untenable points at length or to embark on lengthy cross-examination on matters that are not in truth at issue⁸.

A barrister is guilty of professional misconduct if having accepted two briefs he retains both although he knows or ought to know that a stage may arise when his presence will be required simultaneously in both courts and he will not be able to leave either court without breaching his duty to his client: see Re a Barrister [1989] NLJR 327. 1212. Presence of professional client.

A self-employed barrister¹ who is instructed by a professional client² should not conduct a case in court³ in the absence of his professional client or a representative of his professional client unless either the court rules that it is appropriate or the barrister is satisfied that the interests of the lay client⁴ and the interests of justice will not be prejudiced⁵. A self-employed barrister who attends court in order to conduct a case in circumstances where no professional client or representative of a professional client is present may, if necessary, interview witnesses and take proofs of evidence⁶.

1213. Examination of witnesses.

Counsel has the right to choose which witnesses to call and the order in which to call them¹, and is entitled to present his case without undue interference from the judge², although his powers in this regard are subject to the general rules governing examination in chief and cross-examination³.

Where, by reason of a breakdown in the recording apparatus, there is a defect in the transcript of evidence in a case which is the subject of an appeal, it is the duty of counsel on each side to assist so far as they reasonably can by agreeing a record of the missing evidence¹. BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(v) Conduct of Cases/A. STANDARDS GENERALLY APPLICABLE/(D) Conduct in Court/1215. Court dress and business suits.

1215. Court dress and business suits.

It has been the general rule that barristers are required when appearing in open court to wear robes (or 'court dress'¹) whenever the judge wears robes². The Bar Council has recently issued guidance on the matter, specifying the occasions on which either court dress or business suits³ are appropriate⁴.

Court dress should be worn in all hearings before the House of Lords and its Appellate Committees, the Privy Council, all hearings in open court in the Court of Appeal⁵ and in the Crown Court⁶, trials in the county courts⁷, and in any case where the liberty of the subject is at issue⁸. Court dress is also appropriate before legislative proceedings and committees of either House of Parliament⁹, the International Court of Justice¹⁰, the European Court of Justice¹¹, and courts-martial¹². Dress in the High Court depends on the particular court and type of hearing¹³. Business suits should be worn for bail applications in the Crown Court¹⁴, applications in the county court¹⁵, before a magistrates' court¹⁶, coroner's court¹⁷, and, generally, before masters, registrars and district judges¹⁸.

A barrister's personal appearance in court must be decorous and his dress, when robes are worn, should be compatible with them¹⁹.

1 Court dress consists of a wig and gown, with bands, or collarettes, on a wing collar: see the Guidance from the Chairman of the Bar Council: Court Dress (31 July 2008) para 11. Queen's Counsel wear a short wig and a silk (or stuff) gown over a court coat, while junior counsel wear a short wig and stuff gown. For Queen's Counsel the silk gown is the correct gown except when the court is in mourning: Annual Statement 1925 p 8. Traditionally a junior barrister carries his robes in a blue bag until such time as he is given a red bag by a Queen's Counsel in recognition of able assistance in the conduct of a case: Annual Statement 1952 p 26. As to Queen's Counsel see PARA 1124. When appearing before the House of Lords in the chamber of the House, however, Queen's Counsel wear full-bottomed wigs: Annual Statement 1964 p 32. This practice does not apply to the committee rooms of the House. As from a day to be appointed the Supreme Court is renamed the Senior Courts: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1), Sch 11 Pt 1; and COURTS. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 See R v Whittaker (1844) 8 JP Jo 390. 'Robes are convenient in normal circumstances as an indication of the functions of those engaged in the proceedings, and as enhancing the formality and dignity of a grave occasion; in their appearance they also lessen visual differences of age, sex and clothing, and so aid concentration on the real issues without distraction; but they are not essential, and the court may dispense with them where there is good reason': St Edmundsbury and Ipswich Diocesan Board of Finance v Clark [1973] Ch 323 at 330, [1973] 2 All ER 1155 at 1160-1161 per Megarry J. Robes should not be worn by a barrister who appears on his own behalf: see PARA 1118. Pupils attending court during their first six months of pupillage are entitled, but not required, to be robed: Annual Statement 1966 p 36. Barristers are required to be robed when appearing before the House of Lords, where the bar robes, but the judges do not.

3 'Business suits' means dark formal non-court dress: see the Guidance from the Chairman of the Bar Council: Court Dress (31 July 2008) para 11.

4 See generally the Guidance from the Chairman of the Bar Council: Court Dress (31 July 2008).

8 See the Guidance from the Chairman of the Bar Council: Court Dress (31 July 2008) para 10. This is not the case in the magistrates' court and during Crown Court bail applications which are held in chambers: para 10.

9 It is not, however, customary for a barrister to robe in a parliamentary committee room nor in the 'corridor' unless actually engaged in a Bill which is being heard or which is just about to come on: Annual Statement 1924 p 8.

10 Annual Statement 1924 p 8.

11 A non-practising barrister, however, who appears before the court as an 'agent' or 'adviser' and not as a 'lawyer entitled to practise before a court of a member state' should not be robed as counsel but should wear the robes made available by the court: Annual Statement 1976-77 p 26. As to appearance before the European Court of Justice see PARA 1121.

12 Annual Statement 1904-05 p 11. Barristers should not, however, robe before a United States court-martial: Annual Statement 1953 p 22.

13 In the High Court counsel must dress as follows:

- 547 (1) in the Commercial Court, Admiralty Court and Technology Court business suits on all occasions;
- 548 (2) in the Chancery Division court dress for all trials and appeals and business suits for all other occasions;
- 549 (3) in the Family Division court dress for all contested divorce/nullity proceedings and business suits for all other occasions;
- 550 (4) in the Administrative Court court dress on all occasions;
- 551 (5) in the Queen's Bench Division, on occasions not already covered, court dress for trials and business suits for all other occasions: see the Guidance from the Chairman of the Bar Council: Court Dress (31 July 2008) para 5.

It is not necessary to robe in chambers; nor where the court adjourns the hearing to some place other than a court: see St Edmundsbury and Ipswich Diocesan Board of Finance v Clark [1973] Ch 323, [1973] 2 All ER 1155.

18 See the Guidance from the Chairman of the Bar Council: Court Dress (31 July 2008) para 7. In the Chancery Division, in hearings before masters, registrars and district judges, counsel must wear business suits where the hearing takes place in the judges room, and court dress where the hearing takes place in court: para 7.

A practising barrister¹ must not, in relation to any anticipated or current proceedings in which he is briefed or expects to appear or has appeared as an advocate, express a personal opinion to the press or other media or in any other public statement upon the facts or issues arising in the proceedings².

However, there is nothing to prevent a barrister informing the press about his client's view of the proceedings or what his client is seeking to achieve, providing that the client has agreed to whatever is said on his behalf. Similarly, there is nothing to prevent a barrister informing the press of the facts of a particular case or of the particular legal issues that will be discussed³. Finally, a practising barrister may express an opinion on an issue in an educational or academic context⁴. In all of these cases, a barrister must bear in mind his duty of confidentiality and the law of privilege⁵, and the general duty to avoid bringing the legal profession or the administration of justice into disrepute⁶.

B. STANDARDS APPLICABLE TO CRIMINAL CASES

(A) GUIDANCE

1218. Standards Applicable to Criminal Cases.

The Bar Standards Board¹ has published written standards for the conduct of professional work which specifically relate to practice in the criminal courts². These include standards applicable to prosecuting counsel³, to defence counsel⁴, and to counsel generally whether acting for prosecution or defence⁵.

1 The Written Standards were published by the Bar Council (as to which see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

2 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work paras 9-16 (Standards Applicable to Criminal Cases). The Standards Applicable to Criminal Cases are to be read together with the general standards in the Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work (paras 1-8) and the main provisions of the Code of Conduct of the Bar; they are not an alternative: Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 9.1. As to the Code of Conduct and the Written Standards see PARA 1150.

3 See PARAS 1219-1224. These principles and standards apply as appropriate to all practising barristers, whether in independent practice or employed and whether appearing as counsel in any given case or exercising any other professional capacity in connection with it: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Written Standards for the Conduct of Professional Work para 10A.

(B) RESPONSIBILITIES OF PROSECUTING COUNSEL

1219. General responsibilities.

Prosecuting counsel should not attempt to obtain a conviction by all means at his command¹. He should not regard himself as appearing for a party. He should lay before the court² fairly and impartially the whole of the facts which comprise the case for the prosecution and should assist the court on all matters of law applicable to the case³. He should bear in mind at all times whilst he is instructed⁴ that he is responsible for the presentation and general conduct of the case and that he should use his best endeavours to ensure that all evidence or material that ought properly to be made available is either presented by the prosecution or disclosed to the defence⁵.

1220. Duties relating to indictments, witness statements etc.

In relation to cases tried in the Crown Court prosecuting counsel must:

- 1743 (1) ensure, if he is instructed to settle an indictment, that he does so promptly and within due time, and should bear in mind the desirability of not overloading an indictment with either too many defendants or too many counts, in order to present the prosecution case as simply and as concisely as possible¹. If the indictment is being settled by some other person, counsel should ask to see a copy of it, which he should check²;
- 1744 (2) decide whether any additional evidence is required and, if it is, should advise in writing and set out precisely what additional evidence is required with a view to serving it on the defence as soon as possible³;
- 1745 (3) consider whether all witness statements in the possession of the prosecution have been properly served on the defendant in accordance with the Attorney General's guidelines⁴;
- 1746 (4) eliminate all unnecessary material in the case so as to ensure an efficient and fair trial, and in particular should consider the need for particular witnesses and exhibits, and draft appropriate admissions for service on the defence⁵;
- 1747 (5) in complex cases draft a case summary for transmission to the court⁶.

BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(v) Conduct of Cases/B. STANDARDS APPLICABLE TO CRIMINAL CASES/(B) Responsibilities of Prosecuting Counsel/1221. Pre-trial witness interviews.

1221. Pre-trial witness interviews.

The general principle is that it is wholly inappropriate for a barrister in a contested criminal case in the Crown Court to interview any potential witness or discuss with him the substance of his evidence or that of other witnesses¹. This principle may, however, be departed from in extraordinary circumstances². In addition, prosecution counsel may, if instructed to do so, interview potential witnesses for the purposes of, and in, accordance with the practice set out in the Code for pre-trial witness interviews³.

1222. Disagreement with professional client and changing of advice.

Where prosecuting counsel has taken a decision on a matter of policy with which his professional client¹ has not agreed, it is appropriate for him to submit to the Attorney General² a written report of all the circumstances, including his reasons for disagreeing with those who instructed him³. When prosecuting counsel has had an opportunity to prepare his brief⁴, and to confer with those instructing him, but at the last moment before trial unexpectedly advises that the case should not proceed or that pleas to lesser offences should be accepted, and his professional client does not accept such advice, counsel should apply for an adjournment if instructed to do so⁵.

Subject to the matters dealt with above, it is for prosecuting counsel to decide whether to offer no evidence on a particular count or on the indictment as a whole and whether to accept pleas to a lesser count or counts⁶.

1224. Duty in respect of summing up and sentencing.

It is the duty of prosecuting counsel to assist the court at the conclusion of the summing up by drawing attention to any apparent errors or omissions of fact or law¹.

In relation to sentence, prosecuting counsel must:

- 1748 (1) not attempt by advocacy to influence the court with regard to sentencing; if, however, a defendant is unrepresented it is proper to inform the court of any mitigating circumstances about which counsel is instructed²;
- 1749 (2) be in a position to assist the court if requested as to any statutory provisions relevant to the offence or the offender and as to any relevant guidelines as to sentence laid down by the Court of Appeal³, and bring any such matters to the attention of the court if in counsel's opinion the court has erred⁴;
- 1750 (3) bring to the attention of the court any appropriate compensation, forfeiture and restitution matters which may arise on conviction⁵; and
- 1751 (4) draw the attention of the defence to any assertion of material fact made in mitigation which the prosecution believes to be untrue⁶; if the defence persists in the assertion, he should invite the court to consider requiring the issue to be determined by the calling of evidence⁷.

When defending a client on a criminal charge, a barrister must endeavour to protect his client from conviction except by a competent tribunal and upon legally admissible evidence sufficient to support a conviction for the offence charged¹. He should advise his lay client generally about his plea and may, if necessary, express his advice in strong terms; he must, however, make it clear that the client has complete freedom of choice and that the responsibility for the plea is the client's². He should advise his client as to whether or not to give evidence in his own defence but the decision must be taken by the client himself³.

A barrister acting for the defence should:

- 1752 (1) satisfy himself, if he is briefed to represent more than one defendant, that no conflict of interest is likely to arise¹;
- 1753 (2) arrange a conference or, if necessary, a series of conferences with his professional² and lay clients³;
- 1754 (3) consider whether any inquiries or further inquiries are necessary and, if so, advise in writing as soon as possible⁴;
- 1755 (4) consider whether any witnesses for the defence are required and, if so, which⁵;
- 1756 (5) consider whether a Notice of Alibi is required and, if so, draft an appropriate notice⁶;
- 1757 (6) consider whether it would be appropriate to call expert evidence for the defence and, if so, have regard to the rules of the Crown Court in relation to notifying the prosecution of the contents of the evidence to be given⁷;
- 1758 (7) ensure that he has sufficient instructions for the purpose of deciding which prosecution witnesses should be cross-examined, and then ensure that no other witnesses remain fully bound at the request of the defendant and request his professional client to inform the Crown Prosecution Service of those who can be conditionally bound⁸;
- 1759 (8) consider whether any admissions can be made with a view to saving time and expense at trial, with the aim of admitting as much evidence as can properly be admitted in accordance with the barrister's duty to his client⁹;
- 1760 (9) consider what admissions can properly be requested from the prosecution¹⁰;
- 1761 (10) decide what exhibits, if any, which have not been or cannot be copied he wishes to examine, and ensure that appropriate arrangements are made to examine them as promptly as possible so that there is no undue delay in the trial¹¹; and
- 1762 (11) notify the prosecution in advance as to anything which he is instructed to submit in mitigation which casts aspersions on the conduct or character of a victim or witness in the case¹².

1227. Advising on guilty pleas by not guilty clients.

Where a defendant tells his counsel that he did not commit the offence with which he is charged but nevertheless insists on pleading guilty to it for reasons of his own, counsel should advise the defendant that, if he is not guilty, he should plead not guilty, but that the decision is one for the defendant¹; he should also explore with the defendant why he wishes to plead guilty to a charge of an offence which he says he did not commit and whether any steps could be taken which would enable him to enter a plea of not guilty in accordance with his profession of innocence². If the client maintains his wish to plead guilty, he should be further advised as to what the consequences will be³ and that what can be submitted on his behalf in mitigation can only be on the basis that he is guilty⁴.

If, following all of this advice, the defendant persists in his decision to plead guilty, counsel may continue to represent him if he is satisfied that it is proper to do so⁵. Before a plea of guilty is entered, counsel or a representative of his professional client⁶ should record in writing the reasons for the plea⁷, and the defendant should be invited to indorse a declaration that he has given unequivocal instructions of his own free will that he intends to plead guilty even though he maintains that he did not commit the offence and that he understands the advice given by counsel and in particular the restrictions placed on counsel in mitigating and the consequences to himself⁸. The defendant should also be advised that he is under no obligation to sign⁹. If no declaration is signed, counsel should make a contemporaneous note of his advice¹⁰.

BARRISTERS/(4) PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE AND CONDUCT/(v) Conduct of Cases/B. STANDARDS APPLICABLE TO CRIMINAL CASES/(C) Responsibilities of Defence Counsel/1228. Client's confessions.

1228. Client's confessions.

In considering the duty of counsel retained to defend a person charged with a criminal offence who confesses to his counsel that he did commit the offence charged, it is essential to bear in mind that:

- 1763 (1) every punishable crime is a breach of common or statute law committed by a person of sound mind and understanding¹;
- 1764 (2) the issue in a criminal trial is always whether the defendant is guilty of the offence charged, never whether he is innocent²; and
- 1765 (3) the burden of proof rests on the prosecution³.

It follows that the mere fact that a person charged with a crime has confessed to his counsel that he did commit the offence charged is no bar to that barrister appearing or continuing to appear in his defence, and nor does such a confession release the barrister from his imperative duty to do all that he honourably can for his client⁴. Such a confession, however, imposes very strict limitations on the conduct of the defence: a barrister must not assert as true that which he knows to be false, and he must not connive at, much less attempt to substantiate, a fraud⁵. While therefore it would be right to take any objections to the competency of the court, to the form of the indictment, or to the admissibility of any evidence or to the evidence admitted, a barrister must not set up an affirmative case inconsistent with the confession made to him⁶. As regards the extent to which counsel may attack the evidence for the prosecution either in cross-examination or in his speech to the tribunal charged with the decision on the facts, no clearer rule can be laid down than this: that he is entitled to test the evidence given by each individual witness and to argue that the evidence taken as a whole is insufficient to amount to proof that the defendant is guilty of the offence charged; further than this he ought not to go⁷.

This is based on the assumption that the defendant has made a clear confession that he did commit the offence charged and does not deal with the difficult questions that may arise where the defendant has made a series of inconsistent statements to a barrister or has made statements which point irresistibly to the conclusion that he is guilty but do not amount to a clear confession⁸. Statements of this kind may inhibit the defence, but questions arising on them can only be answered after careful consideration of the actual circumstances of the particular case⁹.

1229. Duty to attend court.

In addition to a barrister's general duty of attendance at court¹, defence counsel should ensure that his client is never left unrepresented at any stage of his trial².

Where a defendant is represented by one barrister, that barrister should normally be present throughout the trial and should only absent himself in exceptional circumstances which he could not reasonably be expected to foresee³.

Where a defendant is represented by two barristers, neither may absent himself except for good reason and then only when the consent of the professional client (or his representative) and of the lay client has been obtained, or when the case is legally aided and the barrister thinks it necessary to do so in order to avoid unnecessary public expense⁴.

These rules are subject to modification in respect of lengthy trials involving numerous defendants⁵. In such trials, a defending counsel may with the consent of the professional client (or his representative) and of the lay client absent himself from any specific part of the trial if after the conclusion of the opening speech by the prosecution he is satisfied that during that part of the trial there is no serious possibility that events will occur which will relate to his client⁶. If he does this, it is counsel's duty to arrange for other defending counsel to guard the interests of his client⁷, to keep himself informed throughout of the progress of the trial and in particular of any development which could affect his client⁸, and not to accept any other commitment which would render it impracticable for him to make himself available at reasonable notice if the interests of his client so require⁹.

1230. Duty when defendant absconds.

If during the course of a criminal trial and prior to final sentence the defendant voluntarily absconds and the barrister's professional client¹ withdraws from the case, then the barrister too should withdraw². If the trial judge requests the barrister to remain to assist the court, the barrister has an absolute discretion whether or not to do so³. If he does remain, he should act on the basis that his instructions⁴ are withdrawn and he will not be entitled to use any material contained in his brief⁵, save for such part as has already been established in evidence before the court; he should request the trial judge to instruct the jury that this is the basis on which he is prepared to assist the court⁶.

If for any reason the barrister's professional client does not withdraw from the case, the barrister retains an absolute discretion whether to continue to act⁷. If he does continue, he should conduct the case as if his client were still present in court but had decided not to give evidence and on the basis of any instruction he has received⁸. He will be free to use any material contained in his brief and may cross-examine witnesses called for the prosecution and call witnesses for the defence⁹.

1231. Duty in respect of summing-up and sentencing.

It is the duty of defence counsel to draw to the attention of the court an error or omission made in summing up of which counsel is aware¹; if counsel fails to do so, it may be difficult to rely on the error as a ground of appeal².

It is the duty of defence counsel, as well as counsel for the prosecution, to ensure that sentences imposed and orders made are within the powers of the court, and defence counsel should accordingly bring the matter to the attention of the court and invite the court to vary the sentence if aware that an unlawful sentence has been passed³. Counsel must also be ready to assist the judge on the relevant law, if asked. Thus counsel must inform themselves before a case starts of the sentencing powers of the court for all offences charged including the maximum sentence and the court's powers in relation to ancillary orders, such as costs and compensation orders⁴.

If his client pleads guilty or is convicted, defence counsel should see him after he has been sentenced in the presence of his professional client¹ or his representative². If counsel is satisfied that there are no reasonable grounds of appeal, he should so advise orally and certify in writing³. No further advice is necessary unless it is reasonable for a written advice to be given because the client reasonably requires it or because it is necessary⁴.

If counsel is satisfied that there are more reasonable grounds of appeal or if his view is a provisional one or if he requires more time to consider the prospects of a successful appeal, he should so advise orally and certify in writing⁵; he should then furnish written advice to the professional client as soon as he can and in any event within 14 days⁶.

Grounds of appeal must be settled with sufficient particularity to enable the registrar and subsequently the court to identify clearly the matters relied upon³.

If at any stage counsel is of the view that the appeal should be abandoned, he should at once set out his reasons in writing and send them to his professional client⁴.

A barrister who is instructed¹ and is acting for the prosecution or the defence and who has in his possession a copy of a video recording of a child witness which has been identified as having been prepared to be admitted in evidence at a criminal trial² must have regard to a number of duties. Upon receipt of the recording, a written record of the date and time and from whom the recording was received must be made and a receipt must be given³. The recording and its contents may be used only for the proper preparation of the prosecution or defence case or of an appeal against conviction or sentence (or both), as the case may be, and the barrister must not make or permit any disclosure of the recording or its contents to any person except when, in his opinion, it is in the interests of his proper preparation of that case⁴. The barrister may not make or permit any other person to make a copy of the recording, nor release the recording to the accused; and he must ensure that the recording is always kept in a locked or secure place when not in transit or in use and that, when in transit, the recording is kept safe and secure at all times and is not left unattended, especially in vehicles or otherwise⁵.

If proper preparation of the case involves viewing of the recording in the presence of the accused, this should be done, if the accused is in custody, only in the prison or other custodial institution where the accused is being held, in the presence of the barrister or his instructing solicitor (or both)⁶; or, if the accused is on bail, at the solicitor's office or in counsel's chambers or elsewhere, in the presence of the barrister or his instructing solicitor (or both)⁷. The recording must be returned to the solicitor as soon as practicable after the conclusion of the barrister's role in the case, and a written record of the date and time of despatch and to whom the recording was delivered for despatch must be made⁸.

Although there is no rule which prevents a barrister from having contact with witnesses for the purpose of interviewing them¹, as a general principle it is wholly inappropriate for a barrister in a contested criminal case in the Crown Court to interview any potential witness, with the exception of the lay client², character witnesses and expert witnesses³. (5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE

(i) Professional Misconduct and Inadequate Professional Service

1246. Infringement of the Code of Conduct.

Any failure by a barrister to comply with certain provisions¹ of the Code of Conduct or with the training requirements imposed by the Consolidated Regulations² in force at the date of his call to the bar³, or with the Continuing Professional Development Regulations⁴ or the Practising Certificate Regulations⁵ will render him liable to a written warning from the Bar Standards Board⁶ or the imposition of a financial penalty or both⁷. In the event of such a warning or penalty, a barrister has a right of appeal⁸.

1 The Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 202(a) to (d), 203(1)(a), 204(b), 402, 403(b), (c) and (d), 404, 405, 406, 701, 709, 801(a), 804 or 905(a)(i), (d) or (e): para 901.1. Any serious failure to comply with these provisions constitutes professional misconduct: see para 901.5; and PARA 1247. Non-compliance under para 202 may constitute professional misconduct if appropriate action is not taken: see para 901.4; and PARA 1247. Failure to comply with any other provision of the Code constitutes professional misconduct: see para 901.7; and PARA 1247.

2 For requirements relating to admission, education, examination and call to the Bar see PARA 1063 et seq; and for requirements relating to pupillage see PARAS 1080-1097. As to the Consolidated Regulations see PARA 1150.

3 As to the call to the bar see PARAS 1075-1078.

4 As to the continuing professional development see PARA 1154.

5 As to the practising certificates see PARA 1155.

6 The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 901.1. Liability under para 901.1 is strict. The financial penalty is either £100 (or such other sum as may be prescribed by the Bar Council from time to time) or as prescribed by the relevant regulations: para 901.1. Failure to pay a financial penalty within the prescribed time constitutes professional misconduct: see para 901.2; and PARA 1247.

8 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 901.3. The appeal lies to an appeal panel (under the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunal Rules) r 23(3), (4)). The time for bringing such an appeal is 28 days from the date upon which the written warning or notice seeking payment of the penalty is deemed to have been received by the Barrister. However, unless the Bar Standards Board agrees or the appeal panel otherwise rules, an appeal will not operate as a suspension of the requirement to pay the financial penalty or an extension of the time for so doing: para 901.3.

1247. Professional misconduct.

Under the Code of Conduct of the Bar, it is professional misconduct if a barrister:

- 1778 (1) fails to pay a financial penalty for non-compliance within the required time¹;
- 1779 (2) fails to comply with the preconditions for practice as a barrister² and fails to take the necessary action to cure any relevant non-compliance³;
- 1780 (3) infringes the Code of Conduct within two years after having been given the latest of two or more separate written warnings or automatic financial penalties for non-compliance⁴ by the Bar Standards Board⁵;
- 1781 (4) fails (or where relevant seriously fails⁶) to comply with the Code of Conduct⁷;
- 1782 (5) makes a false declaration on call to the Bar⁸;
- 1783 (6) engaged before call in conduct which is dishonest or otherwise discreditable to a barrister and which was not, before call, fairly disclosed in writing to the benchers of the Inn calling him⁹; or
- 1784 (7) breaches in any material respect any undertaking given on call to the Bar¹⁰.

5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) paras 901.6, 1001. The two written warnings or penalties must both have been issued within a period of three years: para 901.6. The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

6 Ie where the failure relates to one of the provisions listed in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 901.1 (see PARA 1246): para 901.5(1). A failure to comply may be a serious failure due to the nature or extent of the failure, because the failure in question is combined with a failure to comply with any provision of the Code, or if the barrister has previously failed to comply with the same or any other provision of the Code: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 901.5(2).

1248. Inadequate professional service.

'Inadequate professional service' means conduct towards a lay client¹ or performance of professional services for that client which falls significantly short of that which is to be reasonably expected of a barrister in all the circumstances². Pursuant to the rules governing barristers' discipline and fitness to practise³, a barrister may be directed to provide redress to a lay client for inadequate professional service whether or not such inadequate professional service also constitutes professional misconduct⁴.

NOTE 3--Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexes J, K substituted on 1 March 2009, Annexe P amended on 1 June 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(ii) Jurisdiction over Disciplinary Matters/A. THE COURTS/1249. Court's inherent powers to prevent abuse and punishment for contempt.

(ii) Jurisdiction over Disciplinary Matters

A. THE COURTS

1249. Court's inherent powers to prevent abuse and punishment for contempt.

For at least the last 300 years the courts have left all matters of professional discipline and conduct to the Inns of Court¹, the Inns in conjunction with the Bar Council² and latterly to the Bar Standards Board³. The judges retain the power, however, to punish a barrister for contempt of court, and, as part of their inherent powers to prevent abuse of the court's procedure, to refuse to hear an advocate for reasons which apply to him as an individual⁴, or to restrain an advocate from representing a party in the event that his continued participation in a trial might lead to a situation where an order made at trial would have to be set aside on appeal⁵.

The courts have power to punish a barrister for contempt of court in respect of acts done in a professional⁶ as well as a private⁷ capacity⁸. Thus a barrister may be punished for contempt in respect of language used when appearing as an advocate⁹. Expressions which, if uttered in the honest discharge of counsel's duty, would be privileged, are, when uttered with the intention to insult the jury or the court, an abuse of privilege and may be punished as a contempt by the judge¹⁰. Not every act of discourtesy to the court by a barrister, however, amounts to contempt; and the summary power of punishing for contempt should be used sparingly and only in the most serious cases¹¹.

The ordinary punishments for contempt are imprisonment or a fine¹².

B. REGULATION BY PROFESSIONAL BODIES

1250. Disciplinary tribunals appointed by the Inns' Council.

Disciplinary authority over barristers has historically been exercised by each of the Inns of Court in accordance with their powers to admit and expel persons from membership of the Inn and to confer (by call to the Bar) and remove (by disbarment) the degree of barrister¹. In 1967, however, all the disciplinary powers of the Inns over barristers in respect of professional misconduct (other than the powers to pronounce and carry into effect any sentence in respect of misconduct) were vested in the Senate of the Four Inns of the Court. In 1974 these powers were transferred to the Senate of the Inns of Court and the Bar². In 1987, the latter body was replaced by the Bar Council and the Council of the Inns of Court³; and on and from 1 January 1987, the judges, with the concurrence of the Inns, resolved and confirmed that disciplinary powers over barristers should be exercised in accordance with the provisions of the Inns' Council Constitution⁴. Under these provisions, the Inns' Council appoints disciplinary tribunals, which conduct their proceedings in accordance with, and have the powers and functions specified in, the Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations⁵.

Complaints against barristers are investigated and considered by the Complaints Commissioner and by the Complaints Committee of the Bar Standards Board⁶. Less serious cases of professional misconduct and cases of inadequate professional service are dealt with by the Committee or by a hearing panel appointed by the Committee⁷. In more serious cases, charges of professional misconduct are preferred by the Committee before a disciplinary tribunal⁸.

A barrister found guilty of professional misconduct by a summary hearing panel or disciplinary tribunal has a right of appeal against the finding or sentence to a tribunal of judges sitting as Visitors to the Inns⁹.

1 These powers are recognised by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 31(3) (as prospectively repealed): see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 331. BARRISTERS/(5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(ii) Jurisdiction over Disciplinary Matters/B. REGULATION BY PROFESSIONAL BODIES/1251. The Complaints Commissioner and the Complaints Committee.

1251. The Complaints Commissioner and the Complaints Committee.

The Complaints Commissioner is the Bar Standards Board's lay commissioner for complaints¹. Appointed by the Board², the Commissioner:

- 1785 (1) receives, considers and directs the investigation of complaints of professional misconduct or inadequate professional services on the part of barristers³;
- 1786 (2) deals with such complaints either by referring them with his comments to the Complaints Committee or by dismissing them⁴;
- 1787 (3) is entitled to attend meetings of the Complaints Committee⁵;
- 1788 (4) acts as chairman of Adjudication Panels appointed by the Complaints Committee⁶;
- 1789 (5) in all other respects supervises the working of the Bar Standards Board's procedures for dealing with complaints of professional misconduct and inadequate professional services⁷; and
- 1790 (6) must submit an annual report and such other reports as may be appropriate to the Bar Standards Board⁸.

The membership of the Complaints Committee⁹ is as prescribed by the standing orders of the Bar Standards Board as amended from time to time¹⁰. The Committee's powers are:

- 1791 (a) to determine whether any complaint¹¹ discloses a prima facie case of professional misconduct, and if so to deal with it in accordance with the Complaints Rules¹²;
- 1792 (b) to determine whether the complaint discloses a prima facie case of inadequate professional service by the barrister concerned, and if so to deal with it in accordance with the Complaints Rules¹³;
- 1793 (c) to prefer charges of professional misconduct before disciplinary tribunals¹⁴, to refer to such tribunals any legal aid complaint¹⁵ relating to the conduct of a barrister, and to be responsible for prosecuting any such charges or legal aid complaints before such tribunals¹⁶;
- 1794 (d) to prefer and deal summarily with charges of professional misconduct¹⁷;
- 1795 (e) to act upon any recommendations of the Complaints Commissioner¹⁸;
- 1796 (f) to raise complaints on behalf of the Bar Standards Board and to direct the investigation of complaints raised by the Board of its own motion¹⁹;
- 1797 (g) to take such other actions in relation to complaints or infringements of the Code of Conduct as are permitted by the Complaints Rules²⁰;
- 1798 (h) to make recommendations on matters of professional conduct²¹;
- 1799 (i) to make rulings on matters of professional conduct when the Committee considers it appropriate to do so²²;
- 1800 (j) to exercise the power of the Bar Standards Board to grant waivers of the provisions of that Code of Conduct generally or in particular cases²³;
- 1801 (k) to exercise the power of the Bar Standards Board to designate Legal Advice Centres²⁴.

The Committee's decisions are susceptible to judicial review²⁵.

C. STATUTORY POWERS

1252. The Legal Services Ombudsman and the Office of Legal Complaints.

Until a day to be appointed, the Legal Services Ombudsman has responsibility for investigating allegations concerning the manner in which complaints made to any body having disciplinary powers in relation to barristers has been dealt with¹. The office was created by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990². The Ombudsman has wide-ranging powers to order the reconsideration of complaints and the payment of compensation to complainants³, and to make recommendations as to the functioning of disciplinary bodies⁴.

As from a day to be appointed these functions will vest in the Office of Legal Complaints, which is constituted under the Legal Services Act 2007⁵.

1 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 22(1) (as prospectively repealed); and PARA 425. As to the bodies having disciplinary powers in relation to barristers see PARAS 1254-1292. The Ombudsman may not investigate an issue which is being or has been determined by a disciplinary tribunal: see s 22(7) (as prospectively repealed); and PARA 426.

2 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 21 (as prospectively repealed); and PARA 424.

3 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 23 (as prospectively repealed); and PARA 431.

1253. Legal aid complaints.

By statutory provision, the disciplinary provisions applicable to barristers apply to legal aid complaints¹ relating to the conduct of barristers as they apply to other complaints about their conduct². Any disciplinary tribunal³ which hears a legal aid complaint relating to the conduct of a barrister may⁴, if it thinks fit and whether or not it makes any other order, order that any fees otherwise payable by the Legal Services Commission in connection with services provided by him as part of the Community Legal Service or Criminal Defence Service be reduced or cancelled⁵.

Where a disciplinary tribunal hears a charge of professional misconduct⁶ or breach of professional standards against a barrister, it may order that he be excluded from providing representation funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service, either temporarily or for a specified period, if it determines that there is good reason for the exclusion arising either out of his conduct in connection with any such services or his professional conduct generally⁷.

An appeal lies in the same manner as an appeal would lie in the case of any other order of such a tribunal⁸.

1 As to the meanings of 'complaint' and 'legal aid complaint' see PARA 1240 note 9.

A. CONSIDERATION AND INVESTIGATION OF COMPLAINTS

1254. Consideration of complaints by the Complaints Commissioner.

Any complaint against a barrister¹, other than a complaint raised by the Bar Standards Board of its own motion², must be referred to and considered by the Complaints Commissioner³, who determines whether in his view the complaint discloses a prima facie case of professional misconduct⁴ or inadequate professional service⁵ and is apt for consideration by the Complaints Committee⁶. The Commissioner may at this stage refer the complaint elsewhere, where such referral would be appropriate⁷. If he makes no such referral the Commissioner must consider whether the complaint:

- 1802 (1) is frivolous or vexatious, or for any other reason lacks substance⁸;
- 1803 (2) has been made more than six months after the act or omission complained of and the complaint is not of sufficient seriousness to justify nor are there any exceptional circumstances which justify further consideration of the complaint despite the lapse of time since the matters complained of⁹;
- 1804 (3) cannot be properly or fairly investigated, or the barrister is for any reason unable fairly to respond to it¹⁰;
- 1805 (4) reveals a prima facie case of an infringement of a provision of the Code of Conduct¹¹, but that infringement would not amount to professional misconduct or inadequate professional service¹²;
- 1806 (5) is insufficiently serious, in itself or its consequences, to justify further action¹³; or
- 1807 (6) is for any other reason whatsoever not apt for consideration by the Committee¹⁴.

In order to reach his determination, the Commissioner may seek information or assistance, orally or in writing, as he thinks fit, from any other person whom he considers may be capable of affording it¹⁵.

If the Commissioner considers that the complaint fails to disclose a prima facie case of professional misconduct or inadequate professional service or that it is otherwise inapt for consideration by the Committee¹⁶, he must dismiss it¹⁷.

If the complaint is not so dismissed, it must be referred to the Secretary of the Complaints Committee for investigation¹⁸. Following the completion of any such investigation, the Commissioner must reconsider the complaint¹⁹, and decide whether, with the information now available to him it discloses a prima facie case of professional misconduct or inadequate professional service, and is apt for consideration by the Complaints Committee²⁰.

1 For these purposes 'barrister' includes a person who is serving a sentence of disbarment which is subsequently overturned on appeal: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 1. As to disbarment see PARA 1279.

2 The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049). The Bar Standards Board has the power to raise complaints about the conduct of or services provided by barristers, and such complaints are dealt with by the Secretary of the Complaints Committee (see PARA 1255): Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 5. Complaints made by the Board of a breach of the Code of Conduct paras 901.2, 901.4, 901.5, 901.6 or 905(b)(c) or (f) may be made the subject of a separate charge of professional misconduct without the requirement of any further investigation by the Secretary. However, the decision to prefer charges in respect of any such breach and as to the level of disposal must be taken by the Complaints Committee: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 32(a).

3 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 6. The Commissioner may delegate his functions: see Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 3. As to the Commissioner see PARA 1251.

4 As to what constitutes professional misconduct see PARA 1247; definition applied by the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 70(b).

5 As to what constitutes inadequate professional service see PARA 1248; definition applied by the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 70(b).

6 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) rr 6, 8.

If at any time in the course of his consideration of the complaint, it appears to the Commissioner that the complaint might be capable of resolution by agreement, and that it would be appropriate to resolve it in that manner, he may invite the complainant and the barrister concerned to attempt to conciliate their differences: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 16. The Commissioner may at any time adjourn consideration of a complaint for such period as he thinks fit, whether while the complainant and the barrister attempt conciliation, during the currency of related legal proceedings or for any other reason: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 17.

7 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) rr 9, 10.

8 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 11(a), (b).

9 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 11(c).

10 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 11(d).

11 Is an infringement of one of the provisions listed in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 901.1 (see PARA 1246): Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 11(e).

12 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 11(e). In such a case the Commissioner must refer the complaint to a barrister member of the Committee of no fewer than two years service who will decide whether and in what manner the complaint should be pursued: see Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) rr 13, 14.

13 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 11(f).

14 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 11(g).

15 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 12. The Commissioner may seek assistance from, for example, the complainant, the barrister, any potential witness, any member of the Committee, the Secretary, or the Equal Opportunities Officers of the Bar Standards Board: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 12.

16 With the exception of complaints which show a prima facie case of infringement but not professional misconduct: see text and notes 11, 12.

17 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 15. The Commissioner must notify the complainant of his decision and of his reasons for the dismissal: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 15. In addition, he may recommend to the Complaints Committee that a written warning be given to the barrister concerned, that the barrister should be directed to write an apology to the complainant, or that the barrister should be advised as to his future conduct, and the Committee will have the power to act upon such recommendation if it considers it appropriate, even if the conduct of the barrister did not infringe the Code of Conduct. If such a recommendation is made, the Commissioner may not dismiss the complaint until after the Committee has decided whether or not to act on his recommendation, and the Commissioner must notify the complainant of any action which is to be taken against the barrister at the same time as he notifies him of the dismissal of the complaint: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 15.

18 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 18(a). As to the Secretary of the Committee's powers to investigate complaints see PARA 1255.

19 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 18(b).

20 Commissioner for reconsideration the powers the Commissioner exercises are substantially the same as those he exercised during the initial consideration: see Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) rr 19-23.

1254-1258 Consideration and investigation of complaints

Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J substituted on 1 March 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary Procedures/A. CONSIDERATION AND INVESTIGATION OF COMPLAINTS/1255. Investigation of complaints by the Secretary of the Committee.

1255. Investigation of complaints by the Secretary of the Committee.

The Secretary of the Complaints Committee must investigate complaints referred to him by the Complaints Commissioner¹ or raised by the Bar Standards Board under its own motion².

The complaint must be sent to the barrister concerned together with a letter³ requiring him to comment in writing and to make any written representations he sees fit as to his conduct or the services he has provided to the complainant⁴. The complaint should normally also be sent to any solicitor⁵ or solicitor's agent named on the form of complaint as having instructed the barrister, or, if the Commissioner or Committee so directs, any other person whose name and address is provided by the complainant as a person able to assist⁶. Any comments received consequently should normally be sent to the complainant⁷, and, if the complainant responds in turn (and the complaint is referred to the Committee at the conclusion of the investigation) then a copy of that response must be sent to the barrister concerned⁸.

The Secretary may enter into further correspondence with any of the parties whose comments have been sought, or any other party who the Secretary, the Commissioner or the Committee think capable of affording further assistance⁹.

At the conclusion of the investigation the complaint must then be either returned to the Commissioner, or in the event of it having been raised by the Bar Standards Board of its own motion to the Complaints Committee, together with the results of the investigation¹⁰.

1 Ie under Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 18(a) (see PARA 1254). Such an investigation is carried out under the direction of the Complaints Commissioner and in such manner as he thinks fit: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 25(a). As to the Commissioner see PARA 1251. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

2 Ie under Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 5 (see PARA 1254 note 2). Such an investigation is carried out under the direction of the Complaints Committee and in such manner as it thinks fit: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 25(b). The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049). As to the Complaints Committee see PARA 1251.

3 The letter should be sent to the address notified by the barrister under the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 202(d) (see PARA 1153): Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 26.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 26. If no response is received within 28 days of the date of posting of such a letter, the Secretary may proceed as if the barrister's response had been to deny the allegations made in the complaint in their entirety. Any relevant documents, information or comments obtained at that time by the Commissioner from the complainant and/or from any potential witness must be made available to the barrister on request: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 26.

5 As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 1063 note 14.

6 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 27.

7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 28. The Commissioner or the Committee may in the exercise of his or its discretion direct that this step be omitted or that some of the comments not be sent to the complainant if, for example, issues of privilege or confidentiality make it inappropriate: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 28.

UPDATE

1254-1258 Consideration and investigation of complaints

Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J substituted on 1 March 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary Procedures/A. CONSIDERATION AND INVESTIGATION OF COMPLAINTS/1256. Consideration of complaints by the Complaints Committee.

1256. Consideration of complaints by the Complaints Committee.

Where the Complaints Commissioner or the Bar Standards Board refers a complaint to the Complaints Committee¹, the Committee must consider the complaint (and the results of investigations of it) so referred, together with the Commissioner's comments on it². Depending on its conclusions as to its gravity, the Committee may then deal with the complaint in any of the following ways:

- 1808 (1) if the complaint does not disclose a prima facie case of professional misconduct, but the barrister's conduct is nevertheless such as to give cause for concern, draw it to his attention in writing. The Committee may in those circumstances, either before or after the dismissal of the complaint³ do any or all of the following⁴:
- 31
- 18. (a) direct the barrister to apologise in writing to the complainant⁵;
 - 19. (b) advise him as to his future conduct either in writing or by directing him to attend on the Chairman of the Committee or on some other person nominated by the Committee, to receive such advice⁶;
 - 20. (c) upon the satisfaction of the relevant conditions, refer the complaint to an adjudication panel⁷;
 - 21. (d) In a case where there has been an infringement of the Code of Conduct⁸, direct the Secretary of the Complaints Committee to administer a formal written warning or a financial penalty for the infringement, or both⁹;
- 32
- 1809 (2) if a prima facie case of inadequate professional service¹⁰ is disclosed then, subject to the satisfaction of certain conditions¹¹, the Committee may direct that the complaint be referred to an adjudication panel¹²;
- 1810 (3) if a prima facie case of professional misconduct¹³, whether with or without inadequate professional service, is disclosed but in the opinion of the Committee the matter is insufficiently serious to warrant dealing with under the Summary Procedure Rules or reference to a disciplinary tribunal, the Committee may direct that the complaint be dealt with by informal attendance by the barrister to explain his conduct¹⁴;
- 1811 (4) if a prima facie case of professional misconduct, whether with or without inadequate professional service, is disclosed, the Committee may direct that the complaint should form the subject matter of a charge before a disciplinary tribunal¹⁵, unless it is of the opinion that there are no disputes of fact which cannot fairly be resolved by a summary procedure, in which case, provided the Committee is satisfied that the powers of a summary procedure are adequate to deal with the gravity of the issues, it may deal with the matter summarily¹⁶.

If, however, the subject matter of the complaint involves a conviction for an offence of dishonesty or deception or some other arrestable offence¹⁷ the Committee must direct that the complaint should form the subject matter of a charge before a disciplinary tribunal¹⁸. In all other cases where a prima facie case of professional misconduct is disclosed, in determining the appropriate means of disposal the Committee is entitled to take into consideration any matters which it considers relevant¹⁹.

Subject to this, the Committee may at any time dismiss the complaint²⁰, determine that no further action be taken on the complaint²¹, or postpone consideration of the complaint²².

1 As to the Complaints Commissioner's power to refer a complaint see PARA 1254; and as to the Bar Standards Board's power to raise a complaint of its own motion see PARA 1254 note 2. As to the Commissioner and the Committee generally see PARA 1251. The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 34. Except in the case of complaints made under the Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 32 (see PARA 1254), the Committee must not make any finding that there is a prima facie case of professional misconduct or inadequate professional service by a barrister on the basis of any allegation by a complainant to which the barrister has not had a reasonable opportunity to respond: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 34.

If in the course of its consideration of a complaint the Committee considers that there is any matter other than that complained of which might give rise to a prima facie case of professional misconduct or, where the original complaint is made by or on behalf of the lay client, a prima facie case of inadequate professional service, the Committee may raise a complaint about that matter on behalf of the Bar Standards Board: see Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 35.

3 If the complaint of professional misconduct was not dismissed before any such direction or advice referred to in heads (a)-(d) in the text was made or given, the Committee may thereafter dismiss that complaint. If the Committee considers that the circumstances of the complaint are relevant to the barrister's position as a pupil supervisor, it may notify the barrister's Inn of its concern in such manner as it sees fit: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(d).

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(d). If the complaint is so dismissed the Secretary of the Complaints Committee must notify the complainant and the barrister complained against of the manner of disposal of the complaint and the reasons for such disposal: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 39.

5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(d) (i).

6 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(d) (ii).

7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(d) (iii). As to the conditions which must be satisfied see note 11. A complaint that is referred to an adjudication panel is then dealt with in accordance with Annexe P (The Adjudication Panel and Appeals Rules); and PARAS 1262-1265.

8 Is an infringement of the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 901.1 (see PARA 1246): Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(d)(iv).

9 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(d) (iv).

10 As to what constitutes inadequate professional service see PARA 1248; definition applied by the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 70(b). Special provision is made for circumstances where a complaint discloses a prima facie case of inadequate professional service against a registered European lawyer: see Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 40. As to the meaning of 'registered European lawyer' see PARA 1102 note 7; definition applied by Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 70(b).

11 The complainant must be the barrister's lay client or his duly authorised representative (or, in the case of an employed barrister, the person to whom he has supplied the professional service in question); and if a prima facie case of professional misconduct is also disclosed by the complaint, the matter must in the opinion of the Committee be insufficiently serious to warrant dealing with under the Summary Procedure Rules or referring to a disciplinary tribunal: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(e)(i), (ii). As to the meaning of 'lay client' see PARA 1155 note 2; definition applied by Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 70(b). As to employed barristers see PARA 1037. As to the Summary Procedure Rules see PARAS 1266-1268.

12 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(e).

13 Special provision is made for circumstances where a complaint discloses a prima facie case of professional misconduct against a registered European lawyer: see the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 40.

14 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(f). As to the procedure for informal attendance see Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) rr 52-64; and PARAS 1259-1261.

15 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(h). As to the bringing of disciplinary charges where a complaint is referred to a tribunal see PARAS 1269-1280.

16 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(g). In such an instance the matter will be dealt with in accordance with Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules): see PARAS 1266-1268.

17 The code refers to a 'serious arrestable offence' as defined by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 116 (repealed).

18 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 37.

19 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(a), (d). The Committee may dismiss a complaint only if the majority of the lay members present at the meeting consents to such dismissal: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) rr 36(a), (d).

20 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 38. Those matters may include, but are not limited to: the barrister's previous conduct (including any disciplinary findings made against him as a student by his Inn, or any disciplinary findings made against him by any other professional body); the means by which any previous complaints against him have been disposed of; and the means by which complaints of a similar nature against other barristers have been disposed of: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 38.

21 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(b). If the complaint is so disposed of the Secretary of the Complaints Committee must notify the complainant and the barrister complained against of the manner of disposal of the complaint and the reasons for such disposal: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 39.

22 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(c). Consideration of the complaint may be postponed at any time, whether to permit further investigation of the complaint to be made, or during the currency of related legal proceedings, or for any other reason the Committee sees fit: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(c).

1257. Power to reopen and reconsider complaints.

Both the Complaints Commissioner¹ and the Complaints Committee² may reopen or reconsider a complaint which has been disposed of³ either following a recommendation of the Legal Services Ombudsman⁴, where new evidence becomes available which leads to the conclusion that the complaint should be reopened or reconsidered⁵, or for some other good reason⁶. However, the Committee may not reopen or reconsider a complaint which has been disposed of following a hearing before a disciplinary or summary tribunal⁷.

If a case is reopened or reconsidered by either the Commissioner or the Committee, he or it may take any further or different action thought fit, as if the former decision had not been made⁸, although if the Committee has directed that the complaint form the subject matter of a charge before a disciplinary tribunal⁹, and charges have been forwarded to the clerk and served on the defendant, the Committee's actions are confined to instructing counsel for the Committee to offer no evidence on a charge or apply to the directions judge for the making of additions to or amendments of a charge¹⁰.

The Bar Standards Board¹ must respect the confidentiality of complaints and may not disclose the fact that a complaint has been made or details of the complaint or its disposal² unless:

- 1812 (1) disclosure is necessary for the purpose of investigating the complaint³;
- 1813 (2) disclosure is necessary for the purpose of keeping the complainant and the barrister informed of the progress of the complaint⁴;
- 1814 (3) the complainant and the barrister consent⁵;
- 1815 (4) the relevant professional body must be informed of a prima facie finding of professional misconduct or inadequate professional service against a registered European lawyer⁶;
- 1816 (5) the publication of a finding is required in pursuance of an informal, summary or disciplinary hearing⁷;
- 1817 (6) disclosure is necessary in respect of an application by a barrister for silk, judicial appointment, or to become a pupil supervisor, or a request from some other body for a Certificate of Good Standing in respect of a barrister⁸; or
- 1818 (7) there is another good reason⁹.

1259. Conduct of hearings.

Where the Complaints Committee (the Committee')¹ decides that a complaint should be dealt with informally², it must direct that the barrister attend upon a panel appointed by the President³ consisting of two barristers and two lay representatives⁴; unless the panel otherwise decides, the senior barrister member will be the chairman of the panel⁵. The Secretary must make such further inquiries as he sees fit, or as are directed by the chairman to assist the deliberation of the panel, such as whether the complainant claims to have suffered financial loss as a result of the conduct complained of, and if so the exact nature and amount of that claimed loss and the evidence available to support the claim, and from the barrister the nature of the work he carried out for the complainant out of which the complaint arose, the fee rendered for such work, and whether or not such fee has been paid⁶. The barrister must attend on the panel at the day and time arranged, provide to the panel orally such information as he wishes to put before it in connection with his conduct in relation to the matters specified, and answer so far as he is able such further questions as the panel may put to him which may relate to any aspects of the conduct complained of⁷.

4 'Lay representative' means:

552 (1) a lay person appointed by the President of the Council of the Inns of Court to serve on disciplinary tribunals, summary procedure panels, informal hearings panels, interim suspension panels and appeal panels therefrom, adjudication panels, adjudication appeal panels and medical panels and review panels therefrom; or

553 (2) a lay person appointed by the Lord Chief Justice to serve on hearings before the Visitors; save that no person may be appointed as a lay representative if they are a member of the Complaints Committee or of the Bar Council or any of its other committees; or if they were a member of the Complaints Committee at any time when the matter which the tribunal or panel is dealing with was considered: para 1001.

5 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 52. None of the members of the panel should be members of the Complaints Committee or of the Bar Standards Board or any of its committees, nor should they have been members of the Committee at any time when the complaint being dealt with by the panel was considered by the Committee: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 52. When the Committee directs attendance upon the panel it must specify what, in summary form, are the matters upon which the Committee has found a prima facie case of misconduct to be disclosed and on which the barrister's explanation of his conduct is required (Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 53(a)), and whether, on the information available to it, the Committee also regards a prima facie case of inadequate professional service as having been disclosed, and if so what, in summary form, are the matters arising in that regard which the barrister will also be asked to explain (Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 53(b)). The Secretary must notify both the barrister and the complainant of these matters and as soon as practicable thereafter must send them a bundle of the papers to be considered by the panel and invite them within 14 days (which period may be extended with the permission of the chairman of the Committee) to comment in writing on any of those matters or to send any other document to which they wish the panel to have regard: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 54. 7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 57. 1260. Findings.

Following an informal hearing¹, the panel may conclude² that:

- 1819 (1) neither professional misconduct nor inadequate professional service has been established by the complainant, whereupon it must dismiss the complaint³;
- 1820 (2) notwithstanding the barrister's explanation, professional misconduct has been established, in which case it may: conclude that no further action will be taken on the complaint; give the barrister advice as to his future conduct; or admonish him⁴;
- 1821 (3) the barrister has provided inadequate professional service in respect of the subject-matter of the complaint⁵; or
- 1822 (4) the barrister has infringed a provision of the Code of Conduct⁶ but that such infringement did not amount to professional misconduct⁷.

The panel must provide reasons for reaching its decision⁸. Whatever conclusion it reaches, the panel may refer any issue of policy which arises to the relevant committee of the Bar Standards Board⁹, and may refer a matter back to the Complaints Committee for reconsideration if it considers that its powers are not sufficient to deal with the gravity of the complaint revealed at the hearing or that other issues are raised which require further consideration by the Committee¹⁰.

1261. Penalties.

A barrister against whom a charge of inadequate professional service¹ has been found proved in an informal hearing² may be directed to make a formal apology to the complainant for the conduct complained of³; to repay or remit all or part of any fee rendered in respect of the inadequate service⁴; to pay compensation to the complainant in such sum as directed, not exceeding £5,000⁵; or to complete continuing professional development of such nature and duration as directed⁶. The panel may also determine that it is not appropriate to take any action in respect of the complaint⁷ or adjourn consideration of the remedy to permit investigation or further investigation of the consequences of the inadequate professional service for the complainant, and reconvene when the results of such investigations are known⁸; and the panel may, if it considers that the circumstances of the complaint are relevant to the barrister's position as a pupil supervisor, notify the barrister's Inn of its concerns in such manner as it sees fit⁹.

An appeal lies at the instance of the barrister from any decision of a panel that a barrister has provided inadequate professional service, and against any decision as to the remedy to be granted to the complainant for such service, in the same manner as an appeal lies from a decision of an adjudication panel in respect of the same matters¹⁰. 1262. Constitution and powers of adjudication panels.

Adjudication panels are appointed by the President of the Council of the Inns of Court¹ to determine complaints which, in the Complaints Committee's² consideration do not raise a prima facie case of professional misconduct³, but do raise a prima facie case that the barrister concerned has provided inadequate professional service⁴ to the complainant⁵. Panels consist of two lay representatives, one of whom must act as chairman, and two barrister members, at least one of whom must be a Queen's Counsel⁶.

Panels are empowered:

- 1823 (1) to consider any complaint referred to them and to direct such investigations as they see fit in respect of it⁷;
- 1824 (2) to dismiss any complaint without making a finding as to the existence or otherwise of inadequate professional service if they conclude that, due to lapse of time, disputes of fact cannot fairly be resolved by the panel, or for any other reason the complaint cannot fairly be determined⁸;
- 1825 (3) to determine whether the barrister concerned has provided inadequate professional service in respect of the matter complained of⁹; and
- 1826 (4) to determine what remedy should be granted to the complainant in respect of such inadequate service¹⁰.

1263. Preparatory matters.

When a complaint is referred to an adjudication panel¹, it must consider what, if any, further investigation is required to be made in order for the panel to deal fairly with the matters falling to it for decision, and the Secretary of the Complaints Committee² must make such investigations as the panel directs to assist its deliberations³. Whether or not there are additional investigations to make, the Secretary must notify both the barrister and the complainant of the matters that the Committee has directed the panel to consider, and as soon as practicable thereafter must prepare a bundle of papers to be considered by the panel, copy them to the barrister and the complainant, and invite their written comments within 14 days⁴. At the expiration of this period or on completion of his inquiries, the Secretary must copy any further papers that are to be considered by the panel to the barrister and the complainant, and request the President of the Council of the Inns of Court⁵ to appoint a panel and set a date for it to meet⁶. Both the barrister and the complainant must be informed of the date of the hearing⁷. The complainant must be invited to make any further comments in writing which must arrive not less than seven days before the date of the hearing; and such comments must be copied to the barrister and the panel⁸.

1264. Consideration of complaints by adjudication panels.

An adjudication panel¹ may consider complaints and the results of any investigations in whatever manner it thinks fit, and may adjourn consideration of any complaint at any time and for any reason, and in particular to enable the complainant to comment on any information provided by the barrister at the hearing which had not previously been disclosed by him². If, following such consideration, the panel decides that the complainant has established on the balance of probabilities that the barrister concerned has provided inadequate professional service³ to him, it must consider what remedy should be granted in respect of the service which it has found to have been inadequate⁴, to which end it may either determine that it is not appropriate to take any action in respect of the inadequate service⁵ or direct the barrister to make a formal apology to the complainant for the inadequate service provided⁶, to repay or remit all or part of any fee rendered in respect of the inadequate service⁷, or to pay compensation to the complainant in such sum as the panel directs not exceeding £5,000⁸. Following any such finding, the panel must give notice in writing to the barrister and to the complainant of the respects in which it has found the barrister to have provided inadequate professional service, and the reasons for such finding, and of the remedy to be granted to the complainant⁹.

The panel may also decide on consideration that the complainant has not established on the balance of probabilities that the barrister concerned has provided inadequate professional service¹⁰ or that for any reason the complaint cannot fairly be determined by it¹¹; in either case, it must thereupon dismiss the complaint and give notice in writing of its decision and the reasons for it to the barrister and the complainant¹².

If the panel is not unanimous on any issue, the finding made must be that of the majority of the members of the panel; and if the panel is equally divided, the burden of proof being on the complainant, the finding must be that most favourable to the barrister¹³. There is a right of appeal¹⁴.

Whether or not an adjudication panel¹ has determined that a barrister has provided an inadequate professional service², it may refer any matter of policy which arises to the relevant committee of the Bar Standards Board³.

No finding of a panel is publishable, except by the Complaints Commissioner in any annual or other report on his work⁴.

If the panel considers that the circumstances of the complaint are relevant to the barrister's capacity as a pupil supervisor, it may notify the barrister's Inn of its concern in such manner as it sees fit⁵. In respect of an application by a barrister for silk, if a finding of inadequate professional service has been recorded against the barrister concerned, the Board must disclose the finding and penalty⁶.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary Procedures/D. SUMMARY HEARINGS/1266. Preparatory.

1266. Preparatory.

As soon as possible after the referral of a case to summary procedure¹, the Secretary of the Complaints Committee² must write to the defendant³ notifying him of the Committee's decision and enclosing a copy of the Summary Procedure Rules⁴. The letter of notification requires the defendant to state whether or not he admits the charges and, if he does not, whether or not he challenges any of the facts detailed in the statement of facts⁵, and if he admits the charges or does not challenge any of the facts detailed in the statement of facts, he will also be asked to say whether he is prepared to agree that the charges should be dealt with by summary procedure⁶. If the defendant admits the charges or does not challenge any significant facts and, in either case, if he agrees that his case should be dealt with by summary procedure, the case proceeds to a summary hearing⁷, failing which it proceeds to a disciplinary tribunal⁸.

1 As to the referral of cases to summary procedure see the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 36(g); and PARA 1256. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 3(a). Provision is made as to the documents to be served on the defendant, and the establishment of a hearing date: see Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) rr 3(b)-(e), 4. All barristers are subject to the Summary Procedure Rules: para 903(c).

5 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 5(a)(i). Failure of the defendant to respond to these questions within 30 days of the date of the Secretary's letter must be construed as refusal to admit the charges, to agree the statement of facts and to accept summary procedure: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 5(c).

6 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 5(a)(ii). If the only charge alleges breach of para 402 (ie the insurance requirement: see PARA 1239), the Complaints Committee has so directed when referring the case to summary procedure, and the defendant admits the charges and agrees that they should be dealt with by summary procedure, he will also be asked to say whether he wishes to attend the summary hearing: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 5(a)(iii).

7 As to the procedure at summary hearings see PARA 1267.

1267. Procedure at summary hearings.

A summary hearing panel consists of not more than five, and not less than three, persons appointed by the President of the Council of the Inns of Court¹ and must include at least one Queen's Counsel as chairman of the panel, one junior over five years' call, and, where the number of barristers on the panel exceeds two, two lay representatives².

Procedure at summary hearings³ is, however, informal, the details being at the discretion of the chairman⁴. The hearing should normally be in public⁵ and the defendant should attend⁶, unless he has elected not to⁷. The defendant may be represented, as may the Complaints Committee in complex cases⁸, although the defendant is not entitled to be represented if he has elected not to attend the hearing⁹. No witnesses may be called without the prior consent of the chairman and the submission of a proof of evidence¹⁰. A record of each summary hearing must be taken electronically and retained for at least two years¹¹.

1 As to the Council of the Inns of Court see PARA 1053 et seq.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 2(a)-(c). Where there are only two barristers on the panel, only one lay representative need be included: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 2(d). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. As to Queen's Counsel see PARAS 1039, 1124. As to the meaning of 'lay representative' see PARA 1259 note 4.

No person may be appointed to serve on a panel if they are a member of the Complaints Committee or of the Bar Standards Board or any of its other committees, or if they were a member of the Committee at any time when it considered the complaint being dealt with by the panel: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 2(i). The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

The proceedings of a summary hearing are valid notwithstanding that one or more of the members other than the chairman becomes unable to continue to act or disqualified from continuing to act, so long as the number of members present throughout the substantive hearing of the charges is not reduced below three and continues to include the chairman and at least one of the lay representatives: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 2(ii).

3 'Summary hearing' means the hearing of a summary case by a panel appointed under the Summary Procedure Rules: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 1(a).

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 7(a).

5 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 7(d). The hearing need not be in public if the panel considers that there are special reasons why the hearing ought to be held in private, and the defendant consents to the hearing taking place in private: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 7(d)(i), (ii).

6 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 7(f). Should the defendant fail to attend, the summary hearing may proceed in his absence, subject to the panel being satisfied that this course is appropriate, that all relevant procedures requiring the defendant's attendance have been complied with and that no acceptable explanation for the defendant's absence has been provided. If the panel is not so satisfied, it has the power to adjourn the matter, to a specific date or sine die, or to refer the matter back to the Complaints Committee, as it may think fit: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 7(f).

7 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 7(g).

11 See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 7(h). The record must be retained under the arrangements of the President for two years, until the expiry of the period allowed for notification of intention to appeal or until the conclusion of any appeal, whichever period is longest: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 7(h).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary Procedures/D. SUMMARY HEARINGS/1268. Finding and sentence.

1268. Finding and sentence.

At the conclusion of a summary hearing¹, the finding on each charge must be set down in writing and signed by the chairman of the panel together with the reasons for that finding², and the chairman must then announce the panel's decisions as to finding³. If the panel finds any charge proved, it must then consider its decision as to sentence⁴. A barrister against whom a charge of professional misconduct has been found proved may be suspended from practising either for a fixed period of up to three months or a period until the barrister has complied with any relevant practising requirements⁵; prohibited from accepting or carrying out public access instructions⁶; ordered to pay a fine of up to £500 to the Bar Standards Board⁷; ordered to forego or repay all or part of his fees⁸; ordered to complete continuing professional development of such nature and duration as directed⁹; reprimanded¹⁰; or advised as to his future conduct¹¹. If the panel find a charge of infringement¹² to be proved against a barrister it may direct the Secretary of the Complaints Committee that a written warning be sent to the barrister concerned, or a financial penalty imposed on him, or both¹³. A barrister against whom a charge of inadequate professional service has been found proved may be directed to make a formal apology to the complainant for the conduct in relation to which the finding was made¹⁴, to repay or remit all or part of any fee rendered in respect of the inadequate service¹⁵, to pay compensation to the complainant in such sum as directed not exceeding £5,000¹⁶, or to complete continuing professional development of such nature and duration as directed¹⁷, or may be prohibited from accepting or carrying out public access instructions¹⁸. The hearing is also empowered to decide that no action should be taken against the barrister¹⁹, to order the reduction or cancellation of fees paid by the Legal Services Commission in connection with services provided by the barrister as part of the Community Legal Service or Criminal Defence Service²⁰, or to order that the barrister be excluded from providing representation so funded²¹. Where applicable, a defendant may also be suspended from the register of European lawyers²². If the defendant was not present throughout the proceedings, the sentence must include the statement that the finding and sentence were made in his absence²³.

Whether or not the panel has found any charge proved, it may notify the barrister's Inn if it considers that the circumstances of the complaint are relevant to his capacity as a pupil supervisor²⁴, and may refer any matter of policy which arises to the relevant committee of the Board²⁵. Provision is made for the reporting and publication of the finding and sentence²⁶. A summary hearing has no power to award costs²⁷. There is a right of appeal²⁸.

2 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 8. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. If the members of the panel are not unanimous as to the finding on any charge, the finding to be recorded on that charge must be of the majority; and if the members are equally divided as to the finding on any charge, then, the burden of proof being on the complainant, the finding to be recorded on that charge must be that which is most favourable to the defendant: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 8. complaint against the defendant, and after hearing any representations or considering any written submissions by or on behalf of the defendant, the panel's decision as to sentence must be set down in writing and signed by the chairman: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 9(a). If the members of the panel are not unanimous as to the sentence, the sentence to be recorded must be that of the majority: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 9(a). If the members of the panel are equally divided as to the sentence, the sentence to be recorded must be that which is most favourable to the defendant: Annexe L (The Summary Procedure Rules) r 9(a). E. PROCEEDINGS BEFORE DISCIPLINARY TRIBUNALS

1269. Disciplinary charges.

When the Complaints Committee¹ directs that a complaint should form the subject matter of a charge before a disciplinary tribunal², the Secretary of the Complaints Committee must be responsible for preferring the charge on behalf of the Bar Standards Board³, subject to the direction of the Chairman of the Committee⁴. The investigations officer of the Board is responsible for the conduct of any disciplinary proceedings brought on its behalf⁵. The investigations officer must arrange for the appointment of counsel to settle the charge and to present the case before the tribunal, and may arrange for the appointment of a solicitor or such other person as may be necessary to assist counsel and prepare the case⁶.

Counsel so appointed must settle such charges as he considers appropriate founded upon the facts or evidence from which the complaint arose, and any further or other matters which have been revealed by investigations directed by counsel, the investigations officer, the Secretary or the Committee⁷. If the Committee considers that the facts of the complaint are unlikely to be disputed (for example because it involves a criminal conviction), that witnesses are unlikely to be called for the hearing, that the case needs to be resolved urgently, or that there is some other good reason, it may direct that the prosecution of the charges be expedited⁸.

It is the responsibility of the investigations officer, subject to the supervision of the Secretary of the Committee, both to forward the charge to the clerk to the tribunal⁹, together with the other specified documents¹⁰, and to make any necessary administrative arrangements for the summoning of witnesses, the production of documents, and generally for the proper presentation of the case on behalf of the Board before the tribunal¹¹.

Inquiries must be made of the Board and the Under-Treasurer or Sub-Treasurer of the barrister's Inn¹² concerning any previous findings of misconduct against him, so that this information may be available to be placed before the tribunal if any charge against him is found to have been proved¹³.

tribunal, be paid reasonable remuneration for work done on the Committee's behalf; the cost of such remuneration is to be borne by the Bar Council: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 51.

7 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 47. Such charges may be of professional misconduct and, where appropriate, of inadequate professional service, save that no charges of inadequate professional service must be settled unless the complainant is the barrister's lay client or his duly authorised representative or, in the case of an employed barrister, the person to whom he has supplied the professional services in question: Annexe J (The Complaints Rules) r 47. BARRISTERS/(5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary Procedures/E. PROCEEDINGS BEFORE DISCIPLINARY TRIBUNALS/1270. Appointment and composition of tribunals.

1270. Appointment and composition of tribunals.

Disciplinary tribunals are appointed by the Council of the Inns of Court¹ and conduct their proceedings in accordance with, and have the powers and functions specified in, the Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations². The President of the Inns' Council³ must appoint disciplinary tribunals to sit at such times as are necessary for the prompt and expeditious determination of charges against barristers⁴. A disciplinary tribunal should in general⁵ consist of five persons nominated by the President, namely, a judge⁶, two lay representatives⁷, and two practising barristers⁸. The President must select another member of the relevant class to fill any vacancy in the tribunal that has arisen prior to the substantive hearing of the charge⁹; and, at any time before the commencement of the substantive hearing of the charge, the President may cancel any or all of the nominations made pursuant to these provisions, and make such alternative nominations as, in the exercise of his discretion, he deems to be expedient¹⁰. A member of a disciplinary tribunal who has been absent for any time during a sitting may take no further part in the proceedings¹¹.

The proceedings of a disciplinary tribunal are valid notwithstanding that after the convening order has been issued¹² one or more of the members other than the chairman or the lay representative becomes unable to continue to act or disqualified from continuing to act, so long as the number of members present throughout the substantive hearing of the charge is not reduced below three and continues to include the chairman and the lay representative¹³.

The President must appoint a person or persons to act as clerk or clerks to the disciplinary tribunals¹⁴; and no person who has been engaged in the investigation of a complaint against a barrister¹⁵ may act as clerk in relation to disciplinary proceedings arising out of that complaint¹⁶.

3 Any duty or function or step which pursuant to the provisions of Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) is to be discharged or carried out by the President of the Inns' Council may, if he is unable to act due to absence or any other reason, be discharged or carried out by any other member of the Inns' Council, the Treasurer of any Inn or any other person nominated in writing by the President for any specific purpose: Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) reg 31(1).

Following the formulation of the charge or charges by counsel, an official of the Complaints Committee¹ must cause a copy to be served on the barrister concerned (the 'defendant'), together with a copy of the Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations² and details of any directions sought³; and at the same time he must cause copies of the charge or charges to be supplied to the President of the Inns' Council⁴.

Such documents, and any other documents required to be served on a barrister arising out of, or in connection with, disciplinary proceedings, are deemed to have been validly served if sent by registered post, recorded delivery or receipted hand delivery⁵ to the address notified by the barrister⁶, an address to which the barrister may request in writing that such documents be sent, or, in the absence of such a request, to his last known address; and such service is deemed to have been made on the fifth working day after the date of posting or on the next working day after receipted hand delivery⁷. In every case actual service is sufficient service⁸. Service may also be effected in any way directed by the directions judge or the chairman of the disciplinary tribunal⁹.

¹ This duty is described in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) as vesting in a 'PCC Representative' but it is assumed that all such duties so described are now carried out by an official of the Complaints Committee. 1272. Convening orders.

After receipt of the copy charge or charges¹, and in any case not later than 14 days before the substantive hearing, the President of the Inns' Council² must issue an order (the 'convening order') specifying the date of the sitting of the disciplinary tribunal³ at which it is proposed the charge or charges should be heard⁴, the identities of those persons who it is proposed should constitute the disciplinary tribunal to hear his case⁵, and the identity of the clerk⁶. The President must arrange for the service⁷ of the convening order on the defendant, and for copies of it to be supplied to the nominated members of the tribunal, and the clerk⁸.

The defendant has the right, upon receipt of the convening order, to give notice to the President objecting to any one or more of the proposed members of the tribunal⁹. Upon receipt of any such objection, the President must, if satisfied that it is properly made, exercise his power¹⁰ to nominate a substitute member or members of the tribunal, and must notify the defendant accordingly; and upon receipt of such notification, the defendant has mutatis mutandis in relation to such substitute member or members the like right of objection as is mentioned above¹¹. No objection to any member of the tribunal is, however, valid on the ground that he has or may have had knowledge of a previous charge of professional misconduct¹² or breach of proper professional standards or a charge consisting of a legal aid complaint¹³ against the defendant, or of any sentence imposed on the defendant in connection therewith¹⁴.

1273. Documents to be served.

A barrister who is to be charged before a disciplinary tribunal must as soon as practicable be supplied with a copy of the statement of the evidence of each witness intended to be called in support of the charge or charges¹ and a list of the documents intended to be relied on by the official of the Complaints Committee². If any of these are not supplied to the barrister at least ten days before the date of the preliminary hearing³, the Committee official must provide to the barrister and the directions judge, at least ten days before the date of the preliminary hearing, details of the statements of evidence that are still being sought and a statement of when it is believed that it will be practicable to supply those statements to the defendant⁴.

1274. Preliminary hearing.

The President of the Inns' Council¹ must designate a judge or judges (the 'directions judge') to exercise the following powers and functions².

Not less than ten days and not more than four weeks (or three weeks if the Complaints Committee³ has directed that prosecution of charges be expedited) after service of the charge or charges, the directions judge must hold a preliminary hearing for the purpose of giving directions and of taking such other steps as he considers suitable for the clarification of the issues before the tribunal and generally for the just and expeditious handling of the proceedings⁴. The directions to be given and steps to be taken by the directions judge may concern, but are not limited to, the following matters:

- 1827 (1) whether the hearing should not be held in public⁵;
- 1828 (2) applications for separate hearings⁶;
- 1829 (3) applications to sever charges⁷;
- 1830 (4) applications to strike out charges⁸;
- 1831 (5) attendance of witnesses⁹;
- 1832 (6) a requirement that the parties provide each other with the names of all witnesses to be called at the hearing within a specified time limit¹⁰;
- 1833 (7) admission of documents¹¹;
- 1834 (8) admission of facts¹²;
- 1835 (9) the estimated duration of the substantive hearing¹³;
- 1836 (10) such other matters as he deems expedient for the efficient conduct of the hearing¹⁴;
- 1837 (11) consideration of any application for a new hearing before a fresh tribunal¹⁵;
- 1838 (12) a requirement that such action as appears to him to be necessary for a fair hearing of the matter be undertaken within such period as he may decide¹⁶; and
- 1839 (13) where he is satisfied that the matter is ready for hearing by a tribunal, setting a date for the tribunal hearing¹⁷.

The Committee official and the defendant or his representative may, in advance of the date fixed for the preliminary hearing, agree upon the directions to be made and/or the steps to be taken there, or that no such directions or steps are required, and must notify the clerk in writing of any such agreement; and following such notification, the directions judge may, if he thinks fit, make directions in the terms agreed or direct that no preliminary hearing is required or both¹⁸.

The clerk must take a note of the proceedings at a preliminary hearing and must cause a record to be drawn up and served¹⁹ on the parties setting out the directions given or admissions made at the preliminary hearing, including, without prejudice to the generality of the directions given, a record of any directions which relate to any of the matters mentioned in heads (1) to (13) above²⁰.

A defendant aggrieved by a direction given or other step taken may, provided that he acts promptly following the service on him of the record of any directions, give notice to the clerk of his intention to apply for a review of such direction or step; and such review will be conducted by the chairman of the disciplinary tribunal sitting with a lay representative²¹, who must, on the application being made, give such direction or take such other steps as they see fit²².

The defendant may plead guilty to any charge or charges at the directions hearing, in which case the disciplinary tribunal must find the defendant guilty of that charge at the tribunal hearing²³.

UPDATE

1269-1280 Proceedings before disciplinary tribunals

Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexes J and K substituted on 1 March 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary Procedures/E. PROCEEDINGS BEFORE DISCIPLINARY TRIBUNALS/1276. Procedure at the hearing.

1276. Procedure at the hearing.

The procedure of a disciplinary tribunal¹ is governed by the rules of natural justice, subject to which the tribunal may:

- 1846 (1) admit any evidence, whether oral or written, whether direct or hearsay, and whether or not the same would be admissible in a court of law²;
- 1847 (2) give all such directions with regard to the conduct of, and procedure at, the hearing, and with regard to the admission of evidence, as it considers appropriate for securing that the defendant has a proper opportunity of answering the charge or otherwise as is just³; and
- 1848 (3) exclude any hearsay evidence if it is not satisfied that reasonable steps have been taken to obtain direct evidence of the facts sought to be proved by the hearsay evidence⁴.

Special rules of evidence apply in proceedings before a disciplinary tribunal which involve the decision of a court or tribunal⁵. The tribunal must apply the criminal standard of proof when adjudicating upon charges of professional misconduct⁶, and the civil standard of proof when adjudicating upon charges of inadequate professional service⁷, if any⁸.

The hearing before a disciplinary tribunal must be in public unless at a preliminary hearing or otherwise it has been directed that it should not be⁹ and this direction has not been overruled by the tribunal¹⁰. The clerk must arrange for a record of the proceedings before a tribunal to be made by the employment of a shorthand writer or the use of a recording machine¹¹.

If a tribunal is satisfied that the relevant procedure¹² has been complied with and the defendant has been served with the prescribed documents¹³, and the defendant has not attended the time and place appointed for the hearing, it may nevertheless proceed to hear and determine the charge or charges¹⁴. If a tribunal is satisfied that it has not been practicable to comply with the relevant procedure, it must hear and determine the charge or charges in the absence of the barrister charged¹⁵.

At any time before or during the hearing a tribunal may direct that the charge or charges be amended, provided that:

- 1849 (a) the tribunal is satisfied that the defendant will not by reason of such an amendment suffer any substantial prejudice in the conduct of his defence¹⁶;
- 1850 (b) the tribunal must, if so requested by the defendant, adjourn for such time as is reasonably necessary to enable him to meet the charge or charges as so amended¹⁷; and
- 1851 (c) the tribunal must make such order as to the costs¹⁸ of, or occasioned by, the amendment, or of any consequential adjournment of the proceedings, as it considers appropriate¹⁹.

The tribunal must sit from day to day until it has arrived at a finding and, if any charge has been found proved, until sentence is pronounced²⁰. If it appears to the tribunal that an adjournment is desirable for any reason, it may, however, be adjourned for such period as the tribunal thinks fit²¹.

5 In proceedings before a disciplinary tribunal which involve the decision of a court or tribunal, the following rules of evidence apply provided that it is proved in each case that the decision relates to the barrister charged: (1) the fact that the barrister charged has been convicted of a criminal offence may be proved by producing a certified copy of the certificate of conviction relating to the offence, proof of a conviction in this matter constituting prima facie evidence that the barrister was guilty of the offence (Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) reg 13(1)(a)); (2) the finding and sentence of any tribunal in or outside England and Wales exercising a professional disciplinary jurisdiction may be proved by producing a certified copy of the finding and sentence (Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) reg 13(1)(b)); and (3) the judgment of any civil court may be proved by producing a certified copy of the judgment (Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) reg 13(1)(c)). In any such case, the findings of fact by the court or tribunal upon which the conviction, finding, sentence or judgment is based are admissible as prima facie proof of the facts: Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) reg 13(2).

At the conclusion of the hearing¹, the finding of the disciplinary tribunal on each charge, together with its reasons, must be set down in writing and signed by the chairman and all members of the tribunal². If the members of the tribunal are not unanimous as to the finding on any charge, the finding to be recorded is that of the majority; and if the members of the tribunal are equally divided, then, the burden of proof being on the official of the Complaints Committee³, the finding to be recorded is that which is the most favourable to the defendant⁴. 1269-1280 Proceedings before disciplinary tribunals

Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexes J and K substituted on 1 March 2009.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(5) MISCONDUCT, COMPLAINTS AND DISCIPLINE/(iii) Disciplinary Procedures/E. PROCEEDINGS BEFORE DISCIPLINARY TRIBUNALS/1278. Sentence and subsequent actions.

1278. Sentence and subsequent actions.

If a disciplinary tribunal¹ finds a charge or any charges proved, evidence may be given of any previous finding of professional misconduct², breach of proper professional standards or inadequate professional services³ or any finding on a charge consisting of a legal aid complaint⁴ against the defendant⁵. After hearing any representations by or on behalf of the defendant, the tribunal must set down in writing its decision as to the sentence⁶. If the members of the tribunal are not unanimous, the sentence to be recorded⁷ is that decided by the majority; and, if the members of the tribunal are equally divided, the sentence to be recorded is that which is the most favourable to the defendant⁸. The chairman of the tribunal must then announce the tribunal's decision as to the sentence⁹.

A barrister against whom a charge of professional misconduct has been found proved may be sentenced by the tribunal to be disbarred¹⁰; may be suspended for a prescribed period¹¹; may be prohibited from accepting or carrying out any public access instructions¹²; may be ordered to pay a fine of up to £5,000¹³; may be ordered to repay or to forgo fees¹⁴; may be ordered to complete continuing professional development of such nature and duration as the tribunal directs¹⁵; may be reprimanded by the Treasurer of his Inn¹⁶; may be reprimanded by the tribunal¹⁷; may be given advice by the tribunal as to his future conduct¹⁸; may be ordered by the tribunal to attend on a nominated person to be reprimanded¹⁹; or may be ordered by the tribunal to attend on a nominated person to be given advice as to his future conduct²⁰.

A barrister against whom a charge of inadequate professional service has been found proved may be directed to make a formal apology to the complainant for the conduct in relation to which the finding was made²¹, to repay or remit all or part of any fee rendered in respect of the inadequate service²², to pay compensation to the complainant in such sum as the tribunal directs not exceeding £5,000²³, or to complete continuing professional development of such nature and duration as the tribunal directs²⁴; or may be prohibited from accepting or carrying out any public access instructions²⁵.

The tribunal is also empowered to decide that no action should be taken against the barrister²⁶, to order the reduction or cancellation of fees paid by the Legal Services Commission in connection with services provided by the barrister as part of the Community Legal Service or Criminal Defence Service²⁷, or to order that the barrister be excluded from providing representation so funded²⁸. Whether or not the tribunal has found any charge proved, it may notify the barrister's Inn if it considers that the circumstances of the complaint are relevant to his capacity as a pupil supervisor²⁹. Provision is also made for the reporting and publication of the finding and sentence and the taking of further action by the defendant's Inn or (in the case of a registered European lawyer) the Bar Standards Board³⁰. There is a right of appeal³¹.

If the barrister charged has not been present throughout the proceedings, the sentence must include one of the following two statements: (1) if the relevant procedure under Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) reg 14(1) (see PARA 1276) has been complied with, that the finding and sentence were made in the absence of the barrister in accordance therewith (Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) reg 21(13)(i)); and (2) if the procedure under Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) reg 14(2) (see PARA 1276) has been complied with, that the finding and sentence were made in the absence of the barrister and that he has the right to apply to the directions judge for an order that there should be a new hearing before a fresh disciplinary tribunal (Annexe K (The Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations) reg 21(13)(ii)). 1279. Disbarment, suspension, and prohibition from accepting public access instructions.

Where a barrister has been sentenced by a disciplinary tribunal¹ to be disbarred², suspended³, or prohibited from accepting or carrying out any public access instructions⁴ for a period of more than one year, the tribunal must either require the Bar Standards Board⁵ to suspend immediately the practising certificate⁶ of the barrister in question⁷ or determine that its sentence prohibiting the barrister from accepting or carrying out any public access instructions is to take effect immediately⁸; and where a barrister who does not currently hold a practising certificate has been sentenced to be disbarred or to be suspended, the tribunal may require the Board not to issue any practising certificate to him⁹. Except in the case of the disbarment or suspension of a barrister who does not currently hold a practising certificate, the tribunal is obliged to impose such a requirement or make such a determination unless in the circumstances of the case it appears to the tribunal to be inappropriate to do so¹⁰, although if under these circumstances the barrister is permitted to continue to practise for any period the tribunal may require the Board to impose such terms in respect of the barrister's practice as it deems necessary for the protection of the public¹¹. A tribunal that concludes that it would be inappropriate to require immediate suspension may nonetheless require the Board to suspend the practising certificate of the barrister in question from such date as the tribunal may specify¹². In all cases of disbarment, suspension, or prohibition from accepting or carrying out public access instructions, the tribunal may take such action only after seeking and hearing representations from the defendant and an official of the Complaints Committee¹³ as to whether it would be inappropriate to take it¹⁴. Any requirement imposed pursuant to these provisions may be varied or set aside where appropriate¹⁵.

1280. Costs.

A disciplinary tribunal¹ has power to make such orders for costs, whether against or in favour of a defendant, as it thinks fit². Upon making such an order, a tribunal must either itself determine the amount of such costs or appoint a suitably qualified person to do so on its behalf³. Any costs ordered to be paid by or to a defendant must be paid to or by the Bar Standards Board⁴. Subject to the provisions described above, all costs and expenses incurred by a tribunal or by the Complaints Committee⁵ in connection with or preparatory to the hearing before the tribunal must be borne by the Bar Standards Board⁶.

1281. Right to appeal.

A barrister's appeal¹ from a written warning or financial penalty imposed by the Bar Standards Board² for any failure to comply with the relevant provisions of the Code of Conduct³ lies to an appeal panel consisting of a Queen's Counsel (who acts as the chair of the panel), a barrister and two lay representatives⁴.

An appeal is made by the barrister sending to the Secretary of the Complaints Committee, within 28 days of receipt of the written warning or notice seeking payment⁵, a notice identifying the warning or financial penalty appealed against, the decision the barrister contends for, the grounds of such appeal and a statement of whether or not the barrister requires his appeal to be disposed of at an oral hearing⁶.

At least five working days before the time set for the appeal, the Secretary must provide each member of the panel and the barrister with a paginated bundle of the correspondence and other documents on its files relating to the imposition of the written warning and financial penalty⁷. The barrister may be represented at the appeal⁸. The appeal panel must decide whether to set aside the written warning or financial penalty or both, as appropriate⁹.

(B) APPEALS AGAINST FINDINGS OF ADJUDICATION PANELS

1282. Right to appeal.

A barrister in respect of whom an adjudication panel¹ has made a finding that he has provided inadequate professional service² may appeal against the finding and against any decision as to the remedy to be granted to the complainant in respect of such inadequate service³. Any such appeal must be made by the barrister sending to the Secretary of the Complaints Committee⁴, within 28 days of the date of the letter notifying him of the decision appealed against, a notice stating the findings to be appealed against, the decision the barrister contends for, and the grounds of such appeal, accompanied by the sum of £100 payable to the Bar Standards Board⁵ to defray expenses⁶. Service of notice of appeal operates as a stay of any order made in favour of the complainant⁷. On receipt of such a notice, the Secretary must notify the Chairman of the Complaints Committee of the intended appeal and afford him an opportunity to respond to the grounds of appeal stated in the notice⁸.

1283. Hearing and determination of appeals.

An appeal against a finding of, or a remedy granted by, an adjudication panel¹ is heard and determined by a panel appointed by the President of the Council of the Inns of Court² consisting of two barristers, of whom at least one must be a Queen's Counsel³ and must chair the panel, at least one must be a junior of more than five years' call, and two lay representatives⁴. None of the members of the panel may have been a member of the adjudication panel which made any finding appealed against⁵. The procedure on an appeal is informal, the details, including whether or not there should be an oral hearing in relation to the appeal, being at the discretion of the chairman of the panel⁶. The barrister, the complainant and the Chairman of the Complaints Committee may attend or be represented⁷.

The panel may not allow the appeal unless it is satisfied that the adjudication panel appealed from reached a wrong decision on any question of law, made a finding of fact which was against the weight of the evidence, or exercised any discretion granted to it on a wrong basis⁸. Subject to this, it may make such order, including any order which the adjudication panel appealed from had the power to make, as it thinks fit in relation to the complaint⁹. Whether or not it allows the appeal, the panel may refer any issue of policy which arises to the relevant committee of the Bar Standards Board¹⁰.

(C) APPEALS FROM DECISIONS OF SUMMARY HEARINGS AND DISCIPLINARY TRIBUNALS

1284. Right to appeal.

In cases where one or more charges of professional misconduct¹ have been proved in a summary hearing² or before a disciplinary tribunal³, an appeal may be lodged with the Visitors in accordance with the Hearings Before the Visitors Rules⁴. The defendant may appeal against the decision⁵, the sentence⁶, or both, while the Bar Standards Board may appeal where a case has been dismissed by, or against the sentence handed down by, a disciplinary tribunal⁷. In cases where no professional misconduct has been proved, but one or more charges of inadequate professional service have been, an appeal lies at the instance of the barrister from any such finding, and against any decision as to the remedy to be granted to the complainant for such service, in the same manner as an appeal lies from a finding of an adjudication panel in respect of the same matters⁸.

In cases where no professional misconduct has been proved, but the barrister has been found to have infringed one or more provisions of the Code of Conduct⁹ an appeal lies against that finding at the instance of the barrister in the manner prescribed in the Complaints Rules¹⁰. In cases where no professional misconduct has been proved but one or more charges of inadequate professional service have been proved and the barrister has been found to have infringed one or more provisions of the Code of Conduct¹¹ and the barrister wishes to appeal against both the finding of inadequate professional service and the finding that he has infringed such a provision, the appeal lies to the adjudication appeal panel¹².

Upon service on him of a notice of appeal¹ (whether or not served in time), the Lord Chief Justice must nominate a single judge of the High Court or the Court of Appeal (the 'directions judge'), who is not a bencher of the appellant's or defendant's (as the case may be) Inn², who:

- 1852 (1) may hold a hearing in order to determine how (if at all) he should exercise any of the functions conferred on him (the 'directions functions')³;
- 1853 (2) must consider the course of any appeal in relation to which he is appointed, and may at any time give such directions and take such steps as appear to him to be necessary or desirable for the purpose of securing the just, expeditious and economical disposal of the appeal⁴;
- 1854 (3) must, in the case of any appeal by the Bar Standards Board⁵ against the acquittal of the defendant, hold a directions hearing no later than 21 days after service of the notice of appeal⁶ and on that occasion he must determine whether the notice of appeal discloses a seriously arguable case that the disciplinary tribunal made an error of law which was material to its decision⁷;
- 1855 (4) may give directions and take steps relating (but not limited) to the anticipated duration of the hearing, the variation of any timetable specified in the Hearings Before the Visitors Rules, further procedural steps that should be taken before the hearing, the failure by either party to comply with any timetable specified in those Rules or directed by the directions judge, the adjournment of the hearing; and where the sentence of the original tribunal has been pronounced, whether it should be stayed pending the outcome of the appeal⁸;
- 1856 (5) may, on application made by the appellant (which must be served on the Board at the time of making the application if the Board is not the appellant) and after giving the Board the opportunity to respond to the application, vary or set aside an order suspending or withholding the issue of the appellant's practising certificate⁹;
- 1857 (6) may take steps in response to a party's failure to comply with any obligation imposed by, or timetable specified in, the Hearings Before the Visitors Rules, or directed by the directions judge in the exercise of his functions¹⁰; and
- 1858 (7) may direct that the sum required by the Disciplinary Tribunals Regulations or by the Summary Procedure Rules to defray the expenses of the appeal¹¹ is not payable¹².

There is no appeal against an order of the directions judge¹³.

- 1861 (3) the findings of the tribunal or hearing¹³;
- 1862 (4) the sentence¹⁴;
- 1863 (5) the grounds for appeal, including for each matter appealed against the specific evidence on each charge on which the appellant will place reliance¹⁵;
- 1864 (6) in the case of an appeal by the Board against an acquittal of the defendant on any charge, a concise statement of any errors of law which it is contended the disciplinary tribunal made and of why they were fundamental to its decision¹⁶;
- 1865 (7) the relief sought¹⁷; and
- 1866 (8) if the hearing is estimated to last longer than one day, an estimate of the time required for the hearing¹⁸.

If no petition is served within the specified period (or that period as extended), no further action may be taken in relation to the appeal unless the Lord Chief Justice directs otherwise¹⁹.

The Board or, if the Board is the appellant, the defendant may (or, if so directed by the directions judge, must) serve on the Lord Chief Justice an answer to the petition within the period of 28 days (or, in the case of an appeal by the Board against the acquittal of the defendant on any charge, 14 days) starting with the date on which the petition is served or such further time as may be allowed by the directions judge²⁰. The answer must follow the form of the petition and must state which points in the petition are accepted and which are rejected²¹.

3 Further time for the service of the petition may be allowed by the Lord Chief Justice or the directions judge by the Lord Chief Justice or the directions judge: See the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe M (The Hearings Before the Visitors Rules) r 7(1), (2), (4). 1288. Service of transcripts and other documents.

At the same time as serving the petition¹, the appellant must serve on the Lord Chief Justice a specified number of copies of the transcript of the proceedings before the tribunal whose decision is being appealed or, where the tribunal in question was a panel appointed to hear a summary matter, the statement of findings and sentence². Not less than 14 days before the date set for the hearing of an appeal, a copy of every document intended to be produced at the hearing by any party must be served by that party on every other party, and copies must be served on the Lord Chief Justice³.

The number of copies required to be served is, generally, three: see Annexe M (The Hearings Before the Visitors Rules) r 9(4). If any transcript is not available when the petition is served, the copies of that transcript must be served on the Lord Chief Justice as soon as practicable thereafter: Annexe M (The Hearings Before the Visitors Rules) r 9(2). 1289. Appointment of panel.

When a petition is served upon him¹ (whether or not served in time), the Lord Chief Justice must nominate the persons who are to hear the appeal². If the appeal is against a decision of a tribunal presided over by a judge of the High Court, it must be heard by a panel comprised of a judge of Court of Appeal³, a Queen's Counsel⁴, and a lay representative⁵. Any other appeal against a decision of a disciplinary tribunal must be heard by a panel comprised of a judge of the High Court, a barrister, and a lay representative⁶, although if the Lord Chief Justice or the directions judge⁷ directs that the appeal relates solely to a point of law and is appropriate to be heard by a judge sitting alone, it may be so heard⁸. Any other appeal must be heard by a judge of the High Court or the Court of Appeal⁹. No judge or barrister member of the panel may be a bencher of the appellant's or defendant's (as the case may be) Inn¹⁰. No person can be nominated to a panel if they are a member of the Complaints Committee (the 'Committee') or of the Bar Standards Board or any of its other committees or if they were a member of the Committee at any time when it was considering the matter being dealt with by the panel¹¹.

1290. Hearing the appeal.

The time allocated for the hearing of an appeal is generally one day¹. The Visitors may give directions, either before or during the hearing, with regard to the conduct of, and procedure at, a hearing of an appeal they consider appropriate².

A hearing must be held in public unless either party has made an application that the hearing should not be in public and the public interest does not require that it be held in public³, and may proceed in the absence of an appellant (or defendant) (but not in the absence of a representative of the Bar Standards Board)⁴. No witness may be called at the hearing without the Visitors' consent⁵, and evidence that was not before the tribunal or panel⁶ whose decision is being appealed may be given at the hearing only in exceptional circumstances and with the Visitors' consent⁷. An appellant or defendant may only challenge before the Visitors a decision of a court of law on which the decision was based in exceptional circumstances and with the Visitors' consent⁸.

The proceedings of the Visitors continue to be valid notwithstanding that one or more of the members of the panel⁹ becomes unable to continue or is or becomes disqualified from continuing to act, if the remaining members of the panel include a judge (other than a retired judge) and a lay representative¹⁰.

A full shorthand record of the hearing must be made¹¹.

1 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe M (The Hearings Before the Visitors Rules) r 12(1). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. The time allocated is one day unless it has been indicated either in the petition or answer that the time required for the hearing is likely to exceed one day (see PARA 1287): Annexe M (The Hearings Before the Visitors Rules) r 12(1). The appeal must be listed by the clerk to the Visitors for a hearing on the first available date after the expiry of a period of four weeks beginning with the date of service on the Lord Chief Justice of the answer (or, where no answer is served, beginning with the last date for service of the answer under Annexe M (The Hearings Before the Visitors Rules) r 11 (see PARA 1287)): Annexe M (The Hearings Before the Visitors Rules) r 12(2). As to the Lord Chief Justice see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 303; COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 515. In any case of an appeal by the Board against the acquittal of the defendant on any charge, the appeal must be listed by the clerk to the Visitors for a hearing in accordance with the directions given by the directions judge under Annexe M (The Hearings Before the Visitors Rules) r 5(4) (see PARA 1286), or such other period as the directions judge may subsequently direct: Annexe M (The Hearings Before the Visitors Rules) r 12(3). As to the meaning of 'Visitors' see PARA 1285 note 4. As to the directions judge see PARA 1286. 1291. Pronouncement of findings.

The Visitors must pronounce their findings in a single decision and may do so in public or private¹. In general, the Visitors may allow an appeal in whole or in part, confirm or vary an order of the tribunal or panel² whose decision is being appealed, or order a rehearing on such terms as they may deem appropriate in the circumstances³. However, in any case of an appeal by the Bar Standards Board⁴ against the acquittal of the defendant on any charge, they may: (1) dismiss the appeal; (2) allow it wholly or in part and remit the matter for a re-hearing before either the same or a differently constituted disciplinary tribunal; or (3) allow it wholly or in part and, if they are of the opinion that it is unnecessary or undesirable to direct a re-hearing before either the same or a differently constituted disciplinary tribunal, issue a declaration, but only where this will have no consequences whatsoever for the defendant⁵. In any case they must give reasons for their decision⁶; and may order, in the event of an appeal which is successful wholly or in part, a refund to the appellant of any relevant sum⁷.

The Visitors may make such order for costs, which may include an order for payment of the cost of any transcript required for the purposes of the appeal, as they consider appropriate⁸. Visitors' decisions are susceptible to judicial review⁹.

1292. Variation of requirements imposed by disciplinary tribunal.

Where, following disbarment¹, suspension², or prohibition from accepting or carrying out public access instructions³ a disciplinary tribunal⁴ has made a requirement relating to the holding or issuing of a barrister's practising certificate⁵ or imposing terms in respect of the barrister's continuing practice⁶, and the barrister considers that, due to a change in the circumstances, it would be appropriate for that requirement to be varied, he may apply in writing to the President of the Council of the Inns of Court for a variation to be made⁷. On receiving such an application the President must refer it to the Chairman and one of the lay representatives⁸ of the tribunal which originally imposed the requirement⁹, who may vary or confirm the requirement in relation to which the application has been made¹⁰.

(6) TERMS OF WORK AND REMUNERATION

(i) Terms of Work

1293. Contractual capacity.

There is no longer any rule of law which prevents a barrister from entering into a contract for the provision of his services as a barrister¹; nor is there any rule of professional conduct which prohibits barristers from entering into contracts or restricts their right to do so. Where a self-employed barrister² is instructed by a solicitor, however, no contract is ordinarily made³, and the barrister relies for payment of his proper fees on the solicitor's obligation to pay the fees as a matter of professional conduct⁴.

1 The former rule whereby a barrister was incapable as a matter of law from entering into such a contract was abolished by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 61(1).

2 As to self-employed barristers see PARA 1036.

3 As to the terms of work on which barristers offer their services to solicitors see PARA 1294.

4 As to this obligation see PARA 1297.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/4. BARRISTERS/(6) TERMS OF WORK AND REMUNERATION/(i) Terms of Work/1294. Terms of work authorised by the Bar Council.

1294. Terms of work authorised by the Bar Council.

The terms of work on which barristers offer their services to solicitors¹ are laid down by the Bar Standards Board². A solicitor who sends a brief or instructions³ to a barrister is deemed to instruct the barrister on the standard terms of work⁴, which are non-contractual and therefore not legally enforceable⁵, unless and to the extent that the barrister and solicitor have agreed in writing to be contractually bound or have agreed to exclude or vary the standard terms⁶. There is also a set of contractual terms⁷, which are intended to apply in cases where a barrister is instructed by a solicitor and the barrister and solicitor have agreed in writing that the barrister's retainer is to be contractually binding⁸. The standard contractual terms do not apply, however, to publicly funded work⁹, or to work undertaken on a conditional fee basis¹⁰, or in so far as they are expressly varied or excluded by written agreement between the barrister and the solicitor¹¹.

In either case, the terms of work only apply once the barrister has accepted the brief or instructions¹². A barrister is not deemed to have accepted a brief or instructions that have been delivered to him until he has had a reasonable opportunity to peruse them and, in the case of a brief, to agree a fee with the solicitor¹³.

A barrister accepts a brief or instructions upon the understanding that he must and will comply with the Code of Conduct of the Bar, that he will deal with the instructions as soon as he reasonably can in the ordinary course of his work, and that he may return the brief or instructions in accordance with the Code of Conduct, and, if he does, will incur no liability to the solicitor as a result of so doing¹⁴. Other than this, the terms of work are principally concerned with arrangements with regard to fees, which vary according to whether or not there is a contractual relationship with the solicitor¹⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'solicitor' see PARA 1063 note 14. For these purposes, 'solicitor', where the context admits, includes any solicitor liable for the fees: Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe G1 (The Terms of Work on which Barristers Offer their Services to Solicitors and the Withdrawal of Credit Scheme 1988) para 21(3); Annexe G2 (The Contractual Terms of Work on which Barristers Offer their Services to Solicitors 2001) para 15(iii). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

2 The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

3 As to the meanings of 'brief' and 'instructions' see PARA 1164 note 4 (definitions applied by the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe G1 (The Terms of Work on which Barristers Offer their Services to Solicitors and the Withdrawal of Credit Scheme 1988) para 21(2); Annexe G2 (The Contractual Terms of Work on which Barristers Offer their Services to Solicitors 2001) para 15(ii)).

4 The standard terms of work are contained in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe G1 (The Terms of Work on which Barristers Offer their Services to Solicitors and the Withdrawal of Credit Scheme 1988).

1295. No obligation other than between solicitor and barrister.

Under the standard terms of work on which barristers offer their services to solicitors¹, neither the sending by a solicitor² of a brief or instructions³ to a barrister, nor the acceptance by the barrister of a brief or instructions, nor anything done in connection therewith, nor the arrangements relating thereto, nor the terms of work themselves, nor any agreement or transaction entered into or payment made by or under them, is attended by or gives rise to any contractual relationship, rights, duties or consequences whatsoever or is legally enforceable by or against, or may be the subject of litigation with, either the barrister or the Bar Standards Board⁴.

Under the standard contractual terms of work⁵, the same exclusion of any legal relationship applies as regards the Board though not as between the solicitor and barrister⁶.

1 The terms are contained in the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) Annexe G1 (The Terms of Work on which Barristers Offer their Services to Solicitors and the Withdrawal of Credit Scheme 1988): see PARA 1294. As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150.

A. RIGHT TO CHARGE AND RECOVER FEES

1296. Right to charge fees for work undertaken.

A self-employed barrister¹ may charge for any work undertaken by him, whether or not it involves an appearance in court², on any basis or by any method he thinks fit, provided that such basis or method is permitted by law³ and does not involve the payment of a wage or salary⁴. This right is subject, however, to the provisions of the Code of Conduct of the Bar concerned with maintaining a barrister's independence⁵.

3 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 405(a). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. In relation to international work substantially performed outside England and Wales, these provisions apply on the basis that the applicable law is that of the place where the work is performed: Annexe A (The International Practice Rules) r 4(c). As to international work see PARA 1164.

4 Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 405(b). The exception arises where a barrister is employed by a legal advice centre; a barrister so employed may not in any circumstances receive either directly or indirectly any fee or reward for the supply of any legal services to any client of the centre other than a salary paid by the centre: para 807(a). A barrister so employed must also ensure that any fees in respect of legal services supplied by him to any client of the centre accrue and are paid to the centre (para 807(b)), and must not have any financial interest in the centre (para 807(c)). As to the meaning of 'legal advice centre' see PARA 1161 note 20. As to the meaning of 'legal services' see PARA 1152. 1297. Solicitors' liability for fees.

By established custom of the profession, a barrister looks for payment of his fees to the solicitor who instructs him and not to the lay client¹. In any case where a barrister accepts a brief or instructions² from a solicitor³ in his capacity as a director, partner, member, employee, consultant, associate or agent of a company, firm or other body⁴, the solicitor warrants that he is authorised by his company, firm or other body to instruct the barrister⁵, and the obligations of the solicitor under the terms of work⁶ (including in particular his responsibility for the payment of the barrister's fees) are the joint and several obligations of him and that company, firm or other body⁷.

Fees must be as agreed between the barrister and the solicitor before the barrister commences work under the brief or instructions⁸. In default of such agreement, the fees chargeable in any case must be a reasonable professional rate for the barrister instructed⁹. Unless a barrister and solicitor have agreed in advance that the barrister's retainer is to be contractually binding¹⁰, they may make such written agreement or arrangement between them as they think fit regarding the time or times, whether at the time of delivery of the brief or instructions or subsequently or otherwise, at which the barrister's fees are to be paid, and the solicitor must pay the barrister's fees accordingly¹¹.

In general, the jurisdiction which the court exercises over solicitors will not be used for the purpose of compelling a solicitor to pay counsel's fees even when the solicitor has received them from the lay client¹².

Under the standard terms of work on which barristers offer their services to solicitors¹, unless a barrister and solicitor² have agreed in advance that the barrister's retainer is to be contractually binding³, the barrister may require his fees to be agreed and paid before he accepts the brief or instructions⁴ to which the fees relate⁵; and, if the fees are payable by a solicitor who is subject to a Withdrawal of Credit Direction⁶, the barrister must require his fees to be so agreed and paid in advance⁷.

A barrister must submit an itemised fee note not later than three months after the work to which the fee note relates has been done or at the conclusion of the matter in which he has been briefed or instructed¹, whichever is the sooner². It is the duty of the head of chambers⁶ or any barrister who is responsible in whole or in part for the administration of chambers⁷ to take reasonable steps to ensure that fee notes in respect of all work undertaken by all members of chambers and pupils and (unless expressly agreed with the individual) former members and pupils of chambers are sent expeditiously to clients⁸ and, in the event of non-payment within a reasonable time, pursued efficiently⁹.

In the case of publicly funded work¹, the solicitor² and barrister must both take such steps as it may be open to each of them to take for the purpose of obtaining payment of the barrister's fees as soon as reasonably practicable³. The solicitor must as soon as reasonably practicable comply with a request by the barrister for information by notifying him of the date of issue and number, and supplying him with copies of, any relevant public funding certificates, by notifying him of the date of any order for assessment of costs under the relevant certificate or other event giving rise to a right to such assessment, and by informing him of the steps taken by him pursuant to his duty to take steps for the purpose of obtaining payment of the barrister's fees⁴. The barrister must then, unless such information and an explanation for non-payment satisfactory to him is thereupon received from the solicitor, report the facts to the Chair of the Bar Standards Board⁵.

Where fees for work are to be paid out of a fund but cannot be so paid without an order of the court, the barrister's fees are payable one month after the making of the order required for the payment of such fees out of the fund¹. The solicitor² must, however, use his best endeavours to obtain such order or orders as may be requisite to enable payment of the fees to be made as soon as reasonably practicable³, and must as soon as reasonably practicable comply with a request by the barrister for information by informing the barrister of the steps taken by him pursuant to this duty⁴; and if he fails to satisfy either of these obligations, the fees will be payable forthwith and the amount outstanding from time to time will carry simple interest at the stipulated rate⁵ from one month after the date of the reminder letter⁶ until payment⁷.

Unless the barrister and solicitor¹ have agreed in advance that the barrister's retainer is to be contractually binding², or have made a written agreement or arrangement between them regarding the time or times at which the barrister's fees are to be paid³, or the solicitor challenges the fees⁴, the barrister's fees must be paid by the solicitor within one month after the fee note relating to it has been sent to the solicitor⁵, whether or not the solicitor has been placed in funds by his client and whether or not the case is still continuing⁶. Fees not paid in full in accordance with these requirements carry simple interest at the stipulated rate⁷ from one month after the date of the reminder letter⁸ until payment, provided the letter includes a statement to that effect⁹.

1304. Procedure for recovery of fees.

Where fees remain unpaid after the expiration of one month after the first fee note¹ has been sent, a barrister may send a reminder letter to the solicitor². He may send a further reminder if an explanation for non-payment satisfactory to the barrister has not been received at the expiration of three months after the sending of the first fee note³, and unless an explanation for non-payment satisfactory to the barrister is thereupon received, he must report the facts to the Chair of the Bar Standards Board⁴.

These provisions are subject to any written agreement or arrangement between the barrister and solicitor regarding the time or times at which the barrister's fees are to be paid⁵ and, if the barrister and solicitor have agreed in advance that the barrister's retainer is to be contractually binding, are without prejudice to any other remedy open to the barrister to recover the fees⁶.

RIGHT TO CHARGE AND RECOVER FEES/1305. Recovery of fees where there is no contractual relationship with client.

1305. Recovery of fees where there is no contractual relationship with client.

If there is no advance agreement between a barrister and a solicitor that the barrister's retainer is to be contractually binding¹, there is no contractual relationship between a barrister and either his instructing solicitor² or the lay client³ upon which a claim may be brought to recover fees⁴. A barrister is entitled to refuse to accept a brief if the fee is not paid on delivery; but, if he does not insist on the payment of the fee when the brief is delivered, he has no remedy in the event of subsequent non-payment⁵. In the absence of an explicit contractual agreement, even an express promise by the client to pay fees to a barrister, whether made before, during, or after litigation, has no binding effect, and the relation of barrister and client renders the parties incapable as a matter of law of making any legal contract of hiring and service concerning litigation⁶.

⁴ The remuneration of a barrister used to be classed as honorarium, rather than merces, which means that fees are said to be payable as a matter of honour only, and not as a matter of legal obligation. The honorarium doctrine was imported from classical Roman Law, which forbade advocates and professors of law from accepting hire for their services (Lex Cincia c 204 BC). The earliest known exposition of the doctrine in English law is found in Davies' Reports, Preface (1615). See also Thornhill v Evans (1742) 2 Atk 330 at 332; Co Litt 295a; 3 Bl Com 28; and see generally Baker 'Counsellors and Barristers: an Historical Study' (1969) 27 CLJ 205. In former times when barristers' fees were usually paid in advance, the honorarium doctrine prevented the client from recovering the fee for a failure of consideration, as, for instance, where the barrister, having accepted a brief in a case, failed to attend at the trial (see Turner v Philipps (1792) Peake 166).

The rule which prevents a barrister from suing for fees where he has not made a contractual agreement with his client is not confined to litigation, but extends to all work which falls within the ordinary scope of a barrister's practice: Mostyn v Mostyn (1870) 5 Ch App 457; and see also R v Dautre (1884) 9 App Cas 745, PC. The rule applies even when the solicitor has received funds from the client: Re Sandiford (No 2), Italo-Canadian Corp'n Ltd v Sandiford [1935] Ch 681 (counsel has no right to prove for his fees in the administration of a deceased solicitor's insolvent estate, even where the solicitor, having falsely represented that he has paid the fees, has received the money from the lay client). Fees which have been received by a firm of solicitors but not paid over to counsel may not be attached or garnisheed as a debt: Wells v Wells [1914] P 157, CA.

solicitor from recovering the money from the client, subject to assessment of his bill of costs: Morris v Hunt (1819) 1 Chit 544; Hobart v Butler at 166; Medlicott v Emery (1933) 149 LT 303. A solicitor has no right to recover counsel's fees from the client, however, until they have been paid: Re Taxation of Costs, Re a Solicitor [1936] 1 KB 523, [1936] 1 All ER 491, CA. The inability of barristers to sue for their fees in the absence of contractual arrangements does not disentitle a successful litigant to whom costs have been awarded from recovering barristers' fees, if allowed on assessment, from the other party: Morris v Hunt.

1306. Challenges.

Any challenge by a solicitor¹ to a barrister's fee (whether giving rise to an issue of competence or a dispute on quantum or otherwise) must be made by the solicitor in writing within three months after the first fee note relating to that fee has been sent to him² or within one month after the reminder letter³ has been sent to him, whichever is the later⁴. No challenge will be accepted unless this requirement is complied with and the solicitor has, within 14 days of being requested to do so, agreed in writing to submit the issue or dispute giving rise to the challenge to the decision of an appropriately constituted tribunal⁵ and to abide by and forthwith give effect to that decision⁶.

The members of a tribunal to which a challenge is referred must act as experts and not as arbitrators, and the decision of the tribunal is conclusive, final and binding for all purposes upon the solicitor and the barrister⁷. No payment need be made in respect of the fees (unless the tribunal orders an interim payment) until the tribunal has made its decision and communicated it to the parties⁸.

If the tribunal determines that any sum is payable in respect of the fees, the standard non-payment provisions⁹ apply to that sum as if it had become payable when it would have become payable if no challenge had been made, and the tribunal must also determine the amount payable in respect of interest¹⁰.

1307. Withdrawal of Credit Directions.

A Withdrawal of Credit Direction is a direction that no barrister may without the written consent of the Chair of the Bar Standards Board¹ knowingly accept instructions² from any person or firm named in such direction or from any person who or firm which is or has at any time since the direction was issued been a connected person³ unless his fees are to be paid directly by the Legal Services Commission⁴ or such instructions are accompanied by payment of an agreed fee for such work or unless he agrees in advance to accept no fee for such work⁵. The Chair may make such a direction if:

- 1867 (1) he has sent a letter to the person or firm in question concerning the non-payment of barristers' fees and has received no satisfactory explanation for the non-payment⁶;
- 1868 (2) any fees referred to in such a letter which are in the opinion of the Chair properly payable remain unpaid⁷ or, in the event that all such fees have been paid, not more than 12 months have elapsed since payment⁸; or
- 1869 (3) circumstances have arisen in which the Chair would otherwise have occasion to send to any person liable for the fees or to any connected person a further reminder letter⁹.

1 Consent may be sought urgently in exceptional cases, and may be granted by any person to whom the Chair has delegated responsibility: Annexe G1 (The Terms of Work on which Barristers Offer their Services to Solicitors and the Withdrawal of Credit Scheme 1988) para 21(9); Annexe G2 (The Contractual Terms of Work on which Barristers Offer their Services to Solicitors 2001) para 15(viii). The Code of Conduct refers to the Bar Council (see PARA 1042 note 1). However in practice the body currently responsible for the regulation of barristers is the Bar Standards Board (see PARA 1049).

1308. Issue and revocation of Withdrawal of Credit Directions.

In any case in which the Chair of the Bar Standards Board¹ is entitled to issue a Withdrawal of Credit Direction² he must write to such person or persons (as the case may be) to the effect that he will make such a direction unless written representations received by him within 14 days after the date of such letter or within such extended period as he may allow justify an exceptional departure from this process³. Unless persuaded by such representations, and after consultation with the Law Society, the Chair may then issue the direction, whether or not any fees remain unpaid⁴.

Any notified solicitor⁵ and any barrister may at any time after the expiration of six months after the name of any person or firm was first included in the list of persons named in Withdrawal of Credit Directions⁶ seek the revocation of any relevant direction and the amendment of the list; and the Chair is empowered (but not obliged) to accede to such application upon such terms as he considers appropriate⁷.

1309. Conditional fee agreements and litigation funding agreements.

A barrister is entitled, though not obliged, to accept instructions¹ requiring him to work under a conditional fee agreement, that is, an agreement which provides for his fees and expenses, or any part of them, to be payable only in specified circumstances, and which may provide for a success fee². As from a day to be appointed, a barrister is also entitled to accept work under a litigation funding agreement; that is, an agreement under which a person agrees to fund, in whole or in part, the provision of advocacy or litigation services by someone other than the funder to another person, who agrees to pay a sum to the funder in specified circumstances³.

1 As to the giving and acceptance of instructions see PARAS 1173-1199.

2 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(2)(a) (s 58 substituted by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 27(1)); and the Code of Conduct of the Bar of England and Wales (8th Edn, 2004) para 604(c). As to the Code of Conduct see PARA 1150. A conditional fee agreement provides for a success fee if it provides for the amount of any fees to which it applies to be increased, in specified circumstances, above the amount which would be payable if it were not payable only in specified circumstances: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(2)(b) (as so substituted). 1310. Fees in respect of work done by other barristers.

A self-employed barrister¹ who receives fees in respect of work done by another barrister must himself and without delegating the responsibility to anyone else pay forthwith the whole of the fee in respect of that work to that other barrister². A self-employed barrister who arranges for another barrister to undertake work for him (other than a pupil or a person who has asked to do the work in order to increase his own skill or experience) must himself and without delegating the responsibility to anyone else pay proper financial remuneration for the work done and make payment within a reasonable time and in any event within three months after the work has been done unless otherwise agreed in advance with the other barrister³.

Fees paid to a barrister customarily include fees to which his clerk is entitled, and which may be recovered from the barrister by the clerk in a claim for money had and received¹. The clerk has no legal right to demand any fee or remuneration from the barrister's clients².

1312. Duty to keep records.

A barrister must ensure that adequate records supporting the fees charged or claimed in a case are kept at least until his fees have been paid, any taxation, determination or assessment of costs in the case has been completed, or the time for lodging an appeal against assessment or the determination of that appeal has expired, whichever is the last-happening event¹. A barrister must provide his professional client², licensed access client³ or other intermediary⁴ or lay client⁵ with such records or details of the work done as may reasonably be required⁶.

B. ASSESSMENT OF FEES

1313. When barristers' fees will be assessed.

A barrister's fees may fall to be assessed on an assessment of the costs payable to a party to litigation¹, on an assessment of the costs payable to the barrister's instructing solicitor by his client, or on an assessment of the fees payable to the barrister in a publicly funded case.

A barrister's fees which have been incurred by his instructing a solicitor or other professional client² on behalf of the lay client in the course of litigation become part of the costs of the claim; and if the client on whose behalf such fees have been incurred is awarded costs, he may recover the fees, to the extent allowed on assessment, from the party against whom costs have been awarded³. Whether or not so recoverable from another party, a barrister's fees incurred by a solicitor on behalf of a client may be recovered by the solicitor from the client, subject to the client's right to have the solicitor's bill assessed⁴.

On assessment between solicitor and client costs are in general⁵ assessed on the indemnity basis⁶, subject to certain presumptions: costs, including counsel's fees, are presumed to have been reasonably incurred if they were incurred with the express or implied approval of the client⁷, and to have been reasonable in amount if the amount has been expressly or impliedly approved by the client⁸; costs are presumed to have been unreasonably incurred if they are of an unusual nature or amount and the solicitor did not tell his client that as a result he might not recover all of them from the other party⁹. Such unusual costs include the costs of employing a third counsel¹⁰. On assessment between solicitor and client, counsel's fees which were not paid before the bill was delivered, but which are paid before the assessment is completed, will be allowable only if they were described in the bill as not then paid¹¹. If this has not been done, the court has a discretion whether to allow the solicitor to withdraw the bill and deliver a fresh one so that the fees paid may be recovered¹².

1 A barrister who is himself a party to litigation may recover by way of costs remuneration for work done which required the application of his training, skills and professional experience, but not for his attendance at any hearing or conference: see Khan v Lord Chancellor [2003] EWHC 12 (QB), [2003] 2 All ER 367, [2003] 1 WLR 2385. Provided it was reasonable for the work to be done and the cost was reasonable and proportionate¹ fees will be allowed on assessment for work done by counsel in settling claim forms, statements of cases, affidavits, skeleton arguments², notices of appeal settling orders and other documents³, advising on merits or evidence, conferences and consultations⁴, a 'view' of the locus in quo⁵, and the cost of counsel attending on a commission to take evidence abroad⁶.

1315. Brief fees.

On assessment of costs there is no precise standard of measurement of the necessary and proper brief fee to be allowed to counsel for all cases: what fee a hypothetical counsel, capable of conducting the case effectively but unable or unwilling to insist on the high fees sometimes demanded by counsel of pre-eminent reputation, would be content to take upon the brief, should be estimated¹. The brief fee covers all the work done by way of preparation for representation at the hearing and attendance on the first day of the hearing², and includes remuneration for taking a note of the judgment of the court³.

The higher fees of leading rather than junior counsel will be allowed where it was reasonable to instruct leading counsel⁴. A special fee paid to counsel to obtain his services in a particular court ought never to be allowed⁵. It is wrong, however, to reduce the fee allowed for counsel based in London in respect of a case heard out of London on the ground that there are a small number of locally based counsel who would have charged less⁶. Additional fees to those originally marked on the brief may be allowed, however, if further material is sent to counsel⁷, or if the expected nature of the hearing changes, for example, if opposition is anticipated to a motion which was originally expected to be unopposed⁸, or if written submissions are required in a complex or exceptional case⁹. The cost of a brief to counsel may be allowed even if counsel did not actually attend the trial¹⁰, or if the case is settled before trial, provided the brief was not prematurely delivered¹¹.

Although counsel is prima facie entitled to the same fee in the Court of Appeal as in the court below, this is a rule to which there may be many exceptions¹².

1316. Number of counsel.

The number of counsel allowed on assessment of the costs of any hearing is in general a matter of discretion, although provided it was reasonable and proportionate to instruct two or more counsel, those costs are likely to be allowed on a detailed assessment¹.

Prior to the coming into force of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')², the following factors applied to the question of whether more than one counsel's fees would be allowed on an assessment of costs, and it is likely that a costs judge will apply the same principles:

- 1870 (1) the fact that a petition was unopposed³, or that counsel appeared for a neutral party⁴, was not of itself sufficient reason for disallowing the costs of two counsel;
- 1871 (2) on the hearing of a claim, the briefing of leading counsel was desirable if it was a difficult case or involved large sums of money⁵.
- 1872 (3) the costs of two counsel briefed for a trial were generally allowed⁶. Both may be junior counsel⁷. Generally the costs of only one counsel would be allowed on a reference to arbitration, but there was no inflexible rule to this effect⁸;
- 1873 (4) as a general rule the costs of no more than two counsel were allowed in respect of any hearing⁹, unless it was shown to have been essentially necessary for the purpose of doing justice between the parties at the hearing that three counsel should have been employed or unless the case was one in which a reasonable and prudent man, acting with ordinary prudence, would not have ventured to come into court without three counsel¹⁰;
- 1874 (5) special circumstances that may justify the employment of three counsel included the unusual complication and difficulty of the case, the length of the hearing, the number of witnesses and volume of documents, the amount of money involved and the importance of the case to the community¹¹;
- 1875 (6) the fact that the junior counsel originally instructed in the case was appointed Queen's Counsel before the hearing was not a sufficient reason for allowing the fees of a third counsel¹²; nor is compliance with a circuit rule¹³; nor uncertainty as to whether one of the counsel originally briefed would be able to attend the trial¹⁴; nor the fact that counsel appeared for several parties sharing a common case¹⁵; nor the number of counsel employed by the other side¹⁶; nor, in the House of Lords, the fact that the Court of Appeal certified the case as fit for three counsel¹⁷;
- 1876 (7) in an appropriate case the court may certify at the end of a hearing that it was fit for three counsel¹⁸.

(iii) Liability to Tax

1317. Liability to income tax.

A barrister is charged to income tax under Case II of Schedule D in respect of annual profits or gains arising or accruing to him from his profession¹. No sum may be deducted in respect of any disbursements or expenses, not being money wholly and exclusively paid out or expended by a barrister for the purposes of his profession². In determining whether expenses have been incurred exclusively for professional purposes, regard must be had to the object of the expenditure and not just to its effect; but the barrister's conscious motive at the time when the expenditure is incurred, whilst of great significance, is not necessarily conclusive³. A barrister working partly in chambers and partly at home cannot deduct expenses incurred in travelling between those two places⁴.

1318. Liability to value added tax.

As persons supplying professional services, barristers are subject to value added tax¹. Barristers whose gross receipts exceed a specified sum per annum² are required to register with the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs³, and to pay value added tax at the rate of 17.5 per cent on the value of professional services rendered⁴. For this purpose, a barrister is treated as supplying his services when the fee for those services is received or a VAT notice is issued, whichever is the earlier⁵.

(1) INTRODUCTION

(i) In general

1319. In general.

Provision is made in Part II of the Administration of Justice Act 1985¹ for the purpose of regulating the provision of conveyancing services² by persons who hold licences³ in force under that Act⁴. The statutory restriction⁵ on a person preparing certain instruments when not qualified to act as a solicitor does not apply to any act done by a licensed conveyancer in the course of the provision of any conveyancing services if he is not precluded⁶ from providing those services as a licensed conveyancer⁷.

An individual⁸ must not describe himself or hold himself out as a licensed conveyancer unless he holds such a licence so in force⁹.

With regard to conveyancing services¹⁰, provision is also made in the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990¹¹ for the establishment of the Authorised Conveyancing Practitioners Board¹² and for the making of regulations about the competence and conduct of authorised practitioners¹³. At the date at which this volume states the law, however, the board had not been set up and no such regulations had been made¹⁴.

1 See the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Pt II (ss 11-39); and PARA 1320 et seq.

2 References in the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Pt II to conveyancing services are references to the preparation of transfers, conveyances, contracts and other documents in connection with, and other services ancillary to, the disposition or acquisition of estates or interests in land: ss 11(3), 39(1). For these purposes, 'disposition' does not include a testamentary disposition or any disposition in the case of a short lease within the Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(2) (see LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 101); but, subject to that, includes in the case of leases both their grant and their assignment; and 'acquisition' has a corresponding meaning: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 11(3)(a), (b).

As from a day to be appointed the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 11(3) is substituted, and s 11(3A) is added by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 para 1, 2(b) so that references to conveyancing services also include references to any other activities which are reserved instrument activities for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007 (see s 12, Sch 2; and PARA 512). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 For these purposes, 'licence' means a licence to practise as a licensed conveyancer; and 'licensed conveyancer' means a person who holds a licence in force under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Pt II: ss 11(2), 39(1). References to practising as a licensed conveyancer are references to providing, as the holder of a licence, conveyancing services in accordance with the licence: s 11(2).

4 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 11(1). As from a day to be appointed the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 11(1) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 2(a) so that provision is made for conveyancing services and other services by persons who hold licences in force under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Pt II or who are recognised bodies. As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 1392 note 14. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

During the transitional period, every conveyancing partnership (ie a partnership at least some of the members of which are licensed conveyancers) and every body recognised under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 32 (see PARA 1392) is deemed to be authorised by the Council to carry on conveyancing services: Legal Services

Act 2007 Sch 5 para 11(3)(a), (5). This authority is exercisable in accordance with and subject to, in the case of a recognised body, any condition subject to which its recognition has effect, and the regulatory arrangements of the Council: Sch 5 para 11(4). For these purposes a conveyancing licence is to be treated as not in force during any period when it is suspended: Sch 5 para 11(6).

As to the meaning of 'reserved instrument activities' see PARA 512 note 5. As to the meaning of 'probate activities' see PARA 512 note 6. As the meaning of 'transitional period' for these purposes see PARA 516 note 9. As to recognised bodies see PARA 1392 et seq.

5 le under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 22(1): see PARA 595.

6 le precluded by any conditions imposed as mentioned in the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 16(3)(a) (see PARA 1330): s 11(4). See note 7.

7 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 11(4). As from a day to be appointed s 11(4) is repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 182, 210, Sch 17 Pt 1, para 1, 2(c), Sch 23. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 'Individual' presumably excludes bodies of persons corporate or unincorporate; cf the definition of 'person' in the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1382); and Whitney v IRC [1926] AC 37 at 43, HL, per Viscount Cave LC.

10 As to the meaning of 'conveyancing services' for these purposes see PARA 495 note 5.

11 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 ss 34-52 (ss 46A, 46B added by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 278(1), Sch 25 para 23(1), (4)). Sections 34, 35, 40 came into force on 1 April 1991 (see the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 (Commencement No 3) Order 1991, SI 1991/608) but no provision had been made thereunder at the date at which this volume states the law. At the date at which this volume states the law, ss 36-39, 41-52 had not been brought into force.

As from a day to be appointed the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 ss 34-52 are repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 208(1), 210, Sch 21 paras 83, 87, Sch 23. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

12 As to the prospective establishment of the board see the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 34; and as to the prospective functions of the board see s 35. No such board had, however, been established at the date at which this volume states the law. See note 11.

13 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 40. See also note 11. As to the meaning of 'authorised practitioner' see PARA 424 note 6.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) The Council for Licensed Conveyancers/1320. Establishment and membership.

(ii) The Council for Licensed Conveyancers

1320. Establishment and membership.

A body is established to be known as the Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹. It is the general duty of the Council to ensure that the standards of competence and professional conduct among persons who practise as licensed conveyancers² are sufficient to secure adequate protection for consumers, and that the conveyancing services³ provided by such persons are provided both economically and efficiently⁴.

The Council is a body corporate⁵ and must consist of not more than 11 persons who are licensed conveyancers⁶, and not more than ten persons who are not licensed conveyancers⁷, in each case being persons elected or nominated as members of the Council in accordance with a scheme prepared in accordance with the relevant statutory provisions⁸ and approved by the Secretary of State⁹. The Council must, in accordance with any such scheme, elect one of its members to be chairman of the Council¹⁰. The Council has power to pay to the members of the Council or any of its committees such fees for attendance and such travelling, subsistence or other allowances as the Council may determine¹¹.

As from 20 January 2004 the Council consists of up to 11 licensed conveyancers¹² and up to ten persons who are not licensed conveyancers¹³ provided that the number of the former exceeds by one the number of the latter, save where a vacancy occurs¹⁴. All members of the Council (including the outgoing chairman) are eligible for election as chairman or deputy chairman¹⁵.

A vacancy automatically occurs in the office of a member of the Council and his right to hold office ceases immediately:

- 1877 (1) on his death¹⁶;
 - 1878 (2) on receipt by the Council of his resignation in writing¹⁷;
 - 1879 (3) on the expiration of his term of office¹⁸;
 - 1880 (4) if, without the consent of the Council given in advance, he fails to attend more than three consecutive meetings of the Council or of any committee of which he is a member¹⁹;
 - 1881 (5) if he is convicted of any relevant criminal offence²⁰;
 - 1882 (7) if he is adjudged bankrupt or makes a composition or arrangement with his creditors²¹;
 - 1883 (8) if he is a person to whom the relevant provisions with regard to mental capacity apply²²;
 - 1884 (9) if, being a licensed conveyancer member:
- 33
- 22. (a) he ceases to hold a licence²³;
 - 23. (b) he is made the subject of a disciplinary order²⁴;
 - 24. (c) his licence is suspended²⁵;
 - 25. (d) the Council's powers of intervention are exercised against him or his practice²⁶;
- 34
- 1885 (10) as a member of another profession an order has been made against him by his professional body²⁷;

- 1886 (11) if, being a nominated member, the body that nominated him withdraws the nomination²⁸;
- 1887 (12) if he is or becomes an employee, self-employed officer or general consultant of any organisation having as its main object the protection or promotion of licensed conveyancers or the defence of its members²⁹;
- 1888 (13) if he has failed to disclose to the Council any relevant matter pertaining to disqualification³⁰;
- 1889 (14) if he is removed from office³¹.

In the event that such a vacancy occurs the chairman of the Council must inform each member of the Council as soon as possible, and the fact must be noted at the next meeting of the Council³². Retiring members of the Council are available for re-election or nomination³³.

The term of office of a person filling a vacancy in the office of a member of the Council is three years if the vacancy arose on the expiration of a term of office, or, if the vacancy arose by virtue of the reasons listed above³⁴, then for the remainder of the term which would have been served by the previous member had the vacancy not occurred³⁵.

A member is suspended with immediate effect if he is charged with a relevant offence³⁶; served with a bankruptcy petition (or issues one on his own behalf)³⁷; or receives notice of a relevant application against him³⁸. Any such suspension must be automatically revoked if no conviction ensues, the petition is disposed of, or the application is withdrawn or dismissed³⁹.

The Council may declare a vacancy in the office of a Council member who has breached the Standing Orders of the Council, the Standing Orders for Committees or the Code of Conduct for Members of the Council For Licensed Conveyancers⁴⁰, if at least three-quarters of the Council members are present at the relevant meeting and at least three-quarters of the members present agree in which event the Council members right to hold office ceases immediately⁴¹.

6 Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 3 para 2(1)(a).

7 Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 3 para 2(1)(b).

8 In accordance with a scheme under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 3 para 4 (see note 9): Sch 3 para 2(1).

9 Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 3 paras 2(1), 4(3). As from a day to be appointed Sch 3 paras 2(1), 4(3) are amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 29(1), (3), (8) so that the committee members are appointed rather than elected or nominated, and approval of the scheme lies with the Legal Services Board. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Legal Services Board see PARA 303 et seq.

Schedule 3 para 2 did not apply during the initial period, ie the period beginning with the establishment of the Council and ending immediately before the date fixed by the first scheme under Sch 3 para 4 for the coming into office of the first persons elected or nominated as members of the Council in accordance with the scheme: Sch 3 paras 2(3), 3(2) (as from a day to be appointed Sch 3 paras 2(3), 3 are repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 182, 210, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 29(1), (4), (5), Sch 23. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed). During that period the Council consisted of a chairman and not more than ten other members appointed by the Lord Chancellor: Sch 3 para 3(1) (as so prospectively repealed). The term of office of the chairman so appointed expired immediately before the date fixed by the first scheme for the coming into office of the first chairman elected under Sch 3 para 2(2) (see the text to note 10); and the terms of office of the other persons so appointed expired at the end of the initial period: Sch 3 para 3(3) (as so prospectively repealed). The Council was established on 12 March 1986 (see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 (Commencement No 1) Order 1986, SI 1986/364); and the first scheme was dated 9 February 1988: see the Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Regulations for Election and Nomination of Council Members (9 February 1988) (revoked).

The Council is under a duty to prepare a scheme making provision as to (1) the election or nomination of persons for the purposes of the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 3 para 2(1)(a), (b); (2) the election of a person as chairman under Sch 3 para 2(2); and (3) the tenure and vacation of office of persons so elected or nominated, and the eligibility of persons for election or nomination: Sch 3 para 4(1). Such a scheme must secure that, except during any casual vacancy (a) the total number of persons elected or nominated for the purposes of Sch 3 para 2(1)(a) exceeds by one the total number of persons elected or nominated for the purposes of Sch 3 para 2(1)(b); and (b) the persons elected or nominated for the purposes of Sch 3 para 2(1)(b) include at least two persons who represent the interests of consumers: Sch 3 para 4(2). The first such scheme was to be submitted to the Lord Chancellor for approval before the end of the period of two years beginning with the establishment of the Council: Sch 3 para 4(3). No such scheme may come into force without the Secretary of State's approval; and he may approve a scheme either as submitted to him or subject to such modifications as he thinks fit: Sch 3 para 4(3), (4) (both amended by the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs Order 2003, SI 2003/1887, art 9, Sch 2 para 6(b)). Where he proposes to approve a scheme subject to modifications he must notify the modifications to the Council and consider any observations of the Council on them: Sch 3 para 4(4) (amended by the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs Order 2003 SI 2003/1887, art 9, Sch 2 para 6(b)). Such a scheme may be varied or revoked by any subsequent such scheme: Sch 3 para 4(5). The scheme currently in force is the Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Regulations for Election and Nomination of Council Members 2004 (28 January 2004): see the text to notes 12-33.

As from a day to be appointed Sch 3 para 4 is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17, Pt 1, paras 1, 29 so that the committee members are appointed rather than elected or nominated, and functions currently exercised by the Secretary of State lie with the Legal Services Board. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As to transitional provisions see the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 22 para 6.

Regulations and rules made by the Council are specifically expressed to apply to male and female persons and use 'he or she', 'his or her' and 'him or her' throughout. In this part of this title, however, where such regulations and rules are set out, 'he', 'his' and 'him' are used and are taken as including 'she' and 'her', on the same principle as that applied to statutes by the Interpretation Act 1978 s 6(a), (b): see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1388.

10 Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 3 para 2(2). As from a day to be appointed Sch 3 para 2(2) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17, Pt 1, paras 1, 29(1), (3) so that the Council appoints rather than elects one of its members to the chair. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As to the expenses of the Council see PARA 1324; and as to the delegation of the Council's powers to committees or to members of its staff see PARA 1323. The power to make schemes under Sch 3 para 4 may not be delegated: see PARA 1323 text and note 2.

1322 Incidental powers and proceedings of the Council

NOTE 4--Day appointed is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) The Council for Licensed Conveyancers/1323. Delegation of powers.

1323. Delegation of powers.

Until a day to be appointed, and subject to any provision to the contrary made by or under any enactment, the Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ may arrange for any of its functions, other than those of making rules, schemes or standing orders under Part II of the Administration of Justice Act 1985² to be discharged by a committee of the Council, or by a member of the Council's staff³. As from that day the Council may arrange for any of its functions, other than those of making rules, schemes or standing orders under Part II of the Administration of Justice Act 1985 to be discharged by a committee of the Council, or by a sub-committee of such a committee, or by an individual (whether or not a member of the Council's staff)⁴. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

The Council may make rules⁵:

- 1890 (1) providing for functions conferred⁶ on any committee established under those provisions⁷ to be discharged by a committee established under these provisions⁸;
- 1891 (2) providing for any of its committees⁹ to refer any matter of a kind specified in the rules, in such circumstances as may be so specified, to any other such committee, or to the Council¹⁰.

Until a day to be appointed the number of members of a committee established under the above provisions, and the terms on which they are to hold and vacate office, are to be fixed by the Council¹¹. Such a committee may include persons who are not members of the Council, whether licensed conveyancers¹² or not, but a majority of the members of any such committee, including the chairman, are to be members of the Council¹³.

As from that day a committee or sub-committee established under the above provisions may include or consist of individuals other than members of the Council, or licensed conveyancers¹⁴. A sub-committee may also include or consist of individuals other than members of the committee¹⁵. The Council may make arrangements for the appointment and removal of members of any committee to be made other than by the Council¹⁶. A committee or sub-committee may regulate its own procedure, including quorum¹⁷. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

The validity of any proceedings of such a committee is not affected by any casual vacancy among its members¹⁸.

As from a day to be appointed the above provisions are subject to any contrary provision made by or under any enactment¹⁹. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Where by virtue of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 12(1) (as so prospectively amended) any function may be discharged by a committee, the committee may arrange for the discharge of that function by a sub-committee of that committee, or an individual, whether or not a member of the Council's staff, and subject to any contrary direction given by the Council: Sch 8 para 12(1A), (1B) (as so prospectively added). Such arrangements made in respect of a function may provide that the function is to be exercised in accordance with the arrangements only (and not by the delegating body (ie the Council or the committee as appropriate)): Sch 8 para 12(1C), (1D) (as so prospectively added). Any power conferred by para 12(1), (1A) or (2) (see the text and notes 6-8) may be exercised so as to impose restrictions or conditions on the body or individual by whom the function is to be discharged: Sch 8 para 12(3) (as prospectively substituted).

1323 Delegation of powers

TEXT AND NOTES--Day appointed for the purpose of these provisions is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/3250.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) The Council for Licensed Conveyancers/1324. Expenses and accounts.

1324. Expenses and accounts.

The expenses incurred by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ in the discharge of its functions² are to be defrayed out of sums received by it in respect of fees³ and out of any sums received by it by way of grants made by the Secretary of State⁴.

The Council must keep proper accounts of all sums received or paid by it and proper records in relation to those accounts⁵. It must appoint auditors to the Council⁶ and cause its accounts to be audited annually by those auditors⁷. As soon as is practicable after the accounts for any period have been audited, the Council must cause them to be published⁸ and must send a copy of them to the Secretary of State together with a copy of any report of the auditors on those accounts⁹.

1 As to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers see PARA 1320 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'functions' see PARA 1322 note 2.

3 For these purposes, 'fees' includes charges, disbursements, expenses and remuneration: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 39(1).

4 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 12(3), Sch 3 para 10(1), (2) (para 10(2), (3) amended by the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs Order 2003, SI 2003/1887, art 9, Sch 2 para 6(b)). The Secretary of State may make grants to the Council towards meeting the expenses incurred, or to be incurred, by it in the discharge of its functions; and any sums required by him for so making grants must be paid out of money provided by Parliament: Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 3 para 10(2), (3) (as so amended). Grant in aid from the Lord Chancellor (who then exercised the power to grant aid) in fact ceased on 31 March 1993, from which date the Council has been entirely self-funded. As from a day to be appointed Sch 3 para 10(2), (3) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 29(1), (11) to replace 'Secretary of State' with 'Lord Chancellor'. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

1325. Provision of financial services.

The provision of financial services is mainly governed by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000¹ and regulated by the Financial Services Authority². The Council for Licensed Conveyancers³ is a designated professional body⁴ for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XX⁵ and consequently activities that are regulated by that Act⁶ may be carried on by licensed conveyancers who are supervised and regulated by the Council⁷. As a designated professional body the Council must make rules to regulate practices⁸ in the provision of regulated activities in relation to which the general prohibition⁹ does not apply¹⁰.

Each practice is permitted by the Council to provide regulated activities as specified by the Council by resolution and which are incidental to conveyancing services provided by the practice to a client¹¹, and legal services (other than conveyancing services) regulated by the Council and provided by the practice to a client¹².

Each practice providing regulated activities must appoint a principal¹³ as the person who is responsible for ensuring the practice has procedures and practices to enable it to comply with the Licensed Conveyancers' Designated Professional Body Rules 2004 and will supply to the Council or its agents information as the Council requires¹⁴. A practice must notify the Council immediately and in any event no later than seven days after each such appointment is made¹⁵.

The manner of the provision by a practice of any service in the course of carrying on a regulated activity must be incidental to the provision by that practice of professional services¹⁶. The regulated activities carried on by a practice must not be of a description, or relate to an investment of a description, specified in an order made by the Treasury¹⁷. The regulated activities must be the only regulated activities carried on by the practice other than regulated activities in relation to which it is an exempt person¹⁸. If a practice is in breach of the foregoing rules the Council may impose a condition on the licence of the principals of the practice which may include the withdrawal of permission to provide regulated activities¹⁹. A practice must not carry on, nor hold itself out as carrying on, a regulated activity other than one which is permitted by these rules²⁰ or one in relation to which it is an exempt person²¹. Nor must a practice carry on any insurance mediation activity²² unless it is included in the insurance intermediaries register²³.

A practice and all of its principals must at all times comply with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, secondary legislation made under that Act and the Insurance Mediation Directive²⁴, so far as they apply²⁵; and with the terms and provisions of the code of practice²⁶ issued by the Council²⁷.

If it appears to the Council that there has been a contravention of any of the foregoing rules, a principal or a recognised body²⁸ is liable to disciplinary proceedings²⁹.

- 1895 (d) include provision for the charging of fees by the Council⁹; and 1327. Applications for licences.

An application for a licence¹ to practise as a licensed conveyancer² must be made to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers³ in such manner and accompanied by such fee⁴ as may be prescribed by rules⁵ made by the Council⁶. Any such rules may (1) prescribe the forms to be used in connection with applications for licences; and (2) provide for applications of any description specified in the rules to be exempt from any of their requirements⁷.

No person is entitled to apply for a licence for the first time unless he is a fit and proper person to practise as a licensed conveyancer and has either passed the Council's qualifying examination, completed at least two years' practical training, and in respect of any period exceeding three months following the conclusion of his practical training, provided to the satisfaction of the Council evidence of having undergone relevant conveyancing experience⁸; or demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Council, in accordance with such terms and conditions as it may prescribe, that he has the relevant educational and professional qualifications and experience in the provision of conveyancing services⁹.

Every licence must be either a limited licence¹⁰ or a full licence¹¹ and must be in such form as the Council may from time to time prescribe¹². An application for a licence is deemed to have been made on the day on which the applicant has complied fully and finally with the relevant requirements¹³. In considering an application for a licence the Council may, at its discretion, require the applicant to attend for interview¹⁴. If the Council is not satisfied that the relevant requirements have been satisfied or, with or without having interviewed the applicant, that the applicant is a fit and proper person to practise as a licensed conveyancer, it may refuse an application for a licence¹⁵.

A full licence automatically becomes a limited licence when the holder of a full licence has failed to comply with the rules made under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 21 (see PARA 1348): Licensed Conveyancers' Licensing Rules 2007 r 2.4. An applicant for a limited licence must deliver or cause to be delivered to the Council's offices: (1) a written application in the form prescribed by and obtained from the Council, correctly completed and signed by the applicant; (2) the fee payable; (3) any contribution which the Council may require an applicant to make to any fund or funds as to professional indemnity and compensation maintained by the Council by virtue of the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 21(3)(a); and (4) any report, certificate or other document as the Council may require: Licensed Conveyancers' Licensing Rules 2007 r 2.5.

11 The holder of a full licence is licensed to offer conveyancing services directly to the public and a full licence must be so indorsed by the Council: Licensed Conveyancers' Licensing Rules 2007 r 2.3. In addition to the requirements of an application for a limited licence (see note 10) an applicant for a full licence must deliver or cause to be delivered to the Council's offices: (1) evidence of appropriate and current insurance cover as required by the Licensed Conveyancers' Indemnity Rules 2005 (see PARA 1349); (2) such further or composite contribution which the Council requires an applicant to make to any fund or funds as to professional indemnity and compensation maintained by the Council by virtue of the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 21(3) (see PARA 1348); (3) in the case of an application for a full licence while a limited licence is current, the additional fee; and (4) where applicable, evidence that the Applicant has satisfied the requirements of the Licensed Conveyancers' Conduct Rules 2005 r 4.3.1 (see PARA 1344): Licensed Conveyancers' Licensing Rules 2007 r 2.6.

12 Licensed Conveyancers' Licensing Rules 2007 r 2.2. A licensed conveyancer may, when applying for a licence, apply in addition for a duplicate licence which, if issued, is free of charge; he may also apply for a duplicate licence at any other time and on tendering the fee payable, and the Council may issue such a licence: Licensed Conveyancers' Licensing Rules 2007 r 2.10.

1327 Applications for licences

TEXT AND NOTES 7-15--Licensed Conveyancers' Licensing Rules 2007 r 2 now Licensed Conveyancers' Licensing Rules 2009 r 2, with the removal of the distinction between a limited licence and a full licence. A licensed conveyancer may apply to the Council for the removal or variation of conditions on a licence: r 5. If the Council refuses an application for a licence or refuses to remove or vary the conditions of a licence, the applicant or licensed conveyancer may appeal: r 6.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(2) TRAINING AND LICENSING OF PERSONS SEEKING TO PRACTISE AS LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/1328. Issue of licences by the Council.

1328. Issue of licences by the Council.

The Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ must issue an applicant for a licence² either with a licence free of conditions or with a licence subject to such conditions as may be imposed³ if the Council is satisfied:

- 1900 (1) that the applicant has complied with such rules⁴ regarding training (if any) as are applicable in his case; and
- 1901 (2) that he has made adequate arrangements for the purpose of complying with any rules⁵ made regarding professional indemnity; and
- 1902 (3) that he is a fit and proper person to practise as a licensed conveyancer⁶ or, in the case of an applicant to whom a conditional licence is issued⁷, that he is a fit and proper person to practise as such a conveyancer subject to his complying with any particular conditions that may be imposed on the licence⁸; and provided that the application is duly⁹ made¹⁰.

A licence is in force for a period of 12 months beginning with the date of its issue¹¹.

Where an application for a licence is duly made by a person who, at the date of the application, already holds a licence, and no new licence is issued to him in pursuance of the application before the time when his existing licence would otherwise expire¹², his existing licence does not expire at that time but continues in force until a new licence is issued to him in pursuance of the application or, if the application is refused by the Council, (a) until the end of the period within which an appeal may be brought against the refusal¹³; or (b) if such an appeal is brought, until the appeal is determined or abandoned¹⁴.

Where an applicant for a licence has held such a licence at any time within the period of 12 months ending with the date of his application, any licence granted to him in pursuance of the application is deemed to have been issued on the day following the date when his previous licence expired¹⁵ or would have so expired¹⁶ and accordingly to have been held by him as from that day¹⁷.

A licence so issued may be indorsed by the Council as (i) a full licence, if the Council is satisfied that the person to whom it is issued has complied or will comply with the requirements made with respect to professional indemnity and compensation¹⁸; or (ii) as a limited licence, if the Council is not so satisfied¹⁹.

The licence issued to a licensed conveyancer remains the property of the Council until it expires²⁰. Any full or limited licence may, at the time of its grant or subsequently, be indorsed with any condition which the Council may impose²¹.

When, during the currency of a full licence, the licensed conveyancer either ceases to comply with any rules made by the Council²² relating to insurance or for any other reason ceases to be eligible to hold a full licence, he must immediately surrender the licence and any duplicate licence issued to him by delivering them or causing them to be delivered to the Council's offices.²³

1330. Conditional licences.

The following provisions have effect in any case where a person applies for a licence¹:

- 1903 (1) for the first time²;
- 1904 (2) when each licence previously held by him has been subject to conditions³;
- 1905 (3) when, on the first day of the period to which the licence would (if granted) relate, a period of 12 months or more will have elapsed since he last held a licence⁴;
- 1906 (4) after the Discipline and Appeals Committee⁵ has made any order in his case in disciplinary proceedings⁶;
- 1907 (5) after he has been invited by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁷ to give an explanation in respect of any matter relating to his conduct and has failed to give an explanation in respect of that matter which the Council regards as satisfactory, and has been notified⁸ in writing by the Council that he has so failed⁹;
- 1908 (6) while he is an undischarged bankrupt¹⁰;
- 1909 (7) after having been adjudged bankrupt and discharged or after having entered into a composition with his creditors or a deed of arrangement for the benefit of his creditors¹¹;

At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

In any such case, the Council may, on issuing a licence to the applicant²⁵, issue it subject to such conditions as it thinks fit²⁶. In particular, conditions may be imposed (i) for restricting the kinds of conveyancing services²⁷ that may be provided by the applicant as a licensed conveyancer²⁸; or (ii) for requiring the applicant to take any specified steps that will, in the Council's opinion, be conducive to his carrying on an efficient practice as a licensed conveyancer²⁹.

Where the Council decides to issue an applicant with a licence subject to conditions, it may, if it thinks fit, direct that the conditions are not to have effect pending the hearing and determination of certain appeals³⁰.

1331. Imposition of conditions during currency of licence.

The Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ may in the case of any licensed conveyancer² direct that his licence³ is to have effect subject to such conditions as the Council thinks fit⁴. The power to give such a direction in the case of any licensed conveyancer is exercisable at any time during the period for which his licence is in force if (1) in the event of an application for a licence being made by him at that time, the statutory provisions⁵ relating to conditional licences would apply to him by reason of the specified circumstances⁶; or (2) he has entered into a composition with his creditors or a deed of arrangement for the benefit of his creditors⁷.

The conditions specified in such a direction have effect as from the time when the licensed conveyancer concerned is notified⁸ of the Council's decision to give the direction⁹. If, however, the Council thinks fit, it may provide in a direction so given that the conditions specified in it are not to have effect pending the hearing and determination of certain appeals¹⁰.

As from a day to be appointed, where a licensed conveyancer's licence has conditional effect the Council may, in prescribed circumstances¹¹, and on an application made by the licensed conveyancer, direct the removal of a condition, or its variation in the manner described in the application¹². At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Where any conditions are imposed, amended or removed during the currency of a licence, the licensed conveyancer must immediately upon request submit his licence to the Council for indorsement, amendment or removal¹³. When during the currency of a limited licence the Council agrees to the removal or amendment of all or any of the conditions imposed on it, those conditions remain effective until such time as the licence is delivered to the Council's offices together with the fee payable for making such an amendment¹⁴.

1332. Suspension or termination of licences.

Where an adjudication in bankruptcy¹ is made against a licensed conveyancer², any such adjudication operates immediately to suspend the licence³ held⁴ by that person; and the suspension continues until the licence expires⁵. The suspension of a licence by virtue of this provision terminates, however, if the adjudication in question is annulled and an office copy of the order annulling the adjudication is served⁶ on the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁷.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions also have effect⁸.

Where the Council exercises certain powers with regard to the recovery of sums of money or production or delivery of documents⁹ in relation to a licensed conveyancer, the exercise of that power operates immediately to suspend any licence held by that person¹⁰. Where a licence is so suspended the suspension of the licence continues until the licence expires¹¹, although the licensed conveyancer concerned may, at any time before the licence expires, apply to the Council to terminate the suspension¹². At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

A licence is terminated if the person holding it becomes a person who lacks capacity within the meaning of the Mental Capacity Act 2005¹³.

For the purposes of the statutory provisions relating to licensed conveyancers¹⁴, a licence is treated as not being in force at any time while it is suspended by virtue of any such provision¹⁵.

Where a licence ceases to be in force, whether because it is suspended or the licensed conveyancer concerned is disqualified from holding such a licence or for any other reason, any advocacy¹⁶, litigation¹⁷ or probate licence¹⁸ in force with respect to that licensed conveyancer at the time ceases to have effect to the same extent as the licence with respect to conveyancing services¹⁹.

1333. Register of licensed conveyancers.

The Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ must establish and maintain, in such form as it may determine, a register containing the names and places of business of all persons who for the time being hold licences² to practise as licensed conveyancers³. The Council must accordingly cause the appropriate entries and deletions to be made in the register on the issue and termination of licences; and where any licence held by a person is for the time being suspended by virtue of any statutory provision⁴, the Council must cause that fact to be noted in the register against that person's name⁵.

The Council must provide facilities for making the information contained in the entries in the register available for inspection in visible and legible form by any person during office hours and without payment⁶.

A certificate signed by an officer of the Council appointed for the purpose and stating (1) that any person does or does not, or did or did not, hold a licence⁷; or (2) that any licence held by any person is or was either free of conditions or subject to any particular conditions⁸, is evidence of the facts stated in the certificate, unless the contrary is proved⁹.

Where an advocacy¹⁰, litigation¹¹ or probate licence¹² is in force with respect to a licensed conveyancer, the Council must enter details of the licence in the appropriate place in the register of licensed conveyancers maintained by it under the above provisions¹³. The Council must accordingly cause the appropriate entries to be made on the issue of any such licence and deletions on any such licence ceasing to be in force¹⁴; and where any such licence is for the time being suspended, the Council must cause that fact to be noted in the register against the name of the licensed conveyancer concerned¹⁵.

1334. Continuing professional development.

A licensed conveyancer¹ must, in each licence year² in which he holds a licence, complete a prescribed minimum of continuing professional development in recognised courses³. In respect of each licence year in which he holds a licence a licensed conveyancer must inform the Council for Licensed Conveyancers in such form as it may from time to time prescribe whether or not he has complied with the Council's requirements for continuing professional development as they apply to him⁴, and must keep an up to date training record⁵ which he must send to the Council on demand or produce to any person appointed by the Council⁶.

Where a licensed conveyancer fails to comply with the foregoing rules⁷, the Council may refuse to renew his licence or may issue the licence subject to conditions⁸. In an individual case the Council may, where satisfied that the person concerned has undergone sufficient continuing professional development in the current year, vary the operation of these rules in such ways as it thinks fit⁹, and has the power to require a licensed conveyancer to attend a stated course notwithstanding that he may at that time have satisfied the minimum requirements¹⁰ for the current year¹¹.

1 'Licensed conveyancer' means any person holding a licence in force granted by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers: Licensed Conveyancers' Continuing Professional Development Rules 2004 r 1.2.2. A licensed conveyancer must complete a minimum of six hours in each licence year that he holds a limited licence, and a minimum of 12 hours in each licence year that he holds a full licence: rr 2.1, 2.2. The latter requirement prevails where a full licence takes effect immediately upon the expiration of a limited licence: r 2.2. 'Recognised course' means a course, lecture, seminar or other programme or activity approved or run by the Council: r 1.2.2. The Council has the power to approve courses of study provided by educational institutions and other bodies, and may provide its own courses of study for the purposes and may prescribe and charge a fee to a licensed conveyancer who is obliged to attend or who applies to attend or undertake such a course: see rr 3.3, 3.5.

LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(3) AUTHORISATION IN RESPECT OF OTHER LEGAL SERVICES/1335. Right to apply for authorisation to grant rights of audience and rights to conduct litigation.

(3) AUTHORISATION IN RESPECT OF OTHER LEGAL SERVICES

1335. Right to apply for authorisation to grant rights of audience and rights to conduct litigation.

Until a day to be appointed the Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ has the powers necessary to enable it to become an authorised body² for the purposes of granting rights of audience and rights to conduct litigation³. The Council may exercise these powers only with respect to persons who are licensed conveyancers⁴.

Where the Council becomes such an authorised body and grants any right of audience or right to conduct litigation, it must do so by issuing a licence⁵ to the licensed conveyancer to whom the right is being granted⁶.

The Council's general duty includes the duty to ensure that the standards of competence and professional conduct among licensed conveyancers who are granted such rights are sufficient to secure adequate protection for consumers, and that the advocacy⁷ or litigation⁸ provided by such persons are or will be provided both economically and efficiently⁹.

Where the Council exercises any of its powers in connection with an application for authorisation¹⁰, or the granting of any right of audience or right to conduct litigation¹¹, it must do so subject to any requirements to which it is subject in accordance with the relevant statutory provisions¹².

As from a day to be appointed the Council has the powers necessary to enable it to become designated as an approved regulator in relation to one or more of the following reserved legal activities¹³:

- 1918 (1) the exercise of a right of audience¹⁴;
- 1919 (2) the conduct of litigation¹⁵.

If the Council becomes an approved regulator in relation to one or more of those activities, it may, in that capacity, authorise a person to carry on a relevant activity only if the person is a licensed conveyancer¹⁶. Where the Council authorises a licensed conveyancer to carry on a relevant activity, it is to do so by issuing a licence to the licensed conveyancer¹⁷.

Where the Council exercises any of its powers in connection with an application for designation as an approved regulator in relation to a reserved legal activity, or the authorising of a person to carry on a relevant activity, it is to do so subject to any requirements to which it is subject in accordance with the provisions of the Legal Services Act 2007¹⁸.

1351. Grants of compensation.

The Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ may in its absolute discretion make a grant out of the compensation fund² for the purpose of relieving or mitigating loss which the Council is satisfied any person has suffered or is likely to suffer in consequence of³:

- 2000 (1) the negligence, fraud or other dishonesty on the part of a licensed conveyancer or of any employee, associate⁴ of his in connection with his practice (or purported practice) as a licensed conveyancer⁵;
- 2001 (2) the failure on the part of a licensed conveyancer to account for money received by him in connection with his practice (or purported practice) as a licensed conveyancer⁶.

The Council may make interim or final payments by way of a grant or grants at any time before, during or after the investigation by the Council or any of its committees of a claim against a respondent practice provided that it is satisfied in every such case that the payment falls within the circumstances for which a grant may be made⁷.

After a grant has been made if a claimant wishes to seek an additional grant in respect of interest or costs, the claimant must submit a further claim⁸.

On receipt of a claim the Council must consider it and may in its absolute discretion make an additional grant or grants out of the fund under this provision as follows⁹:

- 2002 (a) in lieu of interest on the amount of a grant in every case for such a period and at such rate as determined by the Council at its absolute discretion¹⁰.
- 2003 (b) a sum in respect of the amount of reasonable costs incurred by any person making a claim wholly and exclusively in connection with the preparation, submission and proof of the claim¹¹.

1352. Procedure on claims for compensation.

Where any person makes a claim for a grant¹ he must complete, sign and deliver to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers² a notice of claim as prescribed by the Council³. Such notice must provide for:

- 2004 (1) the assignment to the Council of all rights of action the claimant has against the respondent practice⁴ or any other person liable for the loss⁵;
- 2005 (2) retention by the compensation fund⁶ of all money recovered by the Council whether or not in excess of any grant made by the Council to the claimant⁷ after deduction of the costs incurred by the Council in making such recoveries⁸;
- 2006 (3) the claimant to covenant to do all such further things and produce such documents as may be required by the Council for the purpose of pursuing any claim against the respondent licensed conveyancer or any other person liable for the loss⁹.

The Council may:

- 2007 (a) require a claim to be supported by a statutory declaration made by the claimant¹⁰;
- 2008 (b) require the production of any relevant documents¹¹; and
- 2009 (c) cause such inquiries to be made in relation to the claim as the Council thinks fit¹².

The Council may, before deciding whether or not to make a grant, require a claimant to pursue any civil remedy which may be available in respect of the loss¹³.

Without limiting the absolute discretion of the Council it may take into account when deciding whether a claim for a grant should be paid in full, reduced or rejected:

- 2010 (i) whether the claimant has complied with the relevant rules¹⁴;
- 2011 (ii) whether sufficient information has been provided promptly in support of the claim¹⁵;
- 2012 (iii) whether the claimant has any responsibility for the loss, or directly or indirectly hoped to profit or did profit, whether wholly or otherwise, from the circumstances giving rise to the loss¹⁶;
- 2013 (iv) whether the claimant is protected in respect of his loss by any other scheme or any contract of insurance or indemnity or guarantee¹⁷;
- 2014 (v) whether the claimant has recovered damages or compensation in respect of the loss which had been suffered including any interest recovered as a result of any available civil remedy or in criminal proceedings or is likely to make such recovery in the future¹⁸;
- 2015 (vi) the assets available to the fund¹⁹;
- 2016 (vii) any representations made to the Council by the respondent practice, his personal representative, trustee in bankruptcy or the liquidator of a recognised body as the case may be²⁰;

- 2017 (viii) whether any statutory limitation period has expired²¹;
 2018 (ix) whether the claimant has taken all reasonable steps to mitigate loss²²;
 2019 (x) whether the claim has been exaggerated by the claimant²³;
 2020 (xi) whether the Council has reason to suspect fraud or other dishonesty on the part of the claimant in respect of the loss or in respect of the claim²⁴.

Where the Council refuses to make a grant of either the whole or part of the amount claimed it must inform the claimant in writing of the reason for its decision within 28 days of that decision²⁵. The Council must not make a grant unless it has caused a letter giving notification of the claim or additional claim to be sent to the respondent practice at his last known correspondence address or to any solicitor or other representative instructed by him or appointed on his behalf or in his stead and in any case not less than eight days have elapsed since the date of such letter²⁶.

Provided no other civil proceedings for recovery in respect of the same cause of action have already been issued, the Council may, even if it is not possible to obtain an assignment of the cause of action from or on behalf of the claimant, take proceedings against the respondent practice to recover the amount of any grant or other payment made in consequence of the act or omission of that practice in accordance with these rules²⁷.

1353. Keeping of accounts and establishment of client accounts; in general.

The Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ must make rules² requiring licensed conveyancers³ to keep such accounts in relation to their practices as may be prescribed by the rules⁴. The Council must also make rules requiring licensed conveyancers:

- 2021 (1) to open and keep accounts for clients'⁵ money at authorised institutions⁶;
- 2022 (2) to hold and pay out money so received in such manner as may be prescribed by the rules⁷; and
- 2023 (3) to keep accounts containing particulars and information as to money received or held or paid by them for or on account of their clients⁸.

Rules under any of the above provisions may empower the Council:

- 2024 (a) to require licensed conveyancers to deliver to the Council at such intervals as may be prescribed by the rules reports given by accountants⁹ and containing such information as may be so prescribed for the purpose of (i) giving a true and fair view of the state of their businesses; or (ii) enabling the Council to ascertain whether or not the rules have been complied with¹⁰; and
- 2025 (b) to take such other steps as it considers necessary or expedient for the purpose stated in head (ii) above¹¹.

Any such rules may specify circumstances in which persons are exempt from any of the requirements of the rules¹².

In the case of a licensed conveyancer who no longer holds a licence or certificate of recognition, these rules apply as if that licence or certificate of recognition were still in force until such time as any relevant part of these rules has been fully and appropriately complied with: r 3.2. 'Licensed Conveyancer' means for the purposes of these rules: any person who has held or currently holds a licence issued by the Council to offer to the public conveyancing and other legal services regulated by the Council and holds or has at any time held or received client money in accordance with the Council's rules either in his own name or that of his practice; and a recognised body; 'client money' means any money held or received for a client by a licensed conveyancer incidental to the provision of services regulated by the Council; 'practice' means a licensed conveyancer who is a sole practitioner; or two or more licensed conveyancers in partnership; or a recognised body; 'recognised body' means a body corporate including a limited liability partnership recognised by the Council under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 32 (as to recognition under s 32 see PARA 1392) (including for the purposes of these rules a body corporate which has had issued to it a certificate of recognition, but is no longer so certificated); 'client' means any person or persons for whom a licensed conveyancer acts in the provision of services regulated by the Council; 'without delay' means, in normal circumstances, either on the same day or on the next working day; 'working day' means any day from Monday to Friday (inclusive) which is not Christmas Day, Good Friday or a statutory bank holiday; 'certificate of recognition' means a certificate issued by the Council to a body corporate recognised by the Council under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 32 (see PARA 1392 et seq); Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Accounts Rules 2008 r 2.1.3.

1354. Payments into, and withdrawals from, client accounts.

A licensed conveyancer¹ must without delay² pay client money³ held or received by him into a client account⁴. Money held in a client account must be available immediately, even at the sacrifice of interest, unless the client otherwise instructs⁵. Money held in separate designated accounts⁶ must not be aggregated with money held in other client accounts⁷.

Only client money may be paid into or held in a client account⁸ except: (1) such money belonging to the licensed conveyancer as may be necessary for the purpose of opening or maintaining the client account⁹; (2) money to replace any sum which for any reason has been or is about to be withdrawn from the account¹⁰, such money then becoming client money¹¹; (3) where the licensed conveyancer receives money and is in doubt as to whether it is wholly office money¹², in which case, he must pay such money into a client account but must ascertain and withdraw such part as is office money as soon as possible and in any event within one calendar month of receipt¹³.

Notwithstanding the provisions of the Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Accounts Rules 2008, a licensed conveyancer must not pay into a client account money¹⁴ which a client instructs the licensed conveyancer to withhold from such an account, such instruction being either on a durable medium¹⁵ from the client or acknowledged by the licensed conveyancer on a durable medium to the client¹⁶, or which has been withheld from a client account with the written authorisation of the Council¹⁷.

There must be withdrawn from a client account:

- 2026 (a) without delay following discovery, money that has been incorrectly paid into it¹⁸;
- 2027 (b) as soon as possible and in any event within one calendar month of receipt, office money paid into it, where it is uncertain whether it is wholly office money¹⁹;
- 2028 (c) without delay office money no longer necessary to maintain a client account²⁰;
- 2029 (d) within 28 days of the date on which a bill of costs is sent to a client, money held on account of costs²¹ and disbursements²², provided it is made clear to the client or the paying party on a durable medium either before or at the time the bill of costs is sent that such money will be applied towards or in payment of that bill of costs²³.

In addition to these withdrawals there may only be withdrawn from a client account money:

- 2030 (i) properly required for payment to or on behalf of a client²⁴;
- 2031 (ii) properly required for payment of a disbursement on behalf of a client²⁵;
- 2032 (iii) properly required in full or partial reimbursement of money already expended by the licensed conveyancer out of office account on behalf of a client²⁶;
- 2033 (iv) properly required in full or partial reimbursement of money for which the licensed conveyancer has incurred a liability to make a payment out of office account on behalf of a client²⁷;
- 2034 (v) which is transferred to another client account²⁸;

- 2035 (vi) where the Council has given written authority for a specific payment to be made to a nominated payee or where the Council has approved a scheme for automated payments direct from client account²⁹.

Money withdrawn under the foregoing rules must not exceed the total of the money held to the credit of both the client and the client account in which the money is held³⁰.

Undrawn costs or disbursements must not remain in a client account either in anticipation of future errors which could result in a shortage on that account or any current shortage on that account and are not available as a set off against any general shortage on client account³¹. Any withdrawal in favour of a licensed conveyancer must be recorded in both the client and office columns of the appropriate client ledger account³².

A withdrawal from a client account must be made as follows³³:

- 2036 (A) cheques or other written instructions for withdrawal from client bank account must be signed by an approved person³⁴;
 2038 (C) where payments are authorised electronically, such authority may only be given by an approved person³⁶.

A transfer of money from the ledger account of one client to that of another client may only be made if it would have been permissible under these rules for the money to be withdrawn from a client account in the case of the first client and for the money to be paid into a client account in the case of the second client³⁷.

A withdrawal from a client account in favour of a licensed conveyancer must be by way of a cheque to the licensed conveyancer or by way of a transfer to his office account³⁸. Withdrawals in cash are not permitted³⁹. Except with the prior written authority of both clients no sum in respect of a private loan⁴⁰ from one client to another may be paid out of funds held for the lender: to the borrower directly⁴¹; by a payment from one client account to another⁴²; or by a transfer from the ledger account of the lender to that of the borrower⁴³. All monies held in a client account must be paid promptly to the rightful recipient⁴⁴ when due⁴⁵.

1355. Records of accounts, etc.

A licensed conveyancer¹ must at all times keep accounting records² promptly and properly written up to show clearly all his dealings with client money³ received, held or paid by him, including client money withheld from a client account⁴, and any office money⁵ relating to any client⁶ matter⁷. Such records must be sufficient to show and explain accurately every transaction relating to each client, and disclose at any time the licensed conveyancer's total indebtedness to each client and also each client's total indebtedness to the licensed conveyancer⁸. All dealings with client money must be appropriately recorded⁹.

If separate designated accounts¹⁰ are used:

- 2039 (1) a combined cash account must be kept in order to show the total amount held in separate designated accounts¹¹;
- 2040 (2) a record of the amount held for each client must be made either in a deposit column of a client ledger account, or on the client side of a client ledger account kept specifically for a separate designated account, for each client¹²; and
- 2041 (3) upon receipt of information that interest has been credited to the separate designated account, corresponding entries must be made in the accounting records¹³.

The current balance on each client and office ledger account must always be shown, or be readily ascertainable from accounting records¹⁴. All dealings with office money relating to any client must be appropriately recorded in an office cash account and on the office side of the appropriate client ledger account¹⁵. When acting for both lender and borrower in a mortgage transaction between them, separate client ledger accounts for both clients need not be opened provided that the funds belonging to each client are clearly identifiable and the lender is an institutional lender which provides mortgages in the normal course of its activities¹⁶.

A licensed conveyancer must retain on a durable medium¹⁷ a central record or file of copies of all bills of costs distinguishing in each bill between costs¹⁸, paid disbursements¹⁹ and disbursements not yet paid at the date of the bill and VAT²⁰.

A licensed conveyancer must, at least once in each calendar month:

- 2042 (a) prepare a bank reconciliation statement by comparing the balance on the client cash account with the balances shown on the client bank statements and passbooks (after allowing for all unrepresented items) of all client accounts and separate designated accounts and any client money held by the licensed conveyancer in cash²¹;
- 2043 (b) as at the same date prepare a listing of all the balances shown by the client and office ledger accounts and compare the total of the client ledger credit balances with the balance on the client bank reconciliation statement²²; and
- 2044 (c) prepare a reconciliation statement showing the cause of the differences (if any) shown by each of the above comparisons²³.

These steps must be prepared to a date not more than five weeks after the date to which they were last prepared, and completed within seven days of the date to which they are prepared²⁴.

Records maintained in accordance with the foregoing rules²⁵ must be kept separate from those for any other business, and where the accounts of more than one business are maintained on the same system, they must be capable of being reproduced independently²⁶. The licensed conveyancer must ensure that he has at all times immediate and unrestricted access to his accounting records²⁷.

A licensed conveyancer must retain on a durable medium for at least six years from the date of the last entry all documents or other records required by the foregoing rules²⁸, and must retain for at least two years:

- 2045 (i) all paid cheques, unless any relevant bank²⁹ or building society³⁰ has agreed on a durable medium that it will retain such cheques or copies of the cheques on a durable medium on his behalf for that period³¹;
- 2046 (ii) originals or copies of all other authorities for the withdrawal of money from a client account³²; and

All statements and passbooks, as printed by the bank or building society for client accounts, separate designated accounts, accounts in which client money has been held and any office account of the licensed conveyancer must be retained for at least six years from the date of the last entry³³.

The Council for Licensed Conveyancers³⁴ must be notified without delay³⁵ upon discovery of any misappropriation of client money³⁶.

1356. Monitoring by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers.

In order to monitor compliance with the Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ rules, a licensed conveyancer² must at a time and place determined by the Council produce to any person appointed by the Council all information held on a durable medium³ relating to his practice⁴ (to include his accounting records⁵, papers, files and financial accounts) reasonably required to enable the preparation of a report to the Council. ⁶

The Council is entitled to seek verification from clients⁷, staff and the licensed conveyancer's banks⁸ or building societies⁹, and the licensed conveyancer must, if necessary, provide written permission for such information to be given¹⁰. Save with the permission of the licensed conveyancer, the Council may not remove original documents from the licensed conveyancer's premises but must be provided with photocopies on request¹¹.

Where, following an inspection¹², it appears to the Council that there is reason to believe that a licensed conveyancer has failed to comply with a provision of these rules, the Council may require that licensed conveyancer to pay a reasonable sum as is determined by the Council to cover the cost of a further inspection¹³.

Any report made by the Council's appointee may be sent by the Council to the Crown Prosecution Service¹⁴ or the Serious Organised Crime Agency¹⁵ or to any of the accountancy bodies recognised by the Council, and may be used as the basis for a preliminary investigation of a disciplinary case¹⁶ and may be taken into account by the Council in relation to the possible disqualification of a reporting accountant¹⁷.

1357. Interest on clients' money.

Rules¹ relating to client accounts² must make provision for requiring a licensed conveyancer³ who has received money from a client to account, in such cases as may be prescribed by the rules, to the person who is or becomes entitled to the money for the interest which was, or could have been, earned by putting the money in a separate deposit account at an authorised⁴ institution⁵. Where a licensed conveyancer is required by such rules to place any sum of money in a separate deposit account but fails to do so as soon as is reasonably practicable, the Council may give a direction requiring him to account to the client in question for any interest which has not been earned but which would have been earned if that sum had been so placed in such an account⁶.

Except as provided by any rules so made, a licensed conveyancer who maintains a client account⁷ in which he keeps money received or held for or on account of his clients generally is not liable to account to any person for interest received by him on money in that account⁸.

When a licensed conveyancer⁹ holds client money¹⁰ in a separate designated account¹¹ the licensed conveyancer must seek a reasonable rate of interest on money held in that account and must account to the client for all interest earned on that account¹².

When a licensed conveyancer holds money for a client¹³ in a client account¹⁴ other than in a separate designated account or if money should have been held in a client account but was not so held, the licensed conveyancer must account to the client for a sum in lieu of interest calculated at the sole expense of the licensed conveyancer¹⁵ for such period as the Council may determine¹⁶.

Without prejudice to any other remedy, a client may apply to the Council for a direction as to whether or not interest should have been earned in respect of client money held on his behalf by a licensed conveyancer, and if the Council directs that interest should have been earned then it may issue a direction as to the sum that should be paid by the licensed conveyancer to the client in lieu of interest¹⁷.

If the Council directs¹⁸ that such a sum must be paid, the licensed conveyancer must within 15 days of the Council sending notification of that direction pay to the client the amount so directed¹⁹.

Nothing in the foregoing rules affects any arrangement made in writing between a licensed conveyancer and his client as to the application of client money or the payment of interest on it²⁰. However, a licensed conveyancer must act fairly towards his client and provide sufficient information in writing to enable the client to give informed consent in such a situation, including expressly drawing his client's attention to any contracting out provision which may be contained in terms of engagement²¹.

1358. Accountant's reports.

Every licensed conveyancer¹ who has at any time during an accounting period² held or received client money³ must procure the delivery by the reporting accountant⁴ to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁵ of an accountant's report⁶ for that period⁷. The accountant's report must be delivered to the Council within six months of the end of the accounting period⁸.

A licensed conveyancer who has two or more places of business need not have the same accounting period for all of them⁹. If separate accounting periods are chosen, he must provide a separate accountant's report for each place of business, and if the same accounting period is chosen for all places of business, he may provide either separate accountant's reports or a single composite accountant's report¹⁰. A licensed conveyancer must immediately notify the Council of any changes to the identity, address and other relevant details of the reporting accountant¹¹.

An accountant is qualified to sign and give an accountant's report on behalf of a licensed conveyancer if he is a member of an accountancy body recognised by the Council and holds a current practising certificate issued by that body when he signs the report¹². An accountant is not qualified to give an accountant's report if:

- 2047 (1) either at any time between the beginning of the accounting period to which the accountant's report relates and the signing of the accountant's report he was a partner, employee or officer in the practice to which the accountant's report relates or was employed by the same employer as the licensed conveyancer for whom the accountant's report is given¹³; or
- 2048 (2) he has been disqualified and has been given by the Council notice of disqualification which has not been withdrawn¹⁴.

A licensed conveyancer must ensure that his reporting accountant's rights and duties are stated in terms of engagement, which must include such terms as are prescribed by the Council, and which must, together with a copy be signed by the licensed conveyancer and the reporting accountant with the copy being retained by the licensed conveyancer¹⁵.

The place of examination of a licensed conveyancer's accounting records and other relevant documents must be the licensed conveyancer's office and not that of the reporting accountant¹⁶. The licensed conveyancer must provide the reporting accountant with details of all accounts kept or operated by him in connection with his practice¹⁷ at any bank¹⁸ or building society¹⁹ at any time during the accounting period to which the accountant's report relates, including client accounts²⁰, office accounts²¹ and accounts which are not client accounts but which contain client money²².

The reporting accountant:

- 2049 (a) must examine the licensed conveyancer's accounting records to ensure compliance with these rules and carry out the checks and tests prescribed by the Council²³;
- 2050 (b) must sign and deliver to the Council the accountant's report together with the completed checklist in the form prescribed by the Council²⁴;

2051 (c) may qualify his accountant's report if, having carried out his obligations, he is not satisfied that the licensed conveyancer whose accounting records he has examined has complied fully with these rules²⁵, except for trivial breaches caused by clerical errors or mistakes in book-keeping all of which were rectified on discovery and none of which appeared to have resulted in loss to any client²⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'licensed conveyancer' see PARA 1353 note 4.

2 'Accounting period' means the period for which the accounts of the licensed conveyancer are ordinarily made up provided however that it must begin at the end of the previous accounting period and cover 12 months except with the prior written consent of the Council: Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Accounts Rules 2008 r 10.3.

3 As to the meaning of 'client money' see PARA 1353 note 4.

(i) The Investigating Committee

1359. Preliminary investigation of disciplinary cases.

The Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ has established the Investigating Committee², for the preliminary investigation of cases in which³:

- 2052 (1) it is alleged that a licensed conveyancer has:
35
- 26. (a) (whether while a licensed conveyancer or not) been convicted by any court in the United Kingdom⁴ of a criminal offence which renders him unfit to practise as a licensed conveyancer⁵; or
 - 27. (b) while holding a current licence⁶, failed to comply with any condition to which that licence was subject⁷; or
 - 28. (c) failed to comply with any rules made⁸ by the Council⁹; or
- 36
- 2053 (2) a complaint is made to the Council by or on behalf of a member of the public about a licensed conveyancer¹⁰, with a view to determining whether such cases ought to be referred by the Investigating Committee to the Discipline and Appeals Committee¹¹ for hearing and determination by that committee¹².

Where it appears to the Investigating Committee (i) that any such allegation or complaint ought to be referred to the Discipline and Appeals Committee; and (ii) that it is necessary for the protection of consumers to do so, the Investigating Committee may, if it thinks fit, direct that any licence held by the licensed conveyancer in question be suspended until the allegation or complaint is determined by the Discipline and Appeals Committee or until the expiration of such period as may be prescribed by rules made by the Council, whichever is the earlier¹³.

As from a day to be appointed, before making such a direction, the Investigating Committee must give the licensed conveyancer an opportunity to make representations against the making of the proposed direction¹⁴. Where such a direction has been made, the licensed conveyancer may appeal to the Discipline and Appeals Committee, and on any such appeal that committee may make such order as it thinks fit¹⁵. Where such an order is made by the Discipline and Appeals Committee the person against whom the order is made, and if not the same, the Council may appeal against the order to the High Court¹⁶, which may make such order as it thinks fit¹⁷. The decision of the High Court is final¹⁸. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed.

1 As to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers see PARA 1320 et seq.

2 The Council must make rules as to the constitution of the Investigating Committee and any such rules may provide for the appointment to the committee of persons (whether licensed conveyancers or not) who are not members of the Council: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(4). See the Council for Licensed Conveyancers'

Investigating Committee Rules 2004 (5 May 2004) which came into force on 19 July 2004 (r 1); and PARA 1360. As to the meaning of 'licensed conveyancer' see PARA 1319 note 3. As to the making of rules generally see PARA 1326 note 2; and as to delegation to committees see PARA 1323. As to the use of inclusive language in rules and regulations made by the Council see PARA 1320 note 9.

3 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(1). As from a day to be appointed s 24(1) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 182, 210, Sch 17, Pt 1 paras 1, 12(1), (2), Sch 23 to replace the reference to 'the preliminary investigation' with a reference to 'consideration', and to repeal s 24(1)(b) and the final clause of the provision (see text and notes 11, 12). As from that day the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(1A) is added by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 12(3) to require the Investigating Committee to make a preliminary investigation of an allegation under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(1) and either hear and determine the allegation, or refer the allegation to the Discipline and Appeals Committee established under s 25 (see PARA 1362) for hearing and determination by that committee under s 26 (see PARA 1378). As to the determination of allegations by the Investigating Committee see PARA 1360. Additionally, as from that day the Council must make rules as to the cases in which the Investigating Committee may hear and determine an allegation, and the cases in which they must refer an allegation to the Discipline and Appeals Committee: s 24(4A) (prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 12(1), (6)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1063 note 13.

5 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(1)(a)(i). As to the meaning of 'practising as a licensed conveyancer' see PARA 1319 note 3.

6 Is a licence in force under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Pt II (ss 11-39): see PARAS 1319 et seq, 1362 et seq. As to the meaning of 'licence' see PARA 1319 note 3.

7 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(1)(a)(ii). As to conditional licences see PARAS 1330-1331.

8 Is under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Pt II: see PARAS 1319 et seq, 1362 et seq.

9 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(1)(a)(iii).

10 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(1)(b) (prospectively repealed: see note 3). For the purposes of s 24(1)(b), a complaint about a person who, at the time when the conduct to which the complaint relates took place, was an employee or associate of a licensed conveyancer, is treated as a complaint about the licensed conveyancer: s 24(2) (prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 182, 210, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 12(1), (4), Sch 23). As to the meaning of 'associate' see PARA 1348 note 4.

Any reference in s 24(1) or (2) to a licensed conveyancer in relation to any such allegation or complaint as is mentioned in s 24(1)(a)(ii) or (iii) or (b) includes a reference to a person who was a licensed conveyancer at the time when the conduct to which the allegation or complaint relates took place: s 24(3) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 182, 210, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 12(1), (5)(a), Sch 23).

11 Is the Discipline and Appeals Committee established under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 25: see PARA 1362.

12 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(1) (as prospectively amended: see note 3). The hearing or determination is under s 26: see PARA 1378.

A reference in the form of an allegation or complaint by the Investigating Committee to the Discipline and Appeals Committee under s 24 must be made in writing, specify the statutory provision under which it is made, and set out the allegation or complaint and a summary of the facts relied on to support it: Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 3(1). A copy of such a reference or complaint must be served on the respondent, together with a copy of the Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001, and a copy lodged with the chairman of the committee, within 14 days of the making of the reference or the decision to make the complaint: r 3(2). As to the statutory instrument containing those rules see PARA 1365 note 12. As to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers see PARA 1320 et seq. As to the procedure which then pertains see PARA 1364 et seq. As to the meaning of 'respondent' see PARA 1367 note 8.

13 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(5). As from a day to be appointed s 24(5) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 12(1), (7) to remove any references to a 'complaint'.

14 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(6) (s 24(6)-(12) prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 12(1), (8)). In relation to proceedings under s 24(6), the Investigating Committee may make such order as it thinks fit as to the payment of costs by the Council, or the licensed conveyancer: s 24(7) (as so prospectively added). Where such an order is made as to the payment of costs the Council or the licensed conveyancer may appeal to the Discipline and Appeals Committee, and on any such appeal the committee may make such order as it thinks fit: s 24(9) (as so prospectively added). Such an order is then subject to appeal to the High Court: see text and notes 19-21.

- 15 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(8) (as prospectively added: see note 14).
- 16 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(10) (as prospectively added: see note 14).

UPDATE

1359 Preliminary investigation of disciplinary cases

NOTES 3, 13, 14--Day appointed is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(i) The Investigating Committee/1360. Constitution and powers of the Investigating Committee.

1360. Constitution and powers of the Investigating Committee.

The Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ must select an Investigating Committee consisting of five members who may or may not be members of the Council, including a minimum of two and a maximum of three licensed conveyancers².

When the first members of the committee are selected by the Council, two members, one of whom must be a licensed conveyancer, must be selected to serve for an initial term of office of two years³; and the remaining three members must be selected to serve for an initial term of office of three years⁴. Thereafter all members selected have a term of office of three years from the date of their respective appointments⁵.

The members of the committee must elect one of their number as chairman who will hold that office until the expiry of his term as a member of the committee unless a vacancy occurs⁶ or he resigns his office⁷. A majority of members may elect a new chairman⁸ at any time if the chairman resigns his office⁹, is suspended¹⁰ or where a vacancy otherwise occurs¹¹. A member of the committee is eligible for re-selection¹². Under prescribed circumstances a person is not eligible for selection to the committee¹³.

A vacancy in the office of chairman or a member of the committee automatically occurs and his right to hold office ceases immediately under prescribed circumstances¹⁴. In the event that such a vacancy occurs, the secretary to the committee¹⁵ must as soon as possible inform each member of the committee of that fact and such fact must be noted at the next meeting of the committee and of the Council¹⁶, and the Council will as soon as possible select a member to serve on the committee for the remainder of the term of office of the member he has replaced¹⁷.

The Council must pay to the chairman and members of the committee attendance fees and reasonable expenses¹⁸.

Proceedings of the committee are governed by standing orders¹⁹.

1 As to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers see PARA 1320 et seq.

2 Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Investigating Committee Rules 2004 rr 2.1, 2.2. Subject to the rules which disqualify a person from selection (see r 7.1; and text and note 13), any nomination for membership of the committee must be made with the consent of the nominee in writing to the director of the Council by at least one Council member (other than the nominee) (r 8.1). All members of the Council, including the chairman of the Council, attending in person are eligible to vote in the selection of members of the committee, and no member is entitled to vote by post or by proxy (r 8.2). If the number of nominations received is less than or equal to the number of members to be selected any such nominee may be selected as a member of the committee by a majority of Council members attending and voting at a meeting of the Council on a show of hands (r 8.3). If there are no nominations or the number of such nominations is less than the vacancies to be filled, a person may nevertheless be selected as a member of the committee upon the nomination of the chairman of the Council by a majority of the Council members attending and voting at a meeting of the Council on a show of hands subject to the right of the person so nominated to decline nomination before the vote is taken (r 8.4). If there are more nominations than vacancies available there must be a selection by a paper ballot conducted in secrecy by each member of the Council voting making a mark on the ballot paper against the name of any nominee for whom he wishes to vote. The Secretary to the committee must collect and in the presence of the candidates count the votes and immediately announce to the Council the results of the selection. The nominees selected as members of the committee are those with the highest votes in descending order until all vacancies have been filled. In the event of an equality of votes for the last vacancy to be filled a second ballot is taken but if the last vacancy is not then filled the selection must be determined by lot, the draw being made by the chairman of the Council (r 8.5). Each member of the committee so selected takes office immediately after selection (r 8.6).

4 Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Investigating Committee Rules 2004 r 2.3(a)(ii).

5 Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Investigating Committee Rules 2004 r 2.3(b).

6 If a vacancy under the Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Investigating Committee Rules 2004 r 3.1: see text and note 14.

7 Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Investigating Committee Rules 2004 r 2.4. At the first meeting of the committee after the coming into force of these rules or where there is a vacancy in the office of chairman, the election of a chairman must be the first item of business at any meeting of the committee: r 9.1. All members of the committee are eligible for election as chairman, and all members attending in person are eligible to vote (and no member may vote by post or proxy): rr 9.2, 9.3. Nominations for chairman may with the consent of the nominee be made at the beginning of the meeting at which the chairman is to be elected: r 9.4. If there are two or more nominations for the office of chairman there must be an election by a paper ballot conducted in secret by each member of the committee voting making a mark on the ballot paper against the name of any nominee for whom he wishes to vote. The secretary to the committee must collect and in the presence of the candidates count the voting papers and must immediately announce to the committee the result of the election. The candidate with the highest vote will be chairman. In the event of an equality of votes in the election of the chairman a second ballot will be taken but if a clear winner is not established the election must be determined by lot, the draw being made by a member of the committee who is not a candidate: r 9.5. The chairman takes office immediately after his election: r 9.6.

8 If in accordance with the Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Investigating Committee Rules 2004 r 9: see note 7.

9 If he resigns his office as chairman, subject to these rules, the chairman may remain a member of the committee and may participate in the election of a new chairman: Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Investigating Committee Rules 2004 r 2.5.

10 The chairman or other member of the committee is suspended with immediate effect in the event that: (1) he is charged with any offence referred to in r 3.1(f) (see note 14); or (2) he is served with a bankruptcy petition or issues a bankruptcy petition on his own behalf; or (3) he receives notice of any application against him for an order under r 3.1(i)(ii), (j) (see note 14): r 10.1.

Any such suspension is automatically revoked in the following circumstances: (a) under head (1) above in the event that the charge is dismissed, discharged, discontinued or otherwise withdrawn; (b) under head (2) above if the bankruptcy petition is disposed of without a declaration of bankruptcy being made against him; (c) under head (3) above in the event that the application is withdrawn or dismissed or the only order made is for the payment of costs: r 10.2.

The Council may by a majority remove the chairman or any member of the committee who has breached the Investigating Committee's Standing Orders (as to the Investigating Committee see PARA 1359), or the Code of Conduct (see PARA 1342 et seq): r 10.3

1361. Determination of allegations by the Investigating Committee.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Where, on hearing an allegation², the Investigating Committee³ is satisfied that a licensed conveyancer⁴ has failed to comply with any condition to which his licence was subject, or has failed to comply with any rules made by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁵ the committee may, if it thinks fit, make an order directing the payment by the licensed conveyancer of a penalty to be forfeited to Her Majesty⁶, the amount of which may not exceed such amount as may be prescribed by rules made by the Council⁷. A person against whom such an order is made may appeal to the Discipline and Appeals Committee⁸, and on any such appeal the Discipline and Appeals Committee may make such order as it thinks fit⁹. The committee may make such order as it considers fit as to the payment of costs¹⁰ by:

LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(ii) The Discipline and Appeals Committee/A. IN GENERAL/1363. Membership of the Discipline and Appeals Committee.

1363. Membership of the Discipline and Appeals Committee.

The Discipline and Appeals Committee must consist of a chairman and two deputy chairmen, each of whom must be a barrister or a solicitor, of not less than seven years' standing, and a members' panel of at least six other members¹. Of the members of the members' panel, at least one half must be licensed conveyancers² at the time of their appointment and none may be a member of the Council for Licensed Conveyancers or have so been during the 18 months preceding their appointment³. The posts of chairman, deputy chairmen and members of the members' panel must be advertised in at least one national newspaper and in at least one other publication and appointments must be made only from respondents to such advertisements⁴. The persons so appointed must serve for three years from the date of their respective appointments⁶, and any person so appointed is eligible for re-appointment⁷.

A vacancy in the office of chairman or deputy chairman or a member of the members' panel automatically occurs under prescribed circumstances⁸, and a member of the committee may be removed from office following a special meeting convened for the purpose⁹. Where a vacancy occurs, it must be filled as soon as possible¹⁰. Each deputy chairman must be designated by the chairman as first deputy chairman or second deputy chairman, so that if there is a vacancy in the office of chairman or if the chairman is unable or unwilling to act, the first deputy chairman may act in his place, and if there is a vacancy in the office of both chairman and first deputy chairman or if both are unable or unwilling to act within a reasonable time the second deputy chairman may act in their place¹¹. The chairman must, if requested in writing by not less than three members, convene such a meeting and if he fails within 14 days to give notice the requisitionists may give notice to convene the meeting: r 6.2. At any meeting held under this rule any three members of the committee present constitute a quorum, and a simple majority of those present and voting suffices to pass any resolution: r 6.4. In case of equality of votes on a resolution requiring a simple majority the chairman has a second or casting vote: r 6.4. As to hearing before the committee see PARA 1364.

2 'Licensed conveyancer' means any person holding a licence in force granted by the Council and includes, in relation to any complaint or allegation against him, any person who was a licensed conveyancer at the time when his conduct, which is to be considered by the Investigating Committee or the Discipline and Appeals Committee, occurred: Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee Rules 2004 r 1.2.2. 6 Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee Rules 2004 r 2.7.

7 Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee Rules 2004 r 2.8.

8 See Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee Rules 2004 r 2.9. The prescribed circumstances are: (a) on his death; (b) on the acceptance by the Council of his written resignation; (c) on the expiration of his term of office; (d) on his becoming a member of the Council; (e) if he has been convicted of a criminal offence involving fraud, dishonesty, deception or violence or an indictable offence (the rules refer to a 'serious arrestable offence' as defined by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 116, which provision is repealed by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch 7. As to indictable offences see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(3) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1102 et seq); (f) if he is adjudged bankrupt or makes a composition or arrangement with his creditors; (g) if the provisions of the Mental Capacity Act 2005 relating to the management of the property and affairs of patients apply (the rules refer to the Mental Health Act 1983 Pt VII which is repealed and replaced by the Mental Capacity Act 2005: see MENTAL HEALTH); (h) if professional misconduct is proved against him by the disciplinary process of his professional body; or (i) if he is or becomes an employee of any organisation having as its main object the protection or promotion of the interests of licensed conveyancers or the defence of its members: Council for Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee Rules 2004 r 2.9.

At any meeting held under this rule any six members of the committee present, disregarding the member whose removal is proposed, constitute a quorum: r 7.2. The member of committee whose removal is proposed may attend in person with a nominated representative at any meeting held under this rule in order to state his case, and, once he has done so, he and his nominated representative must withdraw from the meeting while the committee deliberate: r 7.3. To pass a resolution for the removal of a member the resolution must be by way of secret ballot and requires affirmative votes of at least six members of the committee: r 7.4. The person whose removal is proposed may not vote: r 7.4.

1368. Postponement of hearing.

The chairman¹ or the Discipline and Appeals Committee may postpone a hearing at any stage of the proceedings if any party² applies for a postponement or it appears appropriate³. The postponement may be on such terms as the chairman or, as the case may be, the committee thinks fit⁴. The Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁵ must notify all parties and the legal assessor⁶ of such a postponement as soon as possible and must agree a time and date for the postponed hearing⁷.

The Discipline and Appeals Committee may hold a preliminary hearing:

- 2061 (1) in the case of a hearing of an allegation or complaint by the Investigating Committee¹ or a reference by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers² for the revocation of a licence obtained through fraud or error³, in order to ask the respondent whether he admits or denies the allegation or complaint against him⁴; and 1370. Documents.

At least 21 days before the date of a hearing (other than the hearing of an appeal), each party¹ must:

- 2063 (1) supply a collection of copies of all the documents on which that party proposes to rely (other than any affidavit), with all pages numbered, to every other party²; and
- 2064 (2) inform every other party in writing of the address where those documents may be inspected if the appropriate notice is given³.

If a party who proposes to rely on an affidavit is requested in writing by any other party to supply that party with a copy of any document referred to in the affidavit, but not exhibited to it, he must, not later than seven days after receiving the request, supply that party with a copy of it and a notice in writing of the address where the document may be inspected⁴.

Any party may, by notice in writing served not later than 14 days before the day of the hearing, call upon any other party to admit the authenticity of any document⁵. If such a notice is served, the other party is deemed to have admitted the document's authenticity, unless⁶:

- 2065 (a) by a notice in writing served on the first party not later than seven days before the day of the hearing the other party requires its authenticity to be proved at the hearing⁷; or
- 2066 (b) the Discipline and Appeals Committee determines that it should be so proved⁸.

Unless the chairman or the committee directs that service may be effected by another method specified in the direction, service of documents may be effected only⁹:

- 2067 (i) by delivering the document personally¹⁰;
- 2068 (ii) in the case of service on a licensed conveyancer¹¹, by sending it by first class ordinary post addressed to him at his address registered with the Council or one of his places of business or his last known address¹²;
- 2069 (iii) in the case of service on a recognised body¹³ or body corporate, by sending it by first class ordinary post addressed to it at its registered or principal office or its last known address¹⁴;

- 2071 (v) through a document exchange¹⁶; or
- 2072 (vi) by sending it by first class ordinary post to a solicitor who has indicated that he has been instructed to accept service on behalf of the person to be served¹⁷.

Any document to be served on the Council must be served at the principal place of business of the Council¹⁸. Service by post or through a document exchange is deemed to have been effected on the second business day after the document is dispatched¹⁹.

1371. Procedure at hearings in general.

Any hearing before the Discipline and Appeals Committee must be held in public¹. However, if it appears to the committee to be appropriate in the interests of any child or for the protection of the private life of any party or in the interests of justice, it may direct that the public are to be excluded from the whole or part of the proceedings². Additionally, the committee may at any time and for any purpose during or after a hearing deliberate in private, with or without the legal assessor³.

The committee may adjourn the hearing of any proceedings from time to time as it thinks fit⁴.

Any party⁵ may appear at a hearing before the committee in person, by counsel or a solicitor, by an officer or member of any professional organisation of which he is a member, by a licensed conveyancer, or if the party is a recognised body or body corporate, by one of its officers or employees⁶.

If a party fails to appear the committee may proceed to hear and determine the matter in the absence of that party⁷, and if the party who has not appeared is the appellant or applicant, the committee may determine the matter on the evidence before them and may dismiss the appeal or application without hearing any further evidence⁸.

Any party to the proceedings is entitled to a copy of any matters recorded concerning the proceedings and kept by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁹, on payment of the cost of recording them and supplying the copy¹⁰.

Any question put to the vote must be formulated and put to the committee members present by the chairman¹¹, who must call on the committee members present to vote for or against the question and then declare the result¹².

If an equal number of votes is cast for and against the question, the question is deemed to have been determined:

2073 (1) in the case of a hearing of an allegation or complaint or reference¹³ in favour of the respondent¹⁴;

2074 (2) in the case of an application¹⁵, in favour of the applicant¹⁶;

2075 (3) in the case of an appeal¹⁷, in favour of the Council¹⁸; and

2076 (4) in the case of the question whether a hearing is to be postponed, in favour of postponement¹⁹.

Anything authorised or required to be done by the chairman may, if he is absent or unable to act or continue to act, be done by any other member of the committee who is authorised for the purpose by the chairman or, if no person is authorised, by the other members present²⁰.

LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(ii) The Discipline and Appeals Committee/B. HEARINGS/1372. Procedure in the case of references and complaints.

1372. Procedure in the case of references and complaints.

Each allegation or complaint¹ must be read out by the solicitor² in the presence of the parties³ and the legal assessor⁴ appearing at the hearing⁵. If the respondent⁶ has appeared at the hearing, as soon as the allegations or complaints have been read, the chairman must ask him if he wishes to object to any allegation or complaint, or any part of any allegation or complaint, on a point of law⁷. If the respondent so wishes, he may make his objection and any other party may reply to it⁸. If the objection is upheld and no amendment of the allegation or complaint is allowed by the Discipline and Appeals Committee⁹, it must dismiss it¹⁰. If only part of the allegation or complaint is disallowed, no further proceedings may be taken on that part of it¹¹.

The chairman must ask the respondent to respond to each allegation or complaint against him, and his response must be recorded¹². Any qualified or equivocal response by the respondent must be recorded as a denial of the allegation or complaint¹³. Where the respondent unequivocally admits an allegation or complaint the chairman must announce that the allegation or complaint has been admitted and is therefore treated as proved, and follow the procedure specified for such a case¹⁴. Where the respondent denies or is deemed to deny any allegation or complaint, a different procedure is specified¹⁵.

At the conclusion of the hearing the committee must determine which allegations or complaints have been proved to its satisfaction¹⁶. If the committee determines that any allegation or complaint has not been proved to its satisfaction, it must dismiss that allegation or complaint¹⁷. If the committee determines that any allegation or complaint has been proved to its satisfaction:

- 2077 (1) the chairman must invite the solicitor to address the committee and adduce evidence as to the respondent's previous character and history¹⁸;
- 2078 (2) the chairman must then invite the respondent to address the committee by way of mitigation and the respondent may adduce evidence in support¹⁹; and
- 2079 (3) the committee must next decide whether to determine the case immediately or to postpone its determination²⁰.

If some allegations or complaints are admitted but others are denied, the procedure with regard to the admitted allegations²¹ must be postponed until the determination of the denied allegations or complaints²². The procedure relating to mitigation in respect of admitted allegations or complaints must be dealt with in conjunction with mitigation in respect of any disputed allegations or complaints which the committee determines have been proved²³.

A single hearing may be held into allegations or complaints against two or more respondents²⁴. The procedural rules²⁵ apply to such a hearing as they do to a hearing involving one respondent, but with the necessary adaptations and subject to any directions given by the committee as to the order in which proceedings are to be taken in relation to each of the respondents²⁶. In such a hearing the rights of a respondent²⁷ are to be exercised separately by each of the respondents who wishes to exercise them²⁸.

1 The hearings by the committee in the case of a reference or complaint within the Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 3 (see PARA 1359 note 11), or a reference under r 4 (see PARA 1380 note 3): rr 22(1), 30(1). Where a hearing relates to two or more allegations or complaints, or two or more licences or the recognition of two or more bodies, the committee may deal with them separately or together as the chairman thinks fit: rr 22(2), 30(3). In the case of a reference under r 4 the committee may modify the procedure to be adopted in the case of any particular reference in such manner as it thinks fit, having regard to the particular circumstances of the case: r 30(2).

2 'Solicitor', in relation to any function under the Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001, means a solicitor authorised by the Council to act on its behalf for the purposes of that function and, in relation to a hearing, includes counsel instructed to act on the Council's behalf: r 2(1).

12 Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 24(1). If the respondent fails to attend the hearing but the committee decides to proceed in his absence, he is deemed to have denied each allegation or complaint against him, and that must be recorded: r 24(2).

13 Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 24(3).

14 Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 24(4). The specified procedure is that the solicitor must first: (1) summarise the facts supporting the allegation or complaint; (2) specify the circumstances leading up to the conduct or, as the case may be, the conviction in question; and (3) adduce evidence of the previous history and character of the respondent: r 25(1). The chairman must then invite the respondent to make representations to the committee as to any mitigating circumstances and adduce evidence about the mitigating circumstances, if he wishes to do so: r 25(2). The committee must next determine (a) whether there is sufficient evidence or information to conclude the case; and (b) whether to determine the case immediately or to postpone its determination: r 25(3).

15 Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 24(5). In such a case the solicitor must first set out the case against the respondent and then adduce evidence of the allegations or complaint: r 26(1). If the complainant is not called as a witness, he may be heard by the committee if he wishes: r 26(2). If no evidence about an allegation or complaint is given, the committee must determine that it is not satisfied as to it and dismiss it: r 26(3). If the respondent attends the hearing:

600 (1) he may cross-examine any witness and, if the committee has heard the complainant, the complainant;

601 (2) after the solicitor has set out the case against him, the respondent may make one or both of the following submissions about any allegation or complaint in respect of which evidence has been adduced against him: (a) that sufficient evidence has not been adduced on which the committee could find that the facts alleged in the allegation or complaint have been proved; (b) that the facts proved do not support the allegation or complaint: r 26(4).

If the respondent makes such a submission:

602 (i) the solicitor may reply to it;

603 (ii) after hearing the solicitor, the committee must determine whether the submission should be upheld;

604 (iii) if it determines to uphold it, it must dismiss the allegation or complaint; and

605 (iv) if it determines not to uphold it, the proceedings on the application must continue as follows: r 26(5).

The respondent may adduce evidence rebutting any allegation or complaint, and may address the committee (but only once, unless the committee gives leave for a further address), and, if he chooses to adduce evidence, may choose whether to address the committee before beginning to adduce it or after its conclusion: r 26(6). Any witness who gives evidence for the respondent may be cross-examined by the solicitor, and the chairman may permit the respondent to examine the witness further: r 26(7). After that, if the committee permits him to do so, the solicitor may adduce evidence to rebut any evidence adduced by the respondent; and, if he does so, the respondent may make a further address limited to the solicitor's evidence: r 26(8). If evidence, which does not relate to the respondent's character, is given by a person other than the respondent, the solicitor may address the committee by way of reply to the respondent's case; and the committee may permit him to do so when no such evidence has been adduced: r 26(9). If the respondent makes a submission to the committee on a point of law, the solicitor has a right of reply limited to the submission (but without prejudice to his rights to address the committee by way of reply to the respondent's case): r 26(10).

1373. Procedure in the case of applications.

Where an application is made for the removal of disqualification from holding a licence¹, for a licence after a previous licence has been revoked on the ground of fraud², or for grant of recognition after a previous recognition has been revoked on the ground of fraud³, the Discipline and Appeals Committee⁴ must hold a hearing to determine the application⁵. Such a hearing must be opened by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁶ providing the committee with a summary of its previous findings and order⁷. Then the applicant may adduce evidence in support of the application, and then the Council may cross-examine the applicant and any witness called on his behalf⁸. At the conclusion of the case for the applicant the Council may adduce evidence in response and the applicant may then cross-examine any witness called on behalf of the Council⁹.

At any stage of the hearing, the chairman or, with his leave, any other member of the committee or the legal assessor¹⁰ may examine any party¹¹ or witness¹². At the conclusion of the evidence the applicant may address the committee, and then the Council may address the committee, but no further submissions are permitted, unless the chairman allows them¹³.

1374. Procedure on postponement of determination.

Where the Discipline and Appeals Committee¹ postpones making its determination in any case², at the resumed hearing the chairman must invite the solicitor³ to summarise for the information of the committee the proceedings and determinations which have already taken place⁴, and the committee may then hear further evidence⁵ in relation to the conduct and character of the licensed conveyancer⁶ or recognised body⁷ in question⁸.

The licensed conveyancer or recognised body may be heard by the committee and may adduce evidence in respect of the further evidence⁹. If the committee again postpone its determination, the foregoing provisions apply with such modifications as it thinks fit¹⁰.

At any resumed hearing, if a new allegation or complaint has been made against a respondent it must be dealt with first in accordance with the Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001¹¹ and any determination which has already been postponed must be further postponed and dealt with simultaneously with the determination or postponed determination about the new allegation or complaint¹².

1375. Evidence etc.

For the purposes of any disciplinary proceedings¹ before the Discipline and Appeals Committee², the committee may administer oaths, and any party³ to the proceedings may sue out writs of subpoena ad testificandum and of subpoena duces tecum, but no person may be compelled under any such writ to produce any document which he could not be compelled to produce on the trial of an action⁴.

Evidence may, in general, be given in person or by affidavit⁵. However, the evidence of a witness may not be given by affidavit, if the committee so directs⁶, or if notice is served by a party⁷ at least 14 days before the date of the hearing on the person proposing to adduce the evidence that he requires the witness to attend the hearing to give evidence in person⁸. The evidence of a witness may only be given by affidavit if a copy of it has been served on all other parties at least 14 days before the date of the hearing, and sent to the committee and the legal assessor at least seven days before that date⁹, or if all the parties agree¹⁰. If a party proposes to call a witness who has not deposed to an affidavit, the party must, at least 14 days before the date of the hearing, notify all other parties of his proposal to do so¹¹, serve on them a copy of a written statement by the witness¹², and produce the original signed statement at the hearing¹³.

The committee may direct a party to call any person as a witness¹⁴, and may examine any party or witness at any stage of a hearing¹⁵.

In any proceedings before the committee a fact is to be regarded as proved if the committee considers that it has been proved on the balance of probabilities¹⁶, and the committee may consider any evidence which would be admissible in civil proceedings in England or Wales¹⁷. However, in proceedings where a criminal act or any fraud or dishonesty is alleged the allegation is only to be regarded as proved if the committee considers that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt¹⁸, and the committee may only consider evidence which would be admissible in criminal proceedings in England or Wales¹⁹; or which it is satisfied, after consulting with the legal assessor, it is desirable in the interests of justice to consider²⁰. The foregoing provisions do not apply to an allegation with regard to an offence which renders a licensed conveyancer unfit to practise²¹.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(ii) The Discipline and Appeals Committee/B. HEARINGS/1376. Legal assessor.

1376. Legal assessor.

Until a day to be appointed, for the purpose of advising the committee on questions of law arising in disciplinary proceedings¹, there must in all such proceedings be an assessor to the Discipline and Appeals Committee², appointed by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers³.

The Secretary of State may by statutory instrument make rules as to the functions of assessors so appointed; and such rules may contain such provisions as appear to the Secretary of State expedient for securing⁴:

- 2080 (1) that where an assessor advises the committee on any question of law as to evidence, procedure or any other matters specified in the rules, he must do so in the presence of every party to the proceedings, or every person representing such a party, who appears at the proceedings or, if the advice is tendered after the committee has begun to deliberate as to its findings, that every such party or person must be informed what advice the assessor has tendered⁵;
- 2081 (2) that every such party or person must be informed if in any case the committee does not accept the advice of the assessor on any such question⁶, and such incidental and supplementary provisions as appear expedient to the Secretary of State⁷.

An assessor may be appointed either generally or for any particular proceedings or class of proceedings, and holds and vacates office in accordance with the terms of the instrument under which he is appointed⁸. The Council may pay to persons appointed to act as assessors such remuneration as the Council may determine⁹.

It is the duty of the legal assessor (a) to be present at all disciplinary proceedings and advise the committee on any questions of law and the admission of evidence arising from the proceedings which the committee may refer to him¹⁰; and (b) to inform the committee forthwith of any irregularity in the conduct of proceedings before it which may come to his knowledge and to advise the committee of his own motion when it appears to him that, but for such advice, there is a possibility of a mistake of law being made¹¹.

If on any occasion the committee does not accept the advice of the legal assessor, a record must be made of the question referred to him, of the advice given and of the refusal to accept it, together with the reasons for such a refusal, and a copy of the record must be given to every party, or person representing a party, to the proceedings who appears at them¹². Copies of written advice made for these purposes must also be available on application to every party to the proceedings who does not appear at them¹³.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-9--Day appointed in relation to these provisions is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503. See Guidance issued by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers for the appointment, service and duties of Legal Advisers to the Discipline and Appeals Committee.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(ii) The Discipline and Appeals Committee/B. HEARINGS/1377. Proof of conviction.

1377. Proof of conviction.

If it is alleged that a respondent¹ has been convicted of an offence which renders him unfit to practise as a licensed conveyancer² and the respondent denies the allegation or is deemed to have done so, then the conviction must be proved by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers³ by the production of a certificate of conviction or the affidavit of a person who attended the trial⁴.

If the respondent denies a conviction, he may adduce evidence on the question whether he was convicted as alleged, and may address the committee about that question⁵. Only one such address may be made by a respondent and, where the respondent adduces evidence, the address may be made either before that evidence is begun or after it is concluded⁶.

The Council is entitled to reply to any submission made by the respondent and may call evidence in rebuttal⁷. If the Council does call such evidence, the respondent may make a further address limited to the rebutting evidence⁸.

At the conclusion of submissions and the calling of evidence, the committee must determine whether or not the conviction has been proved to its satisfaction⁹. If it is not so satisfied, it must dismiss the allegation or complaint relating to the conviction¹⁰. If it is so satisfied, the conviction is to be admitted in evidence against the respondent¹¹.

2 The such offence as is mentioned in the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(1)(a)(i) (see PARA 1359); or Sch 6 para 3(1)(a)(i) (see PARA 1402): Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 19(1). 1378. Orders which may be made in proceedings in disciplinary cases.

Where, on the hearing of any allegation, the Discipline and Appeals Committee (the committee)¹ is satisfied that a licensed conveyancer²:

- 2082 (1) has been convicted³ of an offence which renders him unfit to practise as a licensed conveyancer⁴;
- 2083 (2) has, while holding a current licence⁵, failed to comply with any condition to which that licence was subject⁶; or
- 2084 (3) has failed to comply with any rules made⁷ by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁸, the committee may, if it thinks fit, make one or more of the following orders⁹. An order:

- 2085 (a) revoking any licence held by the licensed conveyancer;
- 2086 (b) directing that the licensed conveyancer be disqualified from holding a licence (either permanently or during a specified period);
- 2087 (c) suspending any licence held by the licensed conveyancer;
- 2088 (d) that any licence has effect subject to such conditions as may be specified in the order;
- 2089 (e) directing the payment by the licensed conveyancer of a penalty not exceeding £3,000¹⁰, to be forfeited to Her Majesty;
- 2090 (f) that the licensed conveyancer be reprimanded by the Council; and
- 2091 (g) requiring the licensed conveyancer to pay the costs incurred in bringing the proceedings against him before the committee or a contribution towards those costs of such amount as the committee considers reasonable¹¹.

As from a day to be appointed the committee may make such order as it considers fit as to the payment of costs by the Council, the licensed conveyancer against whom the proceedings were brought, and, if the person on whose allegation the proceedings were brought was heard (in person, or through a representative) by the committee in the course of the proceedings, that person¹². At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Where the Discipline and Appeals Committee is considering, or has considered, an application or complaint with respect to a licensed conveyancer, and is of the opinion the Council should consider whether to take any of the specified steps¹³ with respect to that licensed conveyancer, it must inform the Council¹⁴.

1 As to the Discipline and Appeals Committee see PARA 1362.

2 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 26(1). As from a day to be appointed s 26(1) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1, paras 1, 15(1), (2) so that any allegation means an allegation referred to the committee under s 24(1A)(b) (see PARA 1359). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

For these purposes, references to a licensed conveyancer include, in relation to an allegation or complaint which has been referred to the Discipline and Appeals Committee in pursuance of the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 24(3) (see PARA 1359), references to any such person as is mentioned in s 24(3): s 26(4). As to the meaning of 'licensed conveyancer' see PARA 1319 note 3.

8 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 26(1)(c). As to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers see PARA 1320 et seq.

9 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 26(1). A person against whom an order is made by the committee under s 26(1) may appeal to the High Court, and on any such appeal the High Court may make such order as it thinks fit: s 26(7). The decision of the High Court on an appeal under s 26(7) is final: s 26(8). For guidelines on the approach to be taken by the committee see Holwell v Council for Licensed Conveyancers (1988) Times, 8 July, DC (where a licensed conveyancer's contention that the standards required of licensed conveyancers were lower than those expected of solicitors was rejected). The proper test to be applied by the court is whether the committee is shown by the record to have been plainly wrong; where that has not been established, the appeal will be dismissed: Holwell v Council for Licensed Conveyancers.

Every order of the committee must be filed with the Council, together with a statement of the committee's findings signed by the chairman or by some other member of the committee authorised by him for the purpose: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 30, Sch 4 para 4(1). Any such file may be inspected during office hours without payment: Sch 4 para 4(2). An order which has been filed is treated for enforcement purposes as if it had been made by the High Court: Sch 4 para 4(3).

10 If it appears to the Lord Chancellor that there has been a change in the value of money since the relevant date, he may by order substitute for the sum specified as the penalty such other sum as appears to him to be justified by the change: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 26(5). Any such order must be made by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 26(5). 'Relevant date' means (1) in relation to the first order under s 26(5), 11 May 1987; (2) in relation to each subsequent order, the last occasion when the specified sum was altered: s 26(6); Administration of Justice Act 1985 (Commencement No 4) Order 1987, SI 1987/787. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such order had been made.

As from a day to be appointed s 26(2) is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 15(1), (3)(a) to replace the specified sum with a Council power to specify the amount by rules; s 26(5), (6) are correspondingly repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 15(1), (5). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

11 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 26(2). As from a day to be appointed s 26(2)(f), (g) (heads (f), (g) in the text) are respectively substituted and repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 15(1), (3)(b), (c) and replaced by the power to make an order reprimanding a licensed conveyancer. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

12 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 26(2A) (s 26(2A), (2B) (7A) prospectively added, (8) prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 15(1), (4), (6), (7)). Where such an order is made against the Council or the licensed conveyancer against whom proceedings were brought, the reference to costs includes costs incurred in connection with a preliminary investigation of the allegation under s 24(1A) (see PARA 1359): s 26(2B) (as so prospectively added). Where the committee makes such an order, the person against whom it is made may appeal to the High Court, and on any such appeal the High Court may make such order as it thinks fit: s 24(7A) (as so prospectively added). The decision of the High Court is final: s 24(8) (as so prospectively amended).

13 le any of the steps specified in the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 53(7), Sch 8 para 15: see PARA 1383.

14 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 20. As from a day to be appointed Sch 8 para 20 is repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 208(1), 210, Sch 21 paras 83, 100(e), Sch 23. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Removal of disqualification from holding a licence

Day appointed for the purpose of these provisions is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(ii) The Discipline and Appeals Committee/B. HEARINGS/1379. Removal of disqualification from holding a licence.

1379. Removal of disqualification from holding a licence.

Where the Discipline and Appeals Committee¹ has made an order disqualifying a person from holding a licence to practise as a licensed conveyancer², that person must not be issued with a licence while his disqualification continues in force, unless the committee directs otherwise following an application made to it in that behalf³. Such an application may not be made to the committee within ten months of (1) the date of the committee's order; or (2) a previous such application by that person⁴. As from a day to be appointed, in relation to proceedings on such an application the committee may make such order as it considers fit as to the payment of costs by the Council or the applicant⁵. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Where the committee has made any order directing that a licensed conveyancer is to be disqualified, either permanently or during a specified period, from holding an advocacy licence⁶, a litigation licence⁷ or a probate licence⁸, he may not, while his disqualification continues in force, be issued with a licence of a kind to which the disqualification relates unless the committee directs otherwise on an application made to it in that behalf⁹. Such an application may not be made to the committee (a) within ten months of the date of the committee's order relating to the kind of licence in question; or (b) within ten months of a previous such application by the licensed conveyancer concerned with respect to that kind of licence¹⁰. As from a day to be appointed, in relation to proceedings on such an application the committee may make such order as it considers fit as to the payment of costs by the Council or the applicant¹¹. 1380. Revocation of licence on grounds of fraud or error.

Where the Discipline and Appeals Committee¹ is satisfied that a licence² was issued to a person as a result of any error, or as a result of fraud on the part of that person, the committee may, if it thinks fit, revoke the licence by order³. The committee may also revoke any other relevant licence⁴ issued to that person⁵.

A person may be issued with a licence notwithstanding that a licence previously held by him has been revoked under these provisions; but if it was revoked on the ground of fraud he may not be issued with a licence except on an application made in that behalf to the committee⁶. On any such application, the committee may, if it thinks fit, direct that the applicant be disqualified from holding a licence until the expiration of such period as may be specified in the direction⁷.

1 As to the Discipline and Appeals Committee see PARA 1362.

2 As to the meaning of 'licence' see PARA 1319 note 3.

3 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 28(1). Where it is considered that a licence was issued to any person as a result of error or of fraud on his part, and the Council for Licensed Conveyancers decides that there is any question of the committee exercising its powers under s 28(1) the Council must refer the matter to the committee: Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 4(1). Such a reference under this rule must be made in writing, state that it is made under this r 4, and set out the allegation and a summary of the facts relied on to support it: r 4(3). A copy of such a reference must be served on the respondent, together with a copy of the Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001: r 4(4). On such a reference, the committee must hold a hearing to determine the allegation: r 4(5). As to the statutory instrument containing those rules see PARA 1365 note 12. As to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers see PARA 1320 et seq. As to the procedure which then pertains see PARA 1365 et seq. As to the meaning of 'respondent' see PARA 1367 note 8.

As from a day to be appointed, in relation to proceedings for the revocation of a licence the committee may make such order as it considers fit with regard to the payment of costs by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers or the licensed conveyancer to whose licence the proceedings relate: s 28(5) (s 28(5), (6) prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 paras 1, 17). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers see PARA 1320 et seq.

4 'Relevant licence' means a licence under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 Pt II (ss 11-39) (see PARAS 1319 et seq, 1381 et seq) or an advocacy, litigation or probate licence: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 1. As to the meaning of 'advocacy licence', 'litigation licence' and 'probate licence' see PARA 1332 notes 16-18.

5 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 53(7), Sch 8 para 10(1). As from a day to be appointed, in relation to proceedings for the revocation of a licence the committee may make such order as it considers fit with regard to the payment of costs by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers or the licensed conveyancer to whose licence the proceedings relate: Sch 8 para 10(5) (para 10(5), (6) prospectively added by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 2 paras 33, 35(1), (8)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 28(2). Such an application must be made in writing, sent to the Council's principal place of business, specify the statutory provision under which it is made, and set out any facts which support the application: Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 5. An applicant may amend the facts set out in his application by serving an amended notice under r 8 (see PARA 1367), but the consent of the committee is required for an amendment less than 21 days before the date of the hearing: see r 14(1). Where an amendment is made the committee may, on application by the respondent, postpone the hearing: 14(2). As to the procedure with regard to hearings before the Discipline and Appeals Committee see PARA 1364 et seq. The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 provides that no relevant licence may be issued to a person who has had a relevant licence revoked except on the advice of the committee given to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers as the result of an application made by that person to the committee: see Sch 8 para 10(2).

As from a day to be appointed, in relation to proceedings on an application under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 28(2), or the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 10(2) the committee may make such order as it considers fit with regard to the payment of costs by the Council or the applicant: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 28(6) (as prospectively added: see note 3); Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 10(6) (as prospectively added: see note 5).

7 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 28(3). Section 27 (see PARA 1379) applies in relation to a direction under s 28(3) as it applies in relation to any such order as is referred to in s 26(2)(b) (see PARA 1378): s 28(4).

The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 provides that on an application under Sch 8 para 10 the committee may, if it thinks fit, direct that the applicant be disqualified from holding any relevant licence, or a relevant licence of a specified kind, until the expiry of such period as may be specified in the direction: see Sch 8 para 10(3). Schedule 8 para 9 (see PARA 1379) applies in relation to such a direction as it applies in relation to any direction of a kind mentioned in Sch 8 para 9(1): Sch 8 para 10(4).

UPDATE

1381 Appeals from decisions in relation to licences

NOTES 6, 8--Day appointed is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(ii) The Discipline and Appeals Committee/C. APPEALS/1382. Procedure in the case of appeals.

1382. Procedure in the case of appeals.

An appeal¹ to the Discipline and Appeals Committee² is not by way of a full rehearing and must be conducted in accordance with the following procedure³.

The evidence which may be considered is limited to documents showing or recording the evidence which was before the Council at the time of the refusal or decision which is the subject of the appeal and relates to the grounds of the appeal, and fresh evidence may only be considered if⁴:

- 2096 (1) the committee is satisfied that it could not previously have been obtained with reasonable diligence, and if it had been before the Council for Licensed Conveyancers it would have had an important influence upon the determination of the matter⁵; or
- 2097 (2) it relates to conduct which occurred after the date of the refusal or decision which is the subject of the appeal⁶.

The committee may hold a preliminary hearing for determining issues relating to the production of fresh evidence and the conduct of the appeal, and may give directions about the conduct of the appeal at such a preliminary hearing, or the chairman may do so without a hearing⁷. Unless a collection of all the documents relevant to determination of the matter which is the subject of the appeal with an index at the front and all pages numbered has been prepared by the appellant or, at his request and expense, by the Council, and served in duplicate on the Council at least 21 days before the date of the hearing of the appeal, the committee may dismiss the appeal⁸. If any party to the appeal wishes to raise a point of law, he must serve a notice, summarising the point and his argument about it, on every other party and the legal assessor⁹ at least 14 days before the date it is heard¹⁰. The chairman may examine any party or witness at any stage of the hearing and with the chairman's consent any member of the committee or the legal assessor may do so¹¹.

LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(iii) Inadequate Professional Services/1383. Steps which may be taken in respect of inadequate professional services.

(iii) Inadequate Professional Services

1383. Steps which may be taken in respect of inadequate professional services.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Where it appears to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers² that the professional services provided by a licensed conveyancer³ in connection with any matter in which he or his firm has been instructed by a client⁴ were in any respect not of the quality that could reasonably have been expected of him as a licensed conveyancer, the Council may, if it thinks fit take any of the following steps⁵:

- 2098 (1) determining that the costs to which the licensed conveyancer is entitled in respect of his services are to be limited to such amount as may be specified in the determination and directing him to comply, or to secure compliance, with such one or more of the permitted requirements⁶ as appear to the Council to be necessary in order to give effect to its determination⁷;
- 2099 (2) directing him to secure the rectification, at his expense or at that of his firm, of any such error, omission or other deficiency arising in connection with the matter in question as the Council may specify⁸;
- 2100 (3) directing him to pay such compensation to the client, not exceeding £5,000⁹, as the Council sees fit to specify¹⁰;
- 2101 (4) directing him to take such other action in the interests of the client, at his expense or at that of his firm, as the Council may specify¹¹.

The Council may not take any of these steps unless it is satisfied that in all the circumstances of the case it is appropriate to do so¹².

If a licensed conveyancer fails to comply with a direction given under these provisions, any person may make a complaint in respect of that failure to the Discipline and Appeals Committee¹³, but no other proceedings whatever may be brought in respect of it¹⁴.

The Council may, by regulations made with the concurrence of the Secretary of State, make provision for the payment of a prescribed¹⁵ fee by any client with respect to whom the Council is asked to consider whether to take any of the steps in heads (1) to (4) above¹⁶. Where a client pays the prescribed fee it must be repaid to him if the Council takes any of the steps in the matter with respect to which the fee was paid¹⁷.

1 As from a day to be appointed the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 53(7), Sch 8 paras 14-20 are repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 208(1), 210, Sch 21 paras 83, 100(e), Sch 23. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. For transitional provisions see the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 22 para 8.

2 As to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers see PARA 1320 et seq.

3 As to the meaning of 'licensed conveyancer' see PARA 1319 note 3. The Council's powers under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 14 (see the text and note 4) are exercisable in relation to a person who was a licensed conveyancer at the material time, even though he no longer is a licensed conveyancer and references to a licensed conveyancer for these purposes and for the purposes of Sch 8 paras 15-20 (see the text and notes 5-16), so far as they relate to the exercise of those powers, are to be construed accordingly: Sch 8 para 14(4) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1).

4 As to the meaning of 'client' for these purposes see PARA 1353 note 5 (definition contained in the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 39(1)).

5 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 14(1) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). The Council's power to take any such steps is not confined to cases where the client may have a cause of action against the licensed conveyancer for negligence: Sch 8 para 15(3) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). This power has been delegated by the Council to the Investigating Committee: see the Council For Licensed Conveyancers' Investigating Committee Rules 2004 r 6. As to the Investigating Committee see PARA 1359 et seq.

The power is also exercisable, with modifications, in relation to a recognised body: see the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 32(7), Sch 6 para 4(3A); and PARA 1403. As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 1392 note 14.

6 The permitted requirements are (1) that the whole or part of any amount already paid by or on behalf of the client in respect of the costs be refunded; (2) that the whole or part of those costs be remitted; (3) that the right to recover those costs be waived, whether wholly or to any specified extent: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 15(2) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). 'Costs' means the costs to which the licensed conveyancer is entitled in respect of his services: Sch 8 para 15(1)(a) (as so prospectively repealed).

7 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 15(1)(a) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). As to the delegation of this power to the Investigating Committee see note 4.

8 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 15(1)(b) (as so prospectively repealed). As to the delegation of this power to the Investigating Committee see note 4.

9 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 16(1) (amended by the Licensed Conveyancers (Compensation for Inadequate Professional Services) Order 2000, SI 2000/643, art 2; and as prospectively repealed: see note 1). The Secretary of State may by order made by statutory instrument (subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament) amend Sch 8 para 16(1) by substituting such other sum as he considers appropriate: Sch 8 para 16(2), (4) (Sch 8 para 16(2) amended by SI 2003/1887; and as so prospectively repealed). Before making any such order the Secretary of State must consult the Council: Sch 8 para 16(3) (para 16(3) amended by the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs Order 2003, SI 2003/1887, art 9, Sch 2 para 8(1)(d); and as so prospectively repealed). As to the delegation of this power to the Investigating Committee see note 4.

10 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 15(1)(c) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). See also R v Council for Licensed Conveyancers, ex p Watson (2000) Times, 16 July. As to the delegation of this power to the Investigating Committee see note 4.

11 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 15(1)(d) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). As to the delegation of this power to the Investigating Committee see note 15.

12 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 14(2) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). In determining in any case whether it is appropriate to take any of the steps, the Council may have regard to (1) the existence of any remedy which it is reasonable to expect to be available to the client in civil proceedings; and (2) whether it is reasonable to expect him to begin such proceedings where proceedings seeking any such remedy have not been begun by him: Sch 8 para 14(3) (as so prospectively repealed). As to the delegation of this power to the Investigating Committee see note 4.

13 As to the Discipline and Appeals Committee see PARA 1362.

14 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 17(1) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). A reference in the form of a complaint by the Council to the Discipline and Appeals Committee under Sch 8 para 17(1) must be made in writing, specify the statutory provision under which it is made, and set out the allegation or complaint and a summary of the facts relied on to support it: Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 3(1). A copy of such a complaint must be served on the respondent, together with a copy of the Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001, and a copy lodged with the chairman of the committee, within 14 days of the making of the reference or the decision to make the complaint: r 3(2). A complainant other than the Council wishing to refer a complaint to the committee must comply with the provisions above, save as to the reference to time, and in addition must at the same time serve a copy of the complaint on the Council: r 3(3). As to the statutory instrument containing those rules see PARA 1365 note 12. As to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers see PARA 1320. As to the procedure which then pertains see PARA 1367 et seq. As to the meaning of 'respondent' see PARA 1367 note 8.

On the hearing of such a complaint the committee may, if it thinks fit, and whether or not it makes any order under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 26(2) (see PARA 1378), direct that the direction be treated, for the purpose of enforcement, as if it were contained in an order made by the High Court: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 17(2) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). Where the committee is considering or has considered an application or complaint with respect to a licensed conveyancer and is of the opinion that the Council should consider whether to take any of the steps with respect to him, it must inform the Council: Sch 8 para 20 (as so prospectively repealed). As to the power to examine files see Sch 8 para 21; and PARA 1390.

15 'Prescribed' means prescribed by the regulations: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 18(4) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1).

16 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 18(1) (amended by SI 2003/1887; and as prospectively repealed: see note 1). The regulations may provide for the exemption of such classes of client as may be prescribed: Sch 8 para 18(2) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). This power has been delegated by the Council to the Investigating Committee: see the Council For Licensed Conveyancers' Investigating Committee Rules 2004 r 6.

17 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 8 para 18(3) (as prospectively repealed: see note 1). Where the Council takes any of the steps with respect to a licensed conveyancer it may also direct him to pay to the Council (1) the amount of the fee so repayable by the Council to the client; and (2) an amount which is calculated by the Council as the cost to it of dealing with the complaint, or which in its opinion represents a reasonable contribution towards that cost: Sch 8 para 19 (as so prospectively repealed). As to the delegation of this power to the Investigating Committee see note 15.

(iv) Intervention by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers

1384. Circumstances in which the Council for Licensed Conveyancers may intervene.

The intervention powers conferred¹ on the Council for Licensed Conveyancers² are exercisable³ where:

- 2102 (1) the Council has reason to suspect dishonesty⁴ on the part of a licensed conveyancer⁵, an employee or associate⁶ of a licensed conveyancer or the personal representatives of a deceased licensed conveyancer, in connection with that licensed conveyancer's practice⁷;
- 2103 (2) following the death of a licensed conveyancer who immediately before his death was practising as a sole practitioner⁸, the Council considers that there has been undue delay on the part of that person's personal representatives in connection with his practice⁹;
- 2104 (3) the Council is satisfied that a licensed conveyancer has failed to comply with any rules¹⁰ relating to the keeping of accounts and client accounts and to the interest on clients' money¹¹;
- 2105 (4) a licensed conveyancer has made a composition or arrangement with his creditors¹²;
- 2106 (5) a licensed conveyancer has been committed to prison in any civil or criminal proceedings¹³;
- 2107 (6) the Council is satisfied that a licensed conveyancer practising as a sole practitioner is incapacitated by illness or accident to such an extent as to be unable to attend to his practice¹⁴;
- 2108 (7) a judge's emergency powers in relation to the property and affairs of a person suffering from mental disorder have been exercised in respect of a licensed conveyancer¹⁵;
- 2109 (8) the licence¹⁶ held by any person:
 - 37 29. (a) has been suspended or has terminated¹⁷; or
 - 30. (b) has been revoked or suspended by an order of the Discipline and Appeals Committee¹⁸; or
 - 31. (c) has expired and no further licence has been issued to him¹⁹;
- 38 2110 (9) the Council is satisfied that a sole licensed conveyancer has abandoned his practice²⁰; or
- 2111 (10) the Council is satisfied that a licensed conveyancer has been practising in breach of any condition imposed on him in connection with any relevant licence²¹ of his²².

On the death of a licensed conveyancer who immediately before his death was practising as a sole practitioner, certain powers²³ exercisable on intervention apply to the client accounts of his practice²⁴.

The Council's intervention powers are also exercisable²⁵ where:

- 2112 (i) a complaint is made to the Council that there has been undue delay on the part of a licensed conveyancer in connection with any matter in which he or his firm was instructed on behalf of a client²⁶; and
- 2113 (ii) the Council by notice in writing invites the conveyancer to give an explanation within such period following the giving of the notice as may be specified, being a period of not less than eight days²⁷; and
- 2114 (iii) the conveyancer fails to give an explanation which the Council regards as satisfactory within that period²⁸; and
- 2115 (iv) the Council gives notice of the failure to the conveyancer and (at the same or any later time) notice that those intervention powers are accordingly exercisable in his case²⁹.

Where the intervention powers are exercisable in relation to a licensed conveyancer, they continue to be exercisable after his death or after his licence has been revoked or suspended or has otherwise ceased to be in force³⁰.

3 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 31(1).

4 As from a day to be appointed the intervention powers are also exercisable where the Council has reason to suspect dishonesty on the part of a licensed conveyancer in connection with: (1) the business of any person of whom that licensed conveyancer is or was an employee, or of any body of which he is or was a manager; or (2) any business which is or was carried on by that licensed conveyancer as a sole trader: Administration of Justice Act 1985 Sch 5 para 1(1)(aa) (prospectively added by Legal Services Act 2007 s 182, Sch 17 Pt 1 para 31(1), (2)(b)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 Any reference for these purposes to a licensed conveyancer practising as a sole practitioner is a reference to a licensed conveyancer practising either as the sole principal in the practice or in partnership with other persons of whom none is a licensed conveyancer: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 39(2).

UPDATE

1384 Circumstances in which the Council for Licensed Conveyancers may intervene

NOTES--Day appointed in relation to amendments made by Legal Services Act 2007 Schs 17, 23 is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(iv) Intervention by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers/1385. Powers exercisable on intervention in relation to money.

1385. Powers exercisable on intervention in relation to money.

The High Court, on the application of the Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹, may order that no payment may be made without the leave of the court by any person (whether or not named in the order) of any money held by him on behalf of the licensed conveyancer² or his firm³. A person is not treated as having disobeyed such an order by making a payment of money if he satisfies the court that he exercised due diligence to ascertain whether it was money to which the order related but nevertheless failed to ascertain that the order related to it⁴.

Without prejudice to the above provisions, if the Council passes a resolution to the effect that any specified sums of money⁵, and the right to recover or receive them, are to vest in the Council, all such sums vest accordingly (whether received by the person holding them before or after the Council's resolution) and are held by the Council on trust to exercise in relation to them the intervention powers conferred on the Council and, subject to those powers⁶, on trust for the persons beneficially entitled to them⁷. The Council must serve on the licensed conveyancer or his firm and on any other person having possession of specified sums of money⁸ a certified copy of the Council's resolution and a notice prohibiting the payment out of any such sums of money⁹. If any person on whom such a notice has been served pays out sums of money at a time when such payment is prohibited by the notice, he is guilty of an offence¹⁰. The person on whom such a notice was served may apply¹¹ to the High Court for an order directing the Council to withdraw the notice¹²; and if the court makes such an order, it has power also to make such other order with respect to the matter as it may think fit¹³.

As from a day to be appointed, and without prejudice to the above provisions, if the Council passes a resolution to the effect that any right to recover or receive debts due to the licensed conveyancer or his firm in connection with his practice or former practice¹⁴ vests in the Council, those rights vest accordingly¹⁵. Any sums recovered by the Council by virtue of the exercise of such rights vest in the Council and must be held by it on trust to exercise in relation to them the intervention powers conferred on the Council¹⁶, and subject to those powers and to any relevant rules¹⁷, upon trust for the persons beneficially entitled to them¹⁸. The Council must serve on the licensed conveyancer or his firm, and any person who owes a debt to which the order applies a certified copy of the its resolution¹⁹. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

If the Council takes possession of any specified sum of money²⁰, the Council must pay it into a special account in the name of the Council or of a person nominated on behalf of the Council²¹. Any such person holds that sum on trust to permit the Council to exercise in relation to it the intervention powers conferred on the Council and, subject to those powers²², on trust for the persons beneficially entitled to it²³. A bank or other financial institution at which a special account is kept is, however, under no obligation to ascertain whether it is being dealt with properly²⁴.

If the High Court is satisfied, on an application by the Council, that there is reason to suspect that any person holds money on behalf of the licensed conveyancer or his firm, the court may²⁵ require that person to give the Council information as to any such money and the accounts in which it is held²⁶.

These powers in relation to sums of money are exercisable notwithstanding any lien on them or right to their possession²⁷.

TEXT AND NOTES--Day appointed in relation to these provisions is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(iv) Intervention by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers/1386. Powers exercisable on intervention in relation to documents.

1386. Powers exercisable on intervention in relation to documents.

The Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ may give notice to the licensed conveyancer² or his firm³ requiring the production or delivery of certain documents⁴ to any person appointed by the Council at a time and place to be fixed by the Council⁵. Except in a case where an application has been made to the High Court⁶, if any person having possession of any such documents refuses, neglects or otherwise fails to comply with such a requirement, he is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale⁷.

The person appointed by the Council may take possession of any such documents on behalf of the Council⁸.

The High Court, on the application of the Council, may order a person so required to produce or deliver documents to produce or deliver them to any person appointed by the Council at such time and place as may be specified in the order, and authorise the person so appointed to take possession of them on behalf of the Council⁹. If, on an application by the Council, the High Court is satisfied that there is reason to suspect that documents in relation to which the powers to require production or delivery are exercisable have come into the possession of some person other than the licensed conveyancer or his firm, the court may order that person to produce or deliver the documents to any person appointed by the Council at such time and place as may be specified in the order and authorise the person so appointed to take possession of them on behalf of the Council¹⁰.

On making an order under these provisions, or at any later time, the court, on the application of the Council, may authorise a person appointed by the Council to enter any premises (using such force as is reasonably necessary) to search for and take possession of any documents to which the order relates¹¹.

The Council, on taking possession of any documents under these provisions, must serve upon the licensed conveyancer or his personal representatives and on any other person from whom they were received on the Council's behalf or from whose premises they were taken a notice that possession has been taken on the date specified in the notice¹². A person on whom such a notice is served may apply¹³ to the High Court for an order directing the Council to deliver the documents to such person as the applicant may require¹⁴. On such an application the court may make such order as it thinks fit¹⁵.

The Council may¹⁶ apply to the High Court for an order as to the disposal or destruction of any documents in its possession¹⁷ and the court may make such order as it thinks fit¹⁸.

Except so far as its right to do so may be restricted by an order on any such application¹⁹, the Council may take copies of or extracts from any documents in its possession and require any person to whom it is proposed to deliver such documents to give a reasonable undertaking to supply copies or extracts to the Council as a condition precedent to delivery²⁰.

These powers in relation to documents are exercisable notwithstanding any lien on them or right to their possession²¹.

NOTES--Day appointed in relation to amendments made by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 17 para 31 is 31 March 2009: SI 2009/503.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(6) DISCIPLINARY AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS/(iv) Intervention by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers/1387. Powers exercisable on intervention in relation to mail and other redirected communications.

1387. Powers exercisable on intervention in relation to mail and other redirected communications.

Until a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The High Court, on the application of the Council for Licensed Conveyancers², may from time to time order that, for such time not exceeding 18 months as the court thinks fit, postal packets³ addressed to the licensed conveyancer⁴ or his firm⁵ at any place or places mentioned in the order are to be redirected to the Council or any person appointed by the Council at any other address mentioned in the order⁶. The Council, or that person on its behalf, may take possession of any such packets received at that address⁷. The Council may apply to the High Court for an order as to the disposal or destruction of any documents in its possession by virtue of these provisions⁸.

As from that day, the following provisions have effect⁹. The High Court, on the application of the Council, may from time to time make a communications redirection order¹⁰, which is to say, an order that specified communications¹¹ to the licensed conveyancer or his firm are to be directed, in accordance with the order, to the Council, or any person appointed by the Council¹². Such an order has effect for such time not exceeding 18 months as is specified in the order¹³. Where a communications redirection order has effect, the Council or the person appointed by the Council may take possession or receipt of the communications redirected in accordance with the order¹⁴. Where a communications redirection order is made the Council must pay (in the case of an order relating to postal packets¹⁵) the postal operator¹⁶ concerned, or (in any other case) the person specified in the order, the like charges (if any) as would have been payable for the redirection of the communications to which the order relates if the addressee had permanently ceased to occupy or use the premises or other destination of the communications and had applied to the postal operator or the specified person (as the case may be) to redirect the communications to him as mentioned in the order¹⁷. The High Court may, on the application of the Council, authorise the Council, or a person appointed by it, to take such steps as may be specified in the order in relation to any website purporting to be or have been maintained by or on behalf of the licensed conveyancer or his firm if the High Court is satisfied that the taking of those steps is necessary to protect the public interest or the interests of clients (or potential or former clients) of the licensed conveyancer or his firm¹⁸.

Communications redirection orders do not apply where the powers of intervention¹⁹ are exercisable by virtue of an undue delay²⁰.

- 2117 (2) prescribing the circumstances in which such bodies may be recognised by the Council as being suitable bodies to undertake the provision of such services⁸;

As from a day to be appointed, the Council may also make rules prescribing the Council's arrangements for authorising recognised bodies, for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, to carry on reserved instrument activities, or the administration of oaths, within the meaning of that Act¹¹. - 2122 (c) as to the period for which any recognition granted¹⁵ is to remain in force¹⁶;
- 2123 (d) for the imposition by the Council, when granting recognition of a body corporate, of restrictions on the kinds of conveyancing and other professional services that it may undertake to provide as a recognised body, and for enabling such restrictions to be imposed by reference to criteria of general application¹⁷;

On an application made by a recognised body¹², the Council may, in such circumstances as may be prescribed, direct the removal of a condition subject to which the body's recognition has effect, or the variation of such a condition in the manner described in the application¹³.

Rules so made may make provision about when conditions imposed take effect (including provision conferring power on the Council to direct that a condition is not to have effect until the conclusion of any appeal in relation to it)¹⁴, and may contain such incidental, supplemental, transitional or transitory provisions or savings as the Council considers necessary or expedient¹⁵.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(7) RECOGNISED BODIES/1399. Issue, refusal and duration of certificate of recognition.

1399. Issue, refusal and duration of certificate of recognition.

Where the Council for Licensed Conveyancers¹ grants recognition² it may issue to the applicant a certificate³ free of restrictions, or a certificate which imposes such restrictions as the Council thinks fit on the kinds of conveyancing services⁴ that the company⁵ may undertake to provide as a recognised body⁶. Every certificate may be sent by the Council by post to the applicant at its registered address or to such other address as may be specified in writing by the recognised body to the Council⁷.

In any case where the Council decides to refuse an application for recognition, it must notify the applicant of that refusal and of the grounds on which the application has been refused⁸. Where an application for a certificate has been made⁹ and the Council has within 42 days beginning with the date when the application was received neither issued a certificate in pursuance of the application nor refused it then the application is deemed to have been so refused and the applicant is deemed to have been notified of the refusal at the end of that period¹⁰.

A certificate is in force for the period of 12 months beginning with the date of its issue, or such other period as may be specified in the certificate of recognition¹¹. If an application for a certificate is made¹² and at the date of the application the recognised body already holds a current certificate but no new certificate is issued to it in pursuance of the application before the time when its existing certificate would, apart from this rule, expire in accordance with the foregoing provisions the existing certificate does not expire at that time but continues in force until a new certificate is issued to it, or, if the application is refused by the Council or is deemed to have been so refused until the end of the period within which an appeal may be brought against the refusal¹³.

When an applicant for a certificate has held such a certificate at any time within the period of 12 months ending with the date of its application, any certificate granted to it in pursuance of the application is, unless the Council directs otherwise, deemed to have been issued on the date following the date when its previous certificate expired¹⁴ and accordingly to have been held by it as from that day¹⁵.

1402. Disciplinary control of recognised bodies.

The following additional functions¹ are conferred on the Investigating Committee² and the Discipline and Appeals Committee³.

The Investigating Committee must carry out a preliminary investigation of any case in which (1) it is alleged that a recognised body⁴ has been convicted (while a recognised body) by any court in the United Kingdom⁵ of a criminal offence which renders it unsuitable to be recognised⁶ or has failed to comply with any rules⁷ applicable to it⁸; or (2) a complaint is made to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁹ by or on behalf of a member of the public about a recognised body¹⁰. This investigation is made with a view to determining whether the case ought to be referred to the Discipline and Appeals Committee for hearing and determination¹¹ by that committee¹². As from a day to be appointed the Investigating Committee must also carry out a preliminary investigation of any case in which (a) it is alleged that a manager or employee of a recognised body who is not a licensed conveyancer has failed to comply with any rules¹³ applicable to him¹⁴; or (b) it is alleged that a recognised body (while a recognised body) has failed to comply with a condition subject to which its recognition has effect¹⁵.

After making such an investigation, the Investigating Committee may hear and determine the allegation¹⁶, or refer it to the Discipline and Appeals Committee for hearing and determination¹⁷ by that committee¹⁸. The Council must make rules as to the cases in which the Investigating Committee may hear and determine an allegation, and the cases in which they must refer an allegation to the Discipline and Appeals Committee¹⁹. Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/5. LICENSED CONVEYANCERS/(7) RECOGNISED BODIES/1403. Hearing and determination of allegations.

1403. Hearing and determination of allegations.

Where on the hearing of any allegation the Discipline and Appeals Committee¹ is satisfied that a recognised body (1) has been convicted of a criminal offence²; (2) has failed to comply with any rules³ applicable to it; or, as from a day to be appointed, (3) has failed to comply with a required condition⁴, the committee may, if it thinks fit, make one or more of the specified⁵ orders⁶. A body corporate in respect of which such an order is made may appeal to the High Court, and on any such appeal the court may make such order as it thinks fit⁷.

Where it appears to the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁸ that the professional services provided by a recognised body in connection with any matter in which it has been instructed by a client⁹ have, in any respect, not been of the quality which it is reasonable to expect of that body, the Council may take any such step with respect to that recognised body as it could take¹⁰ with respect to a licensed conveyancer in similar circumstances¹¹.

As from a day to be appointed, where, on the hearing of any allegation that a manager or employee has failed to comply with the applicable rules¹², the committee is satisfied that a manager or employee has so failed to comply with those rules, it may, if it thinks fit, make one or more of the following orders¹³:

- 2160 (a) an order directing the payment by the manager or employee of a penalty not exceeding such amount as may be prescribed by rules made by the Council for these purposes¹⁴;
- 2161 (b) an order requiring the Council to consider taking such steps as the committee may specify in relation to the manager or employee¹⁵;
- 2162 (c) an order requiring the Council to refer to an appropriate regulator¹⁶ any matter relating to the conduct of the manager or employee¹⁷.

In relation to such proceedings, the committee may make such order as it considers fit as to the payment of costs by the Council, the recognised body or manager or employee against whom the proceedings were brought, or, if the person on whose allegation the proceedings were brought was heard (in person, or through a representative) by the committee in the course of the proceedings, that person¹⁸.

At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Where (i) an order is made¹⁹ by the committee in the case of a director²⁰ of a recognised body; or (ii) any such order is made in the case of a person employed by a recognised body and the act or omission constituting the ground on which the order was made was instigated or connived at by a director of the recognised body or, if an act or omission was a continuing act or omission, a director of the body had or reasonably ought to have had knowledge of its continuance, the committee may, if it thinks fit, by order revoke the recognition²¹ of that body²². A body corporate in respect of which such an order is made may appeal to the High Court, and on any such appeal the court may make such order as it thinks fit²³.

As from a day to be appointed, where, on hearing an allegation²⁴, the Investigating Committee²⁵ is satisfied that a recognised body, manager or employee has failed to comply with any applicable rules²⁶ or that a recognised body has failed to comply with any relevant condition²⁷, the Investigating Committee may make an order directing the payment by the recognised body, manager or employee of a penalty to be forfeited to Her Majesty²⁸.

In relation to such proceedings the Investigating Committee may make such order as it considers fit as to the payment of costs by the Council, the recognised body, manager or employee against whom the proceedings were brought, or, if the person on whose allegation the proceedings were brought was heard (in person, or through a representative) by the Investigating Committee in the course of the proceedings, that person²⁹.

1404. Revocation of recognition on grounds of fraud or error.

Where the Discipline and Appeals Committee¹ is satisfied that the recognition² of a body corporate was granted as a result of any error, or as a result of fraud on the part of that body, the committee may, if it thinks fit, by order revoke that body's recognition³. As from a day to be appointed, and in relation to such proceedings, the committee may make such order as it considers fit as to the payment of costs by the Council for Licensed Conveyancers⁴, or the body to whose recognition the proceedings relate⁵. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

A body corporate may be granted recognition⁶ notwithstanding that any recognition previously granted to it has been revoked under the above provision; but if any such recognition was so revoked on the ground of fraud that body may not be granted recognition except on an application made in that behalf to the committee⁷. As from a day to be appointed, and in relation to such proceedings, the committee may make such order as it considers fit as to the payment of costs by the Council, or the applicant⁸. Where it is considered that recognition was granted to any body as a result of error or of fraud on its part, and the Council for Licensed Conveyancers decides that there is any question of the committee exercising its powers under Sch 6 para 7(1) the Council must refer the matter to the Committee: Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001 r 4(2). Such a reference under this rule must be made in writing, state that it is made under this r 4, and set out the allegation and a summary of the facts relied on to support it: r 4(3). A copy of such a reference must be served on the respondent, together with a copy of the Licensed Conveyancers' Discipline and Appeals Committee (Procedure) Rules 2001: r 4(4). On such a reference, the committee must hold a hearing to determine the allegation: r 4(5). As to the statutory instrument containing those rules see PARA 1365 note 12. As to the procedure which then pertains see PARA 1367 et seq. As to the meaning of 'respondent' see PARA 1367 note 8.

An applicant may amend the facts set out in his application by serving an amended notice under r 8 (see PARA 1367), but the consent of the committee is required for an amendment less than 21 days before the date of the hearing: see r 14(1). Where an amendment is made the committee may, on application by the respondent, postpone the hearing: r 14(2). On such an appeal being made, the committee may (a) by order direct the Council to grant recognition of the body, either without restrictions or subject to certain restrictions⁷ as specified by the committee in the direction; or (b) affirm the refusal or decision of the Council; and the committee may make such order as to the payment of costs by the Council or by that body as it thinks fit⁸.

- 2168 (6) as from a day to be appointed, a relevant insolvency event occurs in relation to a recognised body¹⁰; or
- 2169 (7) as from a day to be appointed, the Council is satisfied that it is necessary to exercise the powers of intervention¹¹ in relation to a recognised body to protect
 - (a) the interests of clients (or former or potential clients) of the recognised body;
 - (b) the interests of the beneficiaries of any trust of which the recognised body is or was a trustee; or
 - (c) the interests of the beneficiaries of any trust of which a person who is or was a manager or employee of the recognised body is or was a trustee in that person's capacity as such a manager or employee¹², then the intervention powers conferred on the Council are exercisable in relation to the recognised body and its business in like manner as they are exercisable in relation to a licensed conveyancer¹³ and his practice¹⁴. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Those intervention powers are also exercisable in relation to a recognised body and its business where:

- 2170 (i) a complaint is made to the Council that there has been undue delay on the part of a recognised body in connection with any matter in which it was instructed on behalf of a client¹⁵; and
- 2171 (ii) the Council by notice in writing invites the body to give an explanation within such period following the giving of the notice as may be specified, being a period of not less than eight days¹⁶; and
- 2172 (iii) the body fails within that period to give an explanation which the Council regards as satisfactory¹⁷; and
- 2173 (iv) the Council gives notice of the failure to the body and (at the same or any later time) notice that those intervention powers are accordingly exercisable in its case by virtue of this provision¹⁸.

Where the intervention powers are exercisable in relation to a recognised body in accordance with the above provisions, they continue to be exercisable after that body's recognition has been revoked or has otherwise ceased to be in force¹⁹.

Where the recognition²⁰ of a body corporate has been revoked by an order of the Discipline and Appeals Committee²¹ or has expired and no further recognition of that body has been granted, the intervention powers are exercisable in relation to the body corporate and its former business as a recognised body as they are exercisable in relation to a licensed conveyancer and his practice²².

6. NOTARIES

(1) THE OFFICE, APPOINTMENT AND SUPERVISION OF NOTARIES

(i) The Office of Notary

A. IN GENERAL

1412. Meaning of 'notary'.

A notary public is a legal officer appointed by the Court of Faculties¹, whose general role it is, amongst other matters, to draw, attest or certify, under an official seal, documents which are intended for use in other jurisdictions². A notary may also prepare wills or other testamentary documents, note or certify transactions relating to negotiable instruments and draw up protests or other formal papers relating to shipping and the cargo conveyed therein. The office further confers the right to administer oaths and declarations³.

The profession is an ancient one⁴ and is to be found worldwide, especially in civil law jurisdictions. By the law of nations, the acts of a notary have credit everywhere⁵.

Until a day to be appointed, in any enactment 'duly certificated notary public' means a notary public who either (1) has in force a practising certificate as a solicitor⁶, duly entered in the Court of Faculties of the Archbishop of Canterbury in accordance with rules made by the Master of the Faculties⁷; or (2) has in force a practising certificate as a notary public issued by the Court of Faculties in accordance with rules so made⁸.

As from a day to be appointed a notary is a person qualified to perform notarial activities, which is to say activities which were customarily carried on by virtue of enrolment as a notary⁹. Notarial activities are reserved legal activities for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007¹⁰.

1 As to the Court of Faculties see PARA 1413.

2 Such documents, which include deeds and conveyances of real property, and powers of attorney, are generally prepared and drawn in such a manner as to render them readily acceptable in the receiving country: see, for a general discussion of the execution and proof of documents, Brooke's Notary (12th Edn, 2002) ch 11.

3 As to this function see PARA 1460.

4 In ancient times notaries recorded matters of judicial importance, as well as important private transactions or events where an officially authenticated record or a document drawn up with professional skill or knowledge was necessary or advisable. An instructive history of the origin and development of the office of notary can be found in Brooke's Notary (12th Edn, 2002) pp 1-17.

5 Hutcheon v Mannington (1802) 6 Ves 823 per Lord Eldon LC. See also PARA 1462.

6 le under the Solicitors Act 1974 ss 9-18: see PARA 667 et seq.

7 As to the Master of the Faculties and his power to make rules see PARAS 1413, 1437.

8 Solicitors Act 1974 ss 87(1), 89(7) (definition in s 87(1), and s 89(7) prospectively repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 177, 210, Sch 16 Pt 1 paras 1, 75(c), 76, Sch 23). Thus a solicitor who is also a notary is only liable to take out one certificate, but it must be entered in the Court of Faculties: Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1); Public Notaries (Practising Certificates) Rules 1991 r 4. For transitional provisions see note 10.

9 See the Legal Services Act 2007 s 12, Sch 2 para 7(1) (not yet in force). A notary is enrolled under the Public Notaries Act 1801 s 1 (see PARA 1418). The activities referred to in the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 2 para 7(1) do not include activities carried on by virtue of the Solicitors Act 1974 s 22 or 23 (as prospectively repealed: see PARAS 592, 595-596) (reserved instrument activities and probate activities), or by virtue of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 113 (see PARA 577) (administration of oaths): Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 2 para 7(2) (not yet in force).

10 See the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 12, 13, Sch 2; and PARA 512 et seq. During a transitional period, every duly certificated notary is deemed to be authorised by the Master of the Faculties to carry on the following activities:

2174 (1) reserved instrument activities (Sch 5 para 12(1), (2)(a));

2175 (2) probate activities (Sch 5 para 12(1), (2)(b));

2176 (3) notarial activities (Sch 5 para 12(1), (2)(c));

2177 (4) the administration of oaths (Sch 5 para 12(1), (2)(d)).

The above authority is exercisable in accordance with and subject to the regulatory arrangements of the Master of the Faculties: Sch 5 para 12(3).

For these purposes 'duly certificated notary' means a notary who either:

2179 (b) has in force a practising certificate as a public notary issued by the said Court of Faculties in accordance with rules so made (Sch 5 para 12(4)(b)).

As to the meaning of 'reserved instrument activities' see PARA 512 note 5. As to the meaning of 'probate activities' see PARA 512 note 6. As the meaning of 'transitional period' for these purposes see PARA 516 note 9. During the transitional period a person may also be an exempt person under the Legal Services Act 2007 if carrying out notarial activities by virtue of an employee who is an authorised person in relation to that activity: see Sch 5 para 13; and PARA 516.

NOTARIES/(1) THE OFFICE, APPOINTMENT AND SUPERVISION OF NOTARIES/(i) The Office of Notary/A. IN GENERAL/1413. The Court of Faculties, the Master of the Faculties and the Notarial Advisory Board.

1413. The Court of Faculties, the Master of the Faculties and the Notarial Advisory Board.

Since 1533 all faculties appointing notaries to practise in England have been issued by the Archbishop of Canterbury, through his Court of Faculties¹. The chief officer of the court is known as the Master of the Faculties². The Master's inherent powers³ have been clarified by statutory powers of appointment⁴. He exercises jurisdiction over notaries after their appointment⁵. As from a day to be appointed⁶ the Master is an approved regulator for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007⁷.

In 2002 a Notarial Advisory Board was established to advise the Master and the registrar to the court on any matter pertaining to the notarial profession in England and Wales and its regulation⁸.

1 He under the Ecclesiastical Licences Act 1533 s 11. In the period before the Reformation the appointment of notaries throughout Western Christendom lay with the Pope, who, so far as regards the whole of England and Wales, delegated his powers of appointment to his legate, the Archbishop of Canterbury. Accordingly, in England and Wales it was under a licence or faculty granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury in exercise of his legatine powers that a notary in this period received the right to practise: see Ayliffe's Parergon 384. See, however, Cheney Notaries Public in England in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries (1972) p 4, doubting this view. The Pope's right to exercise jurisdiction was formally ended by the Ecclesiastical Licences Act 1533 s 16 (repealed), and any person applying to the Court of Rome for a faculty became liable to the penalty specified in the Statute of Praemunire (1392-3) (repealed). See also Brooks, Helmholz and Stein Notaries Public in England since the Reformation (1991). As to the Court of Faculties see ECCELSIASTICAL LAW vol 14 para 1273.

2 He is the same as the Dean of the Arches: see ECCELSIASTICAL LAW vol 14 PARA 1273.

3 He the powers which were originally exercised by the Pope and were taken to be transferred to the Archbishop of Canterbury by the Ecclesiastical Licences Act 1533 (see note 1). With the exception of those rules made under the Public Notaries Act 1843 s 4 (see note 4), rules and orders made by the Master before 1 July 1991 (ie the commencement of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 57), must be taken to have been made under the Master's inherent power. As to the Master's power to make such rules (many of which have since been ratified by an order made under s 57) see PARA 1437.

4 He under the Public Notaries Act 1843 s 4 (as to which see PARAS 1424, 1435).

5 He under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 57 (as to which, and the rules made under it, see PARA 1424).

6 The Legal Services Act 2007 s 20, Sch 4 are brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

7 See the Legal Services Act 2007 s 20, Sch 4 para 1; and PARA 358 et seq. The Master is an approved regulator for the purposes of reserved instrument, probate and, notarial activities, and the administration of oaths: Sch 4, para 1. As to the meaning of 'reserved instrument activities' see PARA 512 note 5. As to the meaning of 'probate activities' see PARA 512 note 6. B. CLASSES OF NOTARIES

1414. In general.

There are three classes of public notaries, namely ecclesiastical¹, general² and scrivener³ notaries. The Court of Faculties⁴ additionally appoints some notaries who practise overseas⁵. Certain diplomatic and consular officers are also entitled to act as notaries in foreign countries⁶. The former class of district notaries was abolished in 1990⁷.

1 As to the appointment, powers and liabilities of ecclesiastical notaries see PARAS 1422-1423.

2 See the Notaries (Qualification) Rules 1998 r 4; and PARA 1422. The offices of diocesan registrar and legal secretary are often, but not always, held by the same person. As to these offices see ECCLESIASTICAL LAW vol 14 PARA 1281.

1416. General and scrivener notaries.

For most of the history of the profession there was a distinction between general¹ and scrivener² notaries, with the former holding a faculty³ to practise in all places in England and Wales outside the area under the jurisdiction of the ancient Company of Scriveners of the City of London⁴, and the latter admitted to the freedom of the ancient company and thereby holding a faculty to practise anywhere in England or Wales. However, the scrivener's exclusive jurisdiction was abolished in 1999, and since then a public notary may practise as a notary in, or within three miles of, the City of London whether or not he is a member of the company⁵. In spite of this, scrivener notaries remain a discrete branch of the profession, specialising in international work⁶, and the company continues to prescribe particular standards of education and training for those wishing to practise as such⁷.

1 As to general notaries see PARA 1424 et seq.

2 As to scrivener notaries see PARA 1431 et seq.

3 'Faculty' signifies a privilege or special dispensation granted to a person by favour and indulgence to do that which by the law he cannot do: Termes de la Ley 324. As to the grant of faculty see PARA 1424.

4 The proper style of the Company is 'The Masters and Wardens and Assistants of the Society of Scriveners in the City of London'. The Company received its first charter from James I on 28 January 1617. The area under their jurisdiction was the City of London, the liberties of Westminster, the former borough of Southwark, and the area within a circuit of three miles of the City: Public Notaries Act 1801 s 13 (repealed).

5 See the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 53.

6 The scrivener notaries, through the Society of Scrivener Notaries, have full membership of the International Union of Notaries ('UINL'), conferring a high level of international recognition: see the Statutes of the UINL (Approved by the General Meeting on 2 October 2007), and the list of members on the UINL website, found, at the date at which this volume states the law, at www.uinl.net.

A. ECCLESIASTICAL NOTARIES

1422. Who may be appointed.

Any person appointed as registrar of either of the provinces of Canterbury or York¹, as registrar to the Archbishop of Wales or to certain other ecclesiastical offices² may apply for admission as a notary public for ecclesiastical purposes only upon satisfying the Master of the Faculties³ of the fact of such an appointment⁴. The Master is entitled to appoint in the exercise of his discretion unaffected by the Public Notaries Acts 1801 and 1843⁵.

The application procedure is generally the same as that for other notaries⁶, but the certificate of fitness⁷ must contain a statement that the applicant is conformable to the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England, or (as the case may be) the doctrine, discipline and constitution of the Church in Wales⁸.

1 As to these offices see ECCLESIASTICAL LAW vol 14 PARA 1281.

2 I.e. appointment as legal advisor to the General Synod of the Church of England, as legal secretary to the governing body of the Church in Wales; as registrar of any diocese in England or Wales, as an officer of the ecclesiastical court in Jersey or Guernsey, or (being a solicitor) as chapter clerk in any cathedral church in England or Wales, or as the deputy to any such officer: Notaries (Qualification) Rules 1998 r 4. 1423. Public Notaries Acts not to apply.

The Public Notaries Acts 1801¹ and 1843 do not apply to ecclesiastical notaries², although they are in many instances treated as so applying³.

1 The Public Notaries Act 1801 has been largely repealed.

2 The Public Notaries Act 1801 is expressed not to apply to solicitors in any ecclesiastical court, nor to bishops' secretaries practising as secretaries, nor to any other person necessarily created a notary public for the purpose of holding any office or appointment, or occasionally performing any public duty or service under government, and not as general practitioners (ecclesiastical notaries): s 14 (amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125, Sch 20); Solicitors Act 1974 ss 87(1), 89(7). As from a day to be appointed the Public Notaries Act 1801 s 14 is amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 208(1), 210, Sch 21 paras 1, 3, Sch 23, and the Solicitors Act 1974 s 89(7) and the definition of a notary in s 87(1) are repealed by the Legal Services Act 2007 ss 177, 210, Sch 16 Pt 1 paras 1, 75(c), 76, Sch 23. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

(A) GENERAL NOTARIES

1424. Grant of faculty.

In 1990 significant changes were made with regard to the appointment and practice of notaries¹. Whilst they are still appointed pursuant to the Public Notaries Acts 1801 and 1843, the requirement for prospective notaries to serve a term of apprenticeship has been abolished². The power of the Master of the Faculties³ to make rules under the Public Notaries Act 1843 requiring the evidence as to the competency of the applicant and to admit or reject an applicant at his discretion⁴ was retained and the Master was granted further powers to make rules relating to the education and training qualifications which must be satisfied before a person may be granted a faculty to practise as a public notary⁵.

Qualification for admission as a public notary.

1425. Qualification for admission as a public notary.

In order to be admitted as a public notary in England and Wales a person must be at least 21 years of age¹, have taken the required oaths² and, subject to certain exceptions³, be either a solicitor of the Supreme Court, a barrister at law, or hold a degree⁴. In addition, that person must have followed and attained a satisfactory standard in a course or courses of studies covering all of the following subjects⁵: (1) public/constitutional law; (2) the law of property; (3) the law of contract; (4) the law of the European Union; (5) Roman law; (6) equity and the law of trusts; (7) conflicts of law; (8) conveyancing; (9) business law and practice; (10) wills probate and administration; (11) notarial practice (including bills of exchange)⁶.

The Master of the Faculties may from time to time by order prescribe fees or the maximum fees which may be charged in respect of any such application⁷.

1 Notaries (Qualification) Rules 1998 rr 3.1, 5. As to the power to make these rules see PARA 1437.

2 Notaries (Qualification) Rules 1998 rr 3.2, 5. The required oaths are the oath of allegiance (see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 32, 923 et seq) and the oath required by the Public Notaries Act 1843 s 7 (amended by the Statute Law Revision (No 2) Act 1874; and the Statute Law Revision Act 1891; prospectively repealed in relation to the Isle of Man by the Statutes Law (Repeals) Act 1998).

Before a faculty is granted to any person to be admitted and enrolled as a public notary, he must swear before the Master, or his surrogate or proper officer, in the following terms: 'I A.B. do swear, that I will faithfully exercise the office of a public notary; I will faithfully make contracts or instruments for or between any party or parties requiring the same, and I will not add or diminish any thing without the knowledge or consent of such party or parties that may alter the substance of the fact; I will not make or attest any act, contract, or instrument in which I shall know there is violence or fraud; and in all things I will act uprightly and justly in the business of a public notary, according to the best of my skill and ability. So help me GOD.': Public Notaries Act 1843 s 7 (as so amended; and prospectively repealed in relation to the Isle of Man).

3 This requirement does not apply to an application to be admitted as an ecclesiastical notary (see PARA 1422) or a European Economic Area notary (see PARA 1428).

4 Notaries (Qualification) Rules 1998 rr 3.3, 5. A 'degree' means a qualification awarded following a post secondary course of at least three years' duration (or of an equivalent duration part time) at a university or an establishment of higher education or an establishment of similar level: r 2.

5 Notaries (Qualification) Rules 1998 rr 8.1, 5. Whether a particular course of studies satisfies the requirements of these rules and whether a person has obtained a satisfactory standard in that course is to be determined by the Master after seeking the advice of the Qualifications Board: r 8.2. The Master after seeking the advice of the board may by order direct that the award of a particular qualification meets the requirements of these rules as to some or all of the prescribed subjects (see heads (1)-(11) in the text): r 8.3. As a condition of making such a rule, the Master may require the body by which the qualification is awarded to issue those pursuing a course of studies leading to that qualification with such information about the notarial profession, these rules and other rules made by the Master and the Incorporated Company of Scriveners of London as the Master may specify: r 8.4. As to the Master of the Court of Faculties see PARA 1413. As to the Qualifications Board see PARA 1426.

6 See the Notaries (Qualification) Rules 1998 Sch 2. The Master may by order add or remove subjects, but before doing so must consult the board: r 8.5.

7 Notaries (Qualification) Rules 1998 r 7.4. Such fees may be applied by the Faculty Office towards meeting the expenses of the board but subject thereto the expenses of the board and of its members must be paid from and such fees must form part of the general notarial income of the Faculty Office: r 7.4. 1426. The Qualifications Board.

The function of the Qualifications Board is to advise the Master of the Faculties as follows¹:

- 613 (1) whether a degree or other qualification should be approved by him for the purpose of these rules²;
- 614 (2) on the standard of the qualifications of any person applying for admission as a general notary under these rules³;
- 615 (3) on the qualifications and experience of persons applying for recognition that they are eligible for admission as a European Economic Area notary⁴.

The Board must also advise any other body concerned with the administration or regulation of the notarial profession in England and Wales or any part of it on matters relating to qualifications and experience⁵. The Master may by order delegate to the board any of his functions under these rules relating to the approval or recognition of degrees, qualifications and experience⁶.

The board must comprise not more than ten persons appointed by the Master after consultation with the Incorporated Company of Scriveners of London⁷, the Society of Scrivener Notaries, the Notaries' Society and the Association of Solicitor Notaries in Greater London and such other persons or bodies as the Master may consider appropriate⁸. The Master must appoint one member of the board to be chairman for such period as he may determine⁹. Members of the board, including the chairman, hold office for such period as the Master may determine and may be removed from office by the Master at any time¹⁰. The registrar¹¹ must act as clerk to the board or may appoint or nominate another person to act as clerk in his place¹². The board must meet as often as may be necessary and in any event not less than once each year¹³, and it may delegate any of its functions to a subcommittee comprising not fewer than three of its members¹⁴.

1427. Admission procedure.

A person qualified for admission as a notary¹ must apply in writing to the faculty office² on such form as the Master of the Faculties³ may from time to time specify⁴. The application must be accompanied by:

- 616 (1) a certificate of fitness in such form as the Master may from time to time prescribe to be given by a notary public to the effect that the applicant is known to him and that having made due inquiry to the best of his knowledge and belief the applicant is a fit and proper person to be created a notary public⁵;
- 617 (2) a certificate of good character in such form as the Master may from time to time prescribe to be given by a qualified person⁶ testifying to the good character, honesty, reliability, diligence and trustworthiness of the applicant and stating that the person giving the certificate knows of no reason why the applicant should not be created a notary public⁷; and
- 618 (3) such fee as the Master may from time to time prescribe⁸.

The Master may give, or require an applicant to give, such publicity to an application as in the circumstances appears to him to be necessary⁹. Any representations made to the Master following such publicity must be notified to the applicant, and the Master must consider any response thereto made by the applicant before deciding whether a faculty will be granted¹⁰.

Any decision by the Master to refuse an application must be notified to the applicant by the registrar¹¹ in writing to enable the applicant to pursue (if so advised) the remedy provided¹².

Upon the Master deciding to grant an application, the registrar must cause a faculty to pass the seal in accustomed form. The applicant must appear personally before the registrar to make the required oaths, and the registrar must then admit him by delivering the faculty to him and causing his name to be entered upon the roll of notaries. The Master may appoint a commissioner to act in place of the registrar for this purpose¹³.

As from a day to be appointed, the following provisions have effect¹. Despite any provision made by the Public Notaries Acts², a person's entitlement to carry on an activity which is a notarial activity³ is to be determined in accordance with the Legal Services Act 2007⁴.

Nothing in the Public Notaries Acts is to be regarded, for the purposes of exempt persons⁵ in relation to notarial activities⁶ as authorising a person to carry on such an activity⁷.

(B) SCRIVENER NOTARIES

1431. Qualification to practise as a scrivener notary.

No person is entitled to be admitted as a scrivener notary¹ until he has:

- 622 (1) given notice of his intention to qualify as such, accompanied by such fee as may from time to time be specified by the Incorporated Company of Scriveners of London²;
- 623 (2) qualified as a general notary in accordance with the relevant rules³;
- 624 (3) passed the examination in foreign law relevant to notarial practice⁴ or obtained an approved master's degree⁵, and passed the foreign language examinations and the examination in advanced notarial practice set by the company⁶;
- 625 (4) completed the prescribed period of practical training or supervised practice⁷;
- 626 (5) received a certificate of freedom of the company⁸.

1 'Scrivener notary' means a public notary who is a member of the company holding the qualifications to practise as a scrivener notary from time to time prescribed by the company: Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 2. See also PARA 1416. The Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 are made by the Master Wardens and Assistants of the Society of Scriveners of the City of London in pursuance of the powers conferred upon them by their charter. As a matter of professional practice no notary may describe himself professionally as a scrivener or a scrivener notary unless he holds the relevant qualifications: Notaries Practice Rules 2001 r 12.

2 Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 3(i). Notice is given to the clerk of the company: see rr 2, 3(i). 'Company' means the Master Wardens and Assistants of the Society of Scriveners of the City of London otherwise known as the Incorporated Company of Scriveners of London: r 2. See also PARA 1416.

The Notarial Committee of the company may, if it thinks fit, grant exemption to any candidate (ie any person who has given notice of his intention to qualify as a scrivener notary: r 2) who produces to the committee satisfactory evidence that at the time the notice was given the candidate already held a post-graduate degree in a relevant field of law which the committee after consultation with the Qualifications Board considers to be of a standard equivalent to an approved master's degree taking into consideration the contents of the course of study leading to the award of the degree concerned and the standing of the university or other institution concerned, and in such event the degree already held by the candidate must be considered an approved master's degree: r 5. 'Relevant field of law' means a field of law which in the opinion of the committee is relevant to a particular area or particular areas of the specialised international work undertaken by scrivener notaries, and the committee may from time to time, for the guidance of candidates, publish notes as to fields of legal practice which it considers peculiar to scrivener notaries or appropriate for them to engage in, lists of approved courses and other relevant information: r 6. 'Approved master's degree' means the degree referred to in r 4 (see note 4): r 2. As to the Qualifications Board see PARA 1426.

3 Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 3(ii). The relevant rules are the Notaries (Qualification) Rules 1998, and as to the qualification of notaries see PARA 1424 et seq.

4 In order that he may acquire the knowledge necessary to engage in the specialised areas of international legal practice undertaken by scrivener notaries any person wishing to qualify as such is required either to pass the examination in foreign law relevant to notarial practice (specified in the Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 Sch 3), or be in possession of a post-graduate degree in a relevant field of law from a university or other institute of higher education, the subject matter of the course leading to the degree having been approved by the committee after consultation with the Qualifications Board prior to the candidate's commencing the course concerned: r 4.

5 Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 3(iii)(a). Provision is made for examinations in rr 27-33.

6 Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 3(iii)(b). The examinations referred to in the text are set out in Schs 4 and 5. See also note 5.

7 Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 3(iv). The period of practical training or supervised practice is prescribed in rr 7-26: see PARAS 1432-1433.

8 Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 3(v). As soon as he has complied with the educational requirements prescribed by these rules and completed the period of his training agreement or supervised practice the candidate must produce to the clerk a certificate as required by r 13 (see PARA 1432 text and note 9), such certificates or statutory declaration as are required by r 15 (see PARA 1432 text and note 12) or such certificate as is referred to in r 26 (see PARA 1433 text and note 16) and he must then be admitted to the freedom of the company according to the rules, ordinances and procedures of the company and on payment of such fee or fees payable upon admission to the freedom of the company as are from time to time fixed by the company. Upon admission to the freedom of the company the clerk must give him a signed certificate to that effect: r 34.

NOTARIES/(1) THE OFFICE, APPOINTMENT AND SUPERVISION OF NOTARIES/(ii) Appointment and Training/B. GENERAL AND SCRIVENER NOTARIES/(B) Scrivener Notaries/1432. Practical training.

1432. Practical training.

In order to receive practical training and experience, a person who has given notice of his intention to qualify as a scrivener notary¹ must enter into a training agreement for a period of two years with a scrivener notary² in full-time independent practice as a principal³. Such period may, on application, be reduced at the discretion of the Notarial Committee of the Incorporated Company of Scriveners of London⁴ to such lesser period (being not less than six months) as the committee judges fit⁵.

The candidate may, with the permission of the scrivener notary with whom he has entered into a training agreement, spend up to six months of the prescribed two years working in the offices of notaries or lawyers in a foreign country⁶. Within one month after execution of the training agreement the candidate must produce the agreement to the clerk of the company, who must record in a register maintained for the purpose details of the names and addresses of those concerned, the date of execution of the agreement and the date of commencement of the period of training⁷.

Save for any period when he is working in a foreign country, the candidate must be instructed by the scrivener notary with whom he has entered into a training agreement in the proper business and practice of a scrivener notary throughout the full period⁸ of the training agreement and at the conclusion of that period the scrivener notary must certify that it has been properly completed⁹. If the scrivener notary dies before the expiry of the period of the training agreement, or discontinues his practice, or if the training agreement is cancelled by mutual agreement then the candidate may enter into a training agreement with another scrivener notary for the purpose of completing the remainder of the period¹⁰. In the event of the candidate's entering into two or more training agreements each scrivener notary concerned must individually and separately certify¹¹ that the candidate has, whilst being instructed by him, completed the period stated in the certificate inclusive of such period (if any) as he has spent in a foreign country provided that in the event of the death of any such scrivener notary the candidate must make a statutory declaration to the effect that he was instructed by the deceased scrivener notary until the date of his death¹².

1 He has given notice under the Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 3(i): see PARA 1431. A person who is in actual practice as a general notary may elect with the agreement of the committee to undergo a period of supervised practice instead of practical training: see rr 16-26; and PARA 1433.

4 As to the Incorporated Company of Scriveners of London see PARA 1431 note 2.

5 Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 7.1. In making the decision to reduce the period of practical training the committee must take into consideration any period during which the candidate has been in practice as a general notary or has been employed (with a view to qualification as a scrivener notary) in the office of a scrivener notary in full-time independent practice as a principal and the experience actually gained in the course of such practice or employment provided further that within six months of commencing such employment (such period to be extended to nine months in the case of a candidate whose employment commenced before 1 July 2001) the candidate must have given notice thereof to the clerk of the company accompanied by a copy of his contract of employment and the relevant fee: r 7.1. 'Employment' includes any period or periods (not exceeding a total period of six months) during which the candidate has at the request of the scrivener notary by whom he was then employed spent prior to the entering into of his training agreement working in the office or offices of notaries or lawyers in a foreign country or countries for any of the relevant purposes: r 7.2. As to the meaning of 'candidate' see PARA 1431 note 2.

7 Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 10. Upon registration of the particulars of the training agreement the candidate must pay to the clerk such fee for registration as may from time to time be fixed by the company: r 11. The register is a public document and any person is entitled to inspect it at such place and during such office hours as may be determined by the company subject to payment of such reasonable fee for inspection as may from time to time be fixed by the company: r 12.

8 Or such lesser period as the company may prescribe: see the text and notes 4-5.

9 See the Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 13. The form of certification is prescribed in Sch 2.

10 Scriveners (Qualifications) Rules 1998 r 14. The period of instruction under the new training agreement is effectual as if the candidate had continued to be instructed by the scrivener notary with whom he previously had a training agreement provided that within one month after execution of the new training agreement, the candidate produces the same to the clerk who must record the details in the register (see note 7): r 14.

NOTARIES/(1) THE OFFICE, APPOINTMENT AND SUPERVISION OF NOTARIES/(ii) Appointment and Training/B. GENERAL AND SCRIVENER NOTARIES/(B) Scrivener Notaries/1433. Supervised practice.

1433. Supervised practice.

A person who is in actual practice as a general notary¹ may on application to the clerk of the company and with the agreement of the Notarial Committee of the Incorporated Company of Scriveners of London² elect to undergo a period of supervised practice in lieu of practical training³. Upon receipt of such an application the clerk must refer the matter to the committee and if, after deliberation, the committee accepts the candidate's application it will appoint a supervisor⁴ for the candidate and the clerk will notify the candidate accordingly⁵.

During the two years immediately following the appointment of the supervisor the candidate must practise as a notary under the supervision of the supervisor and:

- 627 (1) during that period the supervisor must visit the office of the candidate at least once in every period of four months to inspect the work, records and accounts of the candidate⁶;
- 628 (2) during that period the supervisor must make himself available at all reasonable times at his usual place of business to answer queries raised by the candidate on matters pertaining to the practice of a scrivener notary⁷.

A supervisor must ensure, in so far as he is able, that the candidate is aware of and complies with all rules and orders made by the Master of the Faculties⁸ and conducts himself in a manner calculated to maintain the reputation of the office of a scrivener notary⁹. A supervisor is also entitled to charge the candidate a fee or fees (not exceeding the level prescribed from time to time in regulations made by the committee) and approved by the company together with reasonable expenses of travel, subsistence and (where necessary) accommodation¹⁰. If a supervisor dies or discontinues his practice before the completion of the period of supervision then the committee must, on the application of the candidate made within one month of such death or discontinuance becoming known to him, appoint another supervisor willing to undertake the supervision of the candidate for the remainder of the period¹¹.

Every candidate must maintain a supervision register (in a format approved by the committee) in which must be recorded:

- 629 (a) by the supervisor a record of every visit and inspection made by him¹²;
- 630 (b) by the supervisor and the candidate a record of the fees charged by the supervisor¹³; and
- 631 (c) by the supervisor at the conclusion of the period of supervision a statement of whether or not in the supervisor's view the candidate is a fit and proper person to be admitted as a scrivener notary¹⁴.

At the conclusion of the supervision period the candidate must produce the supervision register to the clerk for scrutiny by the committee and, if required by the committee, the candidate must attend in person before them to answer any queries arising from such scrutiny and in order that he may, if the committee thinks fit, be examined viva voce on any matter concerning the practice of a scrivener notary and the deontology of the profession¹⁵. Following such scrutiny and, where applicable, examination the committee may either direct the chairman of the committee to issue to the candidate a certificate of completion of the supervision period or it may extend the supervision for such further period as it considers reasonable in the circumstances of the case¹⁶.

Any person qualified as a notary or notary public in a member state of the European Economic Area other than the United Kingdom¹ may apply to the Incorporated Company of Scriveners of London² for recognition that he is qualified to receive a certificate of freedom of the company in order to permit him to obtain a faculty enabling him to practise as a scrivener notary³. An aptitude test may be required⁴.

Where such an application is made the Notarial Committee of the Company must determine the application⁵ as soon as possible and communicate the outcome to the applicant in a reasoned decision within four months of the production of all the certificates and documents relating to the applicant⁶.

If the company refuses such an application, or has not determined the application within the time prescribed, the company is deemed to have refused an application for a certificate of freedom and the applicant is entitled to appeal against such refusal to the Master of the Faculties⁷.

Newly admitted notaries require a period of two years' supervision by a practising notary who has practised for more than five years¹. The supervisor has a duty to inspect the notarial and accounting records of the newly admitted notary, visiting offices of the supervised notary at least once every four months². On each occasion the supervisor must prepare a report which will be placed in the records of both the supervised notary and the supervisor, and at the end of the two year period, the supervisor must inform the Master of the Faculties³ thereof in writing⁴.

Whilst under supervision, a notary is also required annually to attend certain continuing education courses approved by the Master⁵.

1 See the Notaries (Post-Admission) Rules 1991 rr 3, 4(1). The period of supervision may be extended (r 3(4)) or the Master may reduce or dispense with the requirement for supervision as he deems fit (see r 9). These rules apply only to notaries admitted after 13 June 1990, and do not apply to European Economic Area or ecclesiastical notaries: rr 3(1), 10. As to European Economic Area notaries see PARAS 1428, 1434. As to ecclesiastical notaries see PARAS 1415, 1422-1423.

The supervisor must not have his usual place of business more than 50 miles (or two hours' travel in normal conditions if shorter) from the place in which the supervised notary proposes to practise: r 4(2). It is a supervised notary's duty to notify the Faculty Office upon request of the name and address of his supervisor; and the duty of any notary to notify the Faculty Office upon request of the names and addresses of all notaries of whom he is the supervisor: r 4(3). A supervised notary must, on the death or retirement from practice of his supervisor, make arrangements for the supervision to be continued by another suitably qualified notary: see r 4(4). If for any reason other than the death or retirement of the supervisor, either party wishes the appointment of a particular supervisor to be terminated, application must be made for that purpose to the Master, who may terminate the supervision upon such conditions as he thinks fit: r 4(5).

A notary acting as a supervisor is entitled to charge appropriate fees: see r 8.

2 Notaries (Post-Admission) Rules 1991 r 5(2). This is subject to a provision relating to client confidentiality: see r 5(3). The supervising notary must make himself available to offer advice and guidance, and must take care, so far as possible, to ensure that the supervised notary is aware of all rules and orders relating to notaries, and conducts himself correctly: see r 5(4), (5). Certain areas of practice (connected with conveyancing or probate by the notary in his capacity as a solicitor or licensed conveyancer) are excluded from supervision, although the supervised notary must produce his records of those matters if requested by his supervisor: see r 5(1), (2).

No person admitted as a public notary may hold himself out as a public notary in practice, or perform any notarial act, in England or Wales, unless he holds a current solicitor's practising certificate duly entered in the Court of Faculties, or a notarial practising certificate issued out of the Court of Faculties¹. To obtain a practising certificate a notary must deliver to the registry² a correctly completed application accompanied by the required fee, a specified contribution to the contingency fund³ and evidence of adequate indemnity insurance⁴. Upon receipt of these documents the registrar, having satisfied himself that the applicant is on the Roll of Notaries⁵, must issue a practising certificate⁶. The Master of the Faculties⁷ has the power to place restrictions on practising certificates, if deemed appropriate⁸. The entry or issue of a practising certificate is void and of no effect if the holder was knowingly guilty of making any false material statement in, or in relation to, his application⁹.

1439. Indemnity insurance.

All notaries must have satisfactory indemnity insurance in order to be issued with a practising certificate¹. Applicants for a practising certificate who, as solicitors, are governed by the rules relating to solicitors' indemnity² are exempt from the following provisions³. An applicant who is not exempt on the basis of indemnification under the rules relating to solicitors' indemnity must, upon application for a practising certificate, deliver to the registry⁴ a current certificate of insurance against civil liability for professional negligence incurred by him in connection with his practice as a notary and a copy of the policy under which the insurance is provided⁵. If the registrar is of the opinion that by reason of the standing of the insurer, or by reason of the terms and conditions of the policy, the cover provided is inadequate, he must refer the matter to the Master of the Faculties; and in such a case the insurance will not be deemed to comply with the requirements for the issue of a practising certificate unless and until the Master declares himself satisfied that the cover is adequate having regard to the applicant's practice⁶. An applicant may also satisfy the requirements for indemnity insurance by showing either that he is covered under the terms of a policy issued to another notary or by delivering a certificate of insurance in his own name issued by the Solicitors' Indemnity Fund⁷. If the insurance cover of a notary public in force when his practising certificate was entered or issued ceases, for any reason, before the normal expiry of the practising certificate, then the entry or the certificate (as the case may be) will forthwith cease to have effect unless the registrar is satisfied that alternative insurance cover is already in force⁸.

An applicant must (save as hereinafter provided) also deliver to the registry a current certificate of insurance against financial loss suffered by a third party in consequence of any dishonest or fraudulent act or any omission by the applicant in connection with his practice as a notary⁹. Provided that this requirement must not apply if the applicant is a solicitor and third parties suffering such financial loss in connection with the applicant's practice as a notary would be eligible to apply to the Solicitors Regulation Authority for compensation¹⁰.

1441. Conflicts of interest and the duty to act impartially.

In the conduct of his practice a notary must not favour the interests of one client over those of another and must not favour his own interests or those of any other person over those of his clients¹. A notary must not act for both parties to a transaction unless:

- 645 (1) both have consented in writing²; and
- 646 (2) he is satisfied that there is no conflict of interest between the parties³, but where a conflict of interests exists or arises a notary may act or continue to act for both parties for the sole purpose of resolving or attempting to resolve that conflict of interest⁴.

A notary must act impartially and in particular must not perform any notarial act⁵ which involves or may affect:

- 647 (a) his own affairs, including matters in which he is personally interested jointly with another person⁶;
- 648 (b) the affairs of his spouse or partner or a person to whom the notary is engaged to be married⁷;

A notary who is the employee of a non-notary must not perform any notarial act as part of his employment or do or perform any notarial act for his employer or his employer's holding, associated or subsidiary company¹⁵. Where a notary by himself or with any other person operates, actively participates in, or controls any business, other than a notary's practice, he must take special care to ensure that there is no confusion between his notarial practice and his other business¹⁶.

Notarial acts must normally be drawn up in the English language, although a notary may upon request or in appropriate circumstances prepare a notarial act in a language other than English if he has sufficient knowledge of the language concerned: rr 9.1, 9.2. A notary may not authenticate by means of a notarial act a document drawn up in a language other than English unless he has satisfied himself as to its meaning but this does not prevent a notary from authenticating the execution or signature of a document in any language: r 9.3. A notary may not certify the accuracy of a translation that has been made by someone other than himself unless he has knowledge of the language sufficient to satisfy himself as to the accuracy of the translation but this does not prevent a notary from attesting a translator's affidavit or authenticating a verification: 9.4.

1446. Supervision of a notary's office.

A notary must ensure that every office where he practises is and can reasonably be seen to be properly supervised¹. Such supervision must be exercised by a notary holding a practising certificate² who spends sufficient time at such office to ensure adequate control of the staff employed there and afford requisite facilities for consultation with clients³. Where supervision in accordance with this rule is prevented by illness, accident or other sufficient or unforeseen cause for a prolonged period, suitable alternative arrangements must be made without delay to ensure compliance⁴. In cases where a notary is not in attendance on days when his office is normally open to the public, he must make adequate arrangements to ensure the provision of notarial services to persons requiring the same⁵.

A notary must keep proper records of his notarial acts¹, sufficient to identify²:

- 668 (3) the person or persons, if any, intervening in the act and, in the case of a person who intervened in a representative capacity, the name of his principal⁵;

- 670 (5) the nature of the act⁷;
- 671 (6) the fee charged⁸.

In the case of a notarial act in the public form⁹, the notary must place an original of the act or a complete photographic copy of the same in a protocol which must be preserved permanently by the notary¹⁰. Records of acts not in public form must be preserved for a minimum period of 12 years¹¹. A copy of a preserved notarial act or of the record of a notarial act, must, upon payment of a reasonable fee, be issued upon the application of any person or authority having a proper interest in the act unless prevented by order of a competent court¹².

All such records must be open at any time to inspection by the Master of the Faculties or a person authorised by him¹³.

When a notary ceases to practise as such, then he, or failing him his continuing notarial partners or the person having possession or custody of the records maintained by him, must arrange for such records to be transferred¹⁴:

- 674 (c) to an archive designated for the purpose under regulations made by the Master from time to time¹⁷.

The Ombudsman has wide-ranging powers to order the reconsideration of complaints and the payment of compensation to complainants³, and to make recommendations as to the functioning of disciplinary bodies⁴.

As from a day to be appointed these functions will vest in the Office for Legal Complaints, which is constituted under the Legal Services Act 2007⁵.

Where the registrar of the Court of Faculties¹ receives an allegation concerning the conduct or practice of a public notary which in his opinion does not amount to an allegation of notarial misconduct² or where the precise nature of the allegation is unclear, he must refer the matter to a designated society³ to be dealt with in accordance with an approved procedure⁴.

Where an allegation against a public notary comes to the attention of a designated society (whether or not in the course of the operation of an approved procedure) and it appears that such allegation amounts to an allegation of notarial misconduct the designated society must refer the allegation to the registrar⁵.

1 See the Public Notaries (Conduct and Discipline) Rules 1993 r 2.

2 'Notarial misconduct' means (1) fraudulent conduct; (2) practising as a notary public without a valid practising certificate or in breach of a condition or limitation imposed on a practising certificate; or (3) other conduct unbecoming the office of a public notary: Public Notaries (Conduct and Discipline) Rules 1993 r 2. As to practising certificates see PARA 1438.

2182 (1) for the informal resolution of disputes between members of the public and public notaries concerning notarial acts done by a public notary or the conduct of a public notary's practice;

2184 (3) for dealing with complaints about the conduct or practice of a public notary referred to a designated society by the registrar of the Court of Faculties or the Solicitors Regulation Authority; and for such other matters as the Master may from time to time specify. Disciplinary proceedings and sanctions in the Court of Faculties.

1453. Disciplinary proceedings and sanctions in the Court of Faculties.

A complaint of notarial misconduct¹ may be made to the Court of Faculties² by any competent complainant³. Where the commissary and two assessors after hearing such a complaint find that it has been proved they may⁴:

- 675 (1) order that the notary be struck off the roll of notaries⁵;
- 676 (2) order that the notary be suspended from practice as a public notary for a specified period or until certain conditions have been met or indefinitely⁶;
- 677 (3) impose conditions as to the future scope or conduct of the notarial practice of the notary and direct that his practising certificate be endorsed or the endorsement on his solicitor's practising certificate be marked accordingly⁷; or
- 678 (4) order that the notary be admonished⁸.

In addition to the penalties listed in heads (2) to (4) above unless the notary indemnifies any client of his who is found to have suffered actual loss as a result of the notarial misconduct in question, and pays a penalty not exceeding £250 (or such higher sum as the Master of the Faculties⁹ may from time to time specify for these purposes) such penalty to be paid to whomsoever the Master may direct, the notary must be struck off the roll of notaries¹⁰.

It is also within the discretion of the commissary to order that the costs of either party to the complaint or the Court of Faculties be paid as he deems fit¹¹.

Special provision is made for solicitor notaries¹².

2 As to the Court of Faculties see PARA 1413.

3 Public Notaries (Conduct and Discipline) Rules 1993 r 8(a). As to the relevant procedure in the case of such a complaint see Schedule, Pt II. 'Competent complainant' means (1) a nominated notary; (2) the Incorporated Company of Scriveners or a member of that company nominated by it; or (3) any person who has been a client of the public notary in question where the complaint relates to notarial misconduct arising from notarial acts or other professional services performed by the public notary for that client: r 2. As to the meaning of 'nominated notary' see PARA 1450 note 3. As to the Incorporated Company of Scriveners see PARA 1416.

Where:

2186 (b) the registrar has appointed a nominated notary or referred the allegation to the Incorporated Company of Scriveners and the nominated notary or the Incorporated Company has determined not to make a complaint of notarial misconduct to the Court of Faculties in respect of the allegation or has not so made a complaint within 112 days of his appointment or the referral of the allegation (as the case may be), then a complaint of notarial misconduct in respect of that allegation may be made to the Court of Faculties by any public notary who holds a notarial practising certificate and such public notary is deemed to be a competent complainant for these purposes: r 8(b).

Application for review.

1454. Application for review.

Where a public notary:

- 679 (1) has been struck off the roll of notaries and a period of not less than 12 months has elapsed since the date of striking off¹;
- 680 (2) has been suspended from practice for a period exceeding 12 months or for an indefinite period and a period of not less than 12 months has elapsed since the date of the suspension²;
- 681 (3) has had conditions imposed as to the future scope or conduct of his notarial practice³; or
- 682 (4) has been struck off the roll of notaries and has since been restored to the roll of solicitors⁴, he may petition the Court of Faculties⁵ to review the order⁶.

In the case of a petition under head (1), (2) or (4) above it is for the public notary to prove to the satisfaction of the court that circumstances have changed since the order was made and that it is not contrary to the public interest or the interest of the notarial profession that the order be reviewed⁷. In the case of a petition under head (3) above, it is for the public notary to prove to the satisfaction of the court that as a result of a change in circumstances the conditions imposed are no longer necessary or desirable in the public interest⁸.

On receiving such a petition brought under this rule by a notary⁹ the registrar of the court must appoint a nominated notary¹⁰ to act as respondent to the petition¹¹. The costs of the respondent to such a petition, and of the court, must be paid by the petitioner in any event¹². Upon hearing a petition brought under this rule the commissary and two assessors¹³ may order that the notary concerned be restored to the roll of notaries, that the suspension or the imposed conditions be lifted, impose such conditions or require such undertakings as he deems fit, or dismiss the petition¹⁴.

(2) FUNCTIONS AND NOTARIAL ACTS

(i) Functions

1455. Preparation of legal documents.

A notary is entitled: (1) to prepare deeds, agreements and wills relating to real and personal property situated in England and Wales; (2) to prepare deeds and other documents intended to take effect in the Commonwealth overseas and in foreign states in such form and language as may conform to the law of the place where the deed or document is intended to operate; (3) to verify, authenticate, and attest by his official seal the execution of deeds or other documents¹, contracts, and powers of attorney; (4) to prepare mercantile documents²; and (5) to certify copies, and to translate and verify the translation of documents in any foreign language into the English language, and vice versa³.

² See SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW.

³ A notary's functions are not defined by statute. The account of the functions given in the text is based on practice. Cf Ayliffe's Parergon 382; Brooke's Notary (12th Edn, 2002) para 2-01 et seq. A notarial act has been defined as the act of a notary authenticated by his signature and official seal, certifying the due execution in his presence of a deed, contract or other writing, or verifying some fact or thing of which the notary has certain knowledge: see Brooke's Notary (12th Edn, 2002) para 5-01.

1456. Succession and conveyancing.

Notaries have the right to prepare any documentation required in connection with conveyancing or succession¹. This is often undertaken, especially by scrivener notaries, in conjunction with trans-national cases, where clients require advice which covers several jurisdictions².

As from a day to be appointed³ reserved instrument activities and probate activities are reserved legal activities for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007⁴ and a person may be authorised to carry on such activities by the Master of the Faculties⁵.

1457. Bills of exchange.

It calls for a notary to be employed to present an inland or foreign bill of exchange for acceptance or payment. The clerk of the notary usually presents the bill¹.

If the bill is not accepted or paid, the notary 'notes' the bill. Subsequently the notary amplifies, or, as it is commonly called, 'extends', the noting by preparing, signing and sealing the protest². The notary's charges of noting and protesting a bill are recoverable as damages³.

¹ Thanks to the electronic transfer of funds, this role is falling into desuetude. See generally Brooke's Notary (12th Edn, 2002) ch 7.

² As to noting and protesting bills see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 51; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 1537 et seq.

1458. Ships' protests.

This branch of a notary's practice deals with the noting and drawing up of ships' protests¹.

The object of the protest is to exonerate the Master and mariners or person making the protest from any charge of improper, illegal or negligent conduct when damage or injury has happened to a ship or her cargo during a voyage, and to record formally any facts or circumstances relating to disputes or other matters which it is thought desirable to authenticate formally in order to exculpate the Master or mariners from any charge or complaint of illegal or improper action.

A 'note' of the protest is made in a book of the notary, stating the date, the name of the ship, the name of her Master and the voyage, and protests against the perils of the seas causing damage. The note may be amplified or 'extended'. The document, which is under the notary's seal, sets out a full statement of the material facts relating to any accident, collision, disaster or difficulty either to the ship or her cargo.

Protests are frequently drawn up which deal with the conduct of any person having business relations or duties in connection with the ship or her cargo for the purpose of putting on record in an authentic form all material facts². They are laid before underwriters, average adjusters and merchants for the purpose of adjusting losses on policies of marine insurance and settling disputes between ship-owner and cargo-owner, and for other business purposes.

¹ As to shipping generally see SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW. The advent of containers has rendered this practice significantly less common. See generally Brooke's Notary (12th Edn, 2002) paras 9-30, 9-31.

² Protests are required in some foreign countries to support insurance claims.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/6. NOTARIES/(2) FUNCTIONS AND NOTARIAL ACTS/(i) Functions/1459. Drawing bonds for payment.

1459. Drawing bonds for payment.

In connection with the raising of money by foreign states or corporations on the security of an issue of numbered bonds which are redeemable at certain dates fixed at the time of issue by drawings, a notary is frequently employed to superintend the drawing by lot of the bond or bonds to be redeemed. He certifies the numbers of the bonds drawn. Today much of this process is performed by computer, rendering it simpler and faster than hitherto¹.

1 For an account of this practice see Brooke's Notary (12th Edn, 2002) ch 10.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/6. NOTARIES/(2) FUNCTIONS AND NOTARIAL ACTS/(i) Functions/1460. Administering oaths and taking declarations.

1460. Administering oaths and taking declarations.

Notaries are authorised to take statutory declarations in lieu of oaths¹. In particular they take declarations, oaths and affidavits relating to stamp and other duties². They may also take declarations in actions pending in any of Her Majesty's dominions³ beyond the seas relating to a debt where one of the parties is resident in Great Britain or Northern Ireland, or relating to real property situated in such dominions⁴. A notary may take a declaration by the attesting witness of a will, deed or other instrument or other competent person to prove its due execution⁵.

Until a day to be appointed every general notary has the powers conferred on a commissioner for oaths by the Commissioners for Oaths Acts 1889 and 1891⁶. Such a notary must not exercise these powers in a proceeding in which he is interested⁷. Such a notary before whom any oath or affidavit is taken or made must state in the jurat or attestation the place at which and the date on which the oath or affidavit is taken or made⁸. A document containing such a statement and purporting to be sealed or signed by such a notary must be admitted in evidence without proof of the seal or signature and without proof that he is such a notary⁹. Such notaries may use the title 'commissioners for oaths'¹⁰.

As from a day to be appointed¹¹ the administration of oaths is a reserved legal activity for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007¹² and a person may be authorised to carry on such activities by the Master of the Faculties¹³.

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

TEXT AND NOTES 6-13--Day appointed for the purpose of these provisions is 1 January 2010: SI 2009/3250.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/6. NOTARIES/(2) FUNCTIONS AND NOTARIAL ACTS/(ii) Notarial Acts/1461. Authentic acts.

(ii) Notarial Acts

1461. Authentic acts.

There are two basic types of notarial act: those in private form, and those in public or notarial form. The private form is where the notary appends a form of authentication to a document, thus converting it into a notarial act. This is the most common form used by English notaries. The public form is an act drawn up as a narrative by the notary, setting out the identity of the parties, the matters which they wish to have recorded, and the fact that they have been made aware of the contents of the act. This is the format which is generally used by civil law notaries¹.

A notarial act or instrument may be received in evidence without further proof as duly authenticated in accordance with the requirements of law unless the contrary is proved².

1 For a more detailed explanation see Brooke's Notary (12th Edn, 2002) ch 5.

2 CPR 32.20 (added by SI 2005/2292).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/6. NOTARIES/(2) FUNCTIONS AND NOTARIAL ACTS/(ii) Notarial Acts/1462. Foreign notaries.

1462. Foreign notaries.

Greater weight is given to the protests and notarial acts of foreign notaries and of notaries practising in the Commonwealth overseas¹; thus the dishonour of a foreign bill presented abroad may be proved by producing a protest under the seal of a notary².

Furthermore, a document which has been formally drawn up or registered as an authentic instrument and is enforceable in certain states³ is, subject to the document not being contrary to public policy, directly enforceable in the United Kingdom, and vice versa⁴.

1 Thus judicial notice is taken of the seal or signature of a notary verifying an affidavit sworn abroad (Commissioners for Oaths Act 1889 s 3; Cole v Sherard (1855) 11 Exch 482), or a power of attorney executed abroad (Hayward v Stephens (1866) 36 LJCh 135) or in the colonies (Re Goss' Estate (1866) 12 Jur NS 595; Hutcheon v Mannington (1802) 6 Ves 823; Ex p Worsley (1793) 2 Hy Bl 275; Omealy v Newell (1807) 8 East 364), and an affidavit verifying the signature of the notary is unnecessary (Re Eastern United Assurance Corp'n Ltd [1928] WN 117); but when an affidavit is taken abroad before a notary authorised to administer oaths, then his signature must be verified (Re Davis's Trusts (1869) LR 8 Eq 98), although the rule has been relaxed where the fund was small (see Mayne v Butler (1864) 13 WR 128; cf Brooke v Brooke (1881) 17 ChD 833). Where several pieces of paper appear to constitute one document which is notarially verified it is not essential that each separate piece should be initialled: Hamel v Panet (1876) 2 App Cas 121, PC. 7. LEGAL EXECUTIVES

(1) APPOINTMENT AND PRACTICE

1463. In general.

A legal executive¹ is a lawyer whose qualifications are recognised by the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX')². He may practise in contentious as well as non-contentious areas of law, performing many of the roles of a qualified solicitor, either in private practice or in public administration, and typically specialising in a particular area of practice³. Qualifying as a legal executive can also act as a route to qualification as a solicitor⁴. Legal executives are permitted to act as commissioners for oaths⁵.

Additionally, a fellow of ILEX confirmed as being of good standing and having been admitted as a fellow for not less than three years may authorise a withdrawal from his law firm's client account by signing specific authority⁶, and is eligible for membership of the Solicitors Regulation Authority's personal injury accreditation scheme⁷.

1 Only a fellow of the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX') is entitled to describe himself as a legal executive: see the Articles of Association of the Institute of Legal Executives, art 6.A. As to qualification as a fellow see PARA 1468. As to the Articles of Association see PARA 1464 note 1.

2 As to ILEX see PARA 1464.

3 Until a day to be appointed ILEX is an authorised body for the purposes of rights of audience and the conduct of legislation under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990: see ss 27, 28 (see PARAS 497, 498); and the Institute of Legal Executives Order 1998, SI 1998/1077. As from a day to be appointed ILEX is an approved regulator for the purposes of rights of audience under the Legal Services Act 2007: see Sch 4, para 1(1); and PARA 358 et seq. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

ILEX is a qualifying regulator for the purposes of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999: see the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 18 para 2; and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM. A legal executive employed by a solicitor's practice is a specified person for the purposes of compromise agreements under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 Sch 3A, para 2(3)(d): see the Compromise Agreements (Description of Person) Order 2005, SI 2005/2364; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 613.

ILEX may award a relevant qualification for the purposes of the judicial appointment eligibility condition under the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007: see ss 50-52; and COURTS.

For further discussion of the range of work in which a legal executive may engage, see the ILEX website at www.ilex.org.uk on the date at which this volume states the law.

4 See PARA 1470.

5 Until a day to be appointed ILEX is an authorised body for the purposes of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 113 (see PARA 577): see the Commissioners for Oaths (Prescribed Bodies) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1676. As from a day to be appointed ILEX is an approved regulator for the purposes of the administration of oaths: see the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 4 para 1(1). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. During the transitional period, a person authorised by ILEX to practise as a member of the profession is deemed to be authorised to administer oaths, in accordance with and subject to the regulatory arrangements of ILEX, and provided the person has in force a certificate authorising him to practise as a legal executive: see Sch 5 para 10. As to the meaning of 'transitional period' see PARA 516 note 9.

6 See the Solicitors' Accounts Rules 1998 r 23(1)(b); and PARA 841.

7 This is subject to the condition that the fellow must have passed the civil litigation and tort examination papers: see generally the Solicitors Regulation Authority Personal Injury Accreditation Scheme Criteria and guidance notes, available at the date on which this title states the law on the Authority's website at www.sra.org.uk. As to the Authority see PARA 619.

1464. ILEX.

The Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX') was founded in 1963 as the professional body that represents legal executives, although its origins date back to 1928 with the incorporation of the Solicitors' Managing Clerks Association whose council and articles of association were carried over by the institute¹.

ILEX was established, inter alia, to provide an organisation for persons resident in England and Wales or elsewhere who are:

- 683 (1) fellows of ILEX²;
- 684 (2) registered with ILEX and provide or are employed in providing legal services of any kind ancillary to legal services³; or
- 685 (3) registered with ILEX for the purpose of studying or becoming qualified in law or other subjects provided by ILEX⁴, and to advance and protect the status and interests of all such persons⁵. The other objects of the institute may be summarised as follows:

- 686 (a) to promote professional unity, co-operation and mutual assistance amongst persons employed in the legal profession or employed in legal work⁶;
- 687 (b) to promote and secure professional standards of conduct amongst its members⁷;
- 688 (c) to provide for the education, training and development of those who wish to become proficient in the law in all subjects and skills⁸;
- 689 (d) to give and award diplomas, certificates, prizes, scholarships, bursaries and other awards to persons showing proficiency in the law and other subjects⁹;
- 690 (e) to establish trust funds, bursaries and scholarships and to make payments out of institute funds to promote the educational or professional advancement of legal executives¹⁰;
- 691 (f) to prepare, publish, acquire, distribute or disseminate books, papers, periodicals or any information relating to law and legal practice or any other subject relative to the education and training provided by ILEX¹¹;
- 692 (g) to establish, maintain and control branches of ILEX, and to determine and modify their constitutions, rights, privileges, obligations and duties¹²;
- 693 (h) to provide financial assistance or relief to members, ex-members or their dependants in distressed circumstances¹³;
- 694 (i) to carry out any other lawful trade or business whatsoever which can in the opinion of the council of ILEX¹⁴ or the governing body be carried out advantageously to ILEX¹⁵.

Ilex has, subject to certain restrictions, extensive powers to engage in financial and business activity, to accept grants and donations, and to borrow, raise or invest money in order to further these objects¹⁶.

1 The current Memorandum and Articles of Association which constitute ILEX as a company limited by guarantee and not having a capital divided into shares were adopted on 16 July 1999 and amended by special resolutions passed on 20 July 2001, 23 July 2004, 15 July 2005, 2 June 2006 and 16 September 2006.

1465. The council of ILEX.

The business of the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX')¹ is managed by a council² which constitutes the board of directors of ILEX and may exercise all of its powers³. The council may (subject as otherwise provided by these articles⁴) delegate any of its powers⁵ to:

- 695 (1) the chief executive⁶; or
- 696 (2) any committee consisting of two or more members of the council⁷.

It may make, alter or rescind bye-laws to enable it to manage ILEX⁸.

The council must consist of not more than 27 fellows⁹ elected as constituency members¹⁰ and six fellows appointed as co-opted members¹¹. It must appoint a president, vice-president and vice-president elect from its constituency members¹². Provision is made with regard to the appointment and retirement of members of the council¹³, council proceedings¹⁴, and other matters¹⁵.

6 Articles of Association of the Institute of Legal Executives art 68(i). The council may appoint any person (not being a member of the council) to be the chief executive (formerly the secretary general) of ILEX on such terms and for such period as the council thinks fit. The chief executive is entitled to attend and speak at all meetings of the council, unless the council resolves otherwise, but the chief executive must not be counted in the quorum or vote at any council or committee meeting: art 81.

7 Articles of Association of the Institute of Legal Executives art 68(ii). 8 See the Articles of Association of the Institute of Legal Executives art 67.

9 As to fellows of ILEX see PARA 1468.

10 For these purposes England and Wales are divided into 12 constituencies, the boundaries of which are determined from time to time by the council. Each constituency must be represented by one or more constituency members, that number to be determined from time to time by the council: Articles of Association of the Institute of Legal Executives art 47(B). As to eligibility as a constituency member see art 48.

11 See the Articles of Association of the Institute of Legal Executives art 47(A). One of the co-opted members may be a fellow who is qualified as a solicitor: art 47(A). The council must make arrangements for the co-option of fellows to serve on the council and has the power to determine the criteria on which fellows are to 1466. ILEX Professional Standards Ltd.

As from a day to be appointed¹, the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX')² is an approved regulator³ for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007⁴. As such the Legal Services Board⁵ has a statutory duty to ensure that ILEX's representative functions do not interfere with its regulatory functions, and that decisions relating to the exercise of each category are taken, as far as possible, independently of one another⁶. To this end, ILEX has formed ILEX Professional Standards Ltd, a ring-fenced subsidiary responsible for regulating the profession, appointing its first chairman with effect from 1 June 2008⁷.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 s 20, Sch 4 are brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

1467. Branches of ILEX.

The council of the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX')¹ may make bye-laws to establish and constitute branches of the institute². It may then agree such changes in the regulations of individual branches as it thinks fit³, and has the power to make payments to support and assist them in carrying out their functions⁴.

1468. Membership of ILEX.

The membership of the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX')¹ comprises fellows², registered immigration advisers³, and any additional grade created by the council of ILEX⁴. A person is eligible to be admitted as a fellow if he is able to satisfy the council that he has the requisite qualifications and experience, and that he has satisfied any other of the council's requirements in respect of fitness for admission as a fellow⁵. Once admitted every fellow is entitled to receive a certificate showing that he is a fellow; and to describe himself as such⁶.

A registered immigration adviser must be granted the authority to be a qualified person⁷ if he is able to satisfy the council that he has the requisite qualifications, skills and experience to provide immigration advice or services and provided that he has satisfied the council regarding his fitness to be granted such authority⁸.

The council's decision whether or not to admit an applicant for admission as a fellow or registration as an immigration adviser is final and binding⁹, and it may in its discretion refuse to enrol or admit an applicant as a fellow or to register any person although he is otherwise eligible for admission or registration; and permit a person to be admitted or registered although he is not otherwise eligible¹⁰. The council also has the power to award designatory letters and status descriptions to fellows, registered persons and others even though they are not members of ILEX¹¹.

Membership of ILEX is not be transferable or transmissible¹².

A fellow or registered immigration adviser immediately ceases to be such¹³ if:

- 697 (1) he resigns by giving notice in writing to ILEX¹⁴;
- 698 (2) he dies¹⁵;
- 699 (3) he fails to pay the whole or any part of any fee or other sum payable by him for a period of 12 months from the date on which it became due and the council resolves that he ceases to be a fellow or registered immigration adviser¹⁶;
- 700 (4) he is guilty of conduct which makes him unfit to be a fellow or registered person, or commits a breach of the articles of association of ILEX or of the bye-laws and an order is made by the disciplinary body excluding him from membership or cancelling his registration¹⁷.

The council must make rules to deal with fellows or registered persons whose ability to practise is or is suspected of being seriously impaired, and subject to those rules the council may suspend a fellow or registered person from membership¹⁸.

Everyone who is registered with ILEX, in whatever grade, will be bound by the provisions of the Articles of Association, and by the bye-laws and regulations made under the Articles: Membership Requirement Bye-laws (23 September 2005) para 3.

Generally, to achieve full qualification as a fellow, a member of ILEX (see note 4) must have five years' qualifying employment under the supervision of a solicitor, including two years after the successful completion of the academic requirements: see the Membership Requirement Bye-laws (23 September 2005) para 5; and PARA 1469.

(2) TRAINING AND QUALIFICATIONS

1469. Training and qualifications.

The council of the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX')¹ has the power to make bye-laws to regulate the provision of tests of knowledge and assessments of competence for those seeking to obtain qualifications offered by ILEX or by any subsidiary or associated company, and for those seeking to be admitted as fellows².

In general a person intending to qualify as a legal executive will pursue the necessary academic qualifications while working under a solicitor or other qualified person.

The ILEX professional qualification begins at A-level equivalence with the Level 3 Certificate in Law and Practice, from which follows the Professional Diploma in Law and Practice, providing a broad grounding in the subject³. At degree level equivalence, the Level 6 Professional Higher Diploma in Law allows for a specialist study, selected to match the student's professional work⁴. Upon successful completion of the level 6 examinations, the student may apply to become a full member of ILEX⁵.

A member may then be admitted as a fellow if he is in qualifying employment⁶ and has been so employed for an aggregate of five years or more, with at least two consecutive years immediately prior to making the application⁷.

ILEX members may also attend an advocacy skills course and upon successful completion apply for certificates in civil, criminal and family proceedings, with which a member is entitled to practise as a Legal Executive Advocate⁸.

4 See the Level 6 Professional Higher Diploma in Law - Student Handbook, available on the ILEX website (www.ilex.org.uk at the date at which this volume states the law). The Level 6 diploma is currently under review and is due to be replaced in September 2009.

5 See the Membership Requirement Bye-laws (23 September 2005) paras 4.

6 A person is in qualifying employment if he is employed: (1) by a solicitor or a firm of solicitors in private practice; (2) by a Licensed Conveyancer or a firm of Licensed Conveyancers; or (3) by any firm, corporation, undertaking, department or office where the employment is subject to supervision by a fellow, solicitor, barrister or licensed conveyancer employed in duties of a legal nature by that firm, corporation, undertaking, department or office; and in each case, his duties under the terms of his employment are wholly or principally of a legal nature rather than of an administrative nature: see the Membership Requirement Bye-laws (23 September 2005) para 6.1. Further provision is also made with regard to qualifying employment: see the Membership Requirement Bye-laws (23 September 2005) paras 6.2-6.7.

7 See the Membership Requirement Bye-laws (23 September 2005) paras 5.1(1)-(3). He must also: (1) have paid all subscriptions and other fees payable by him to ILEX, or have made arrangements for payment; (2) provide a certificate signed by the fellow, solicitor, barrister or licensed conveyancer, or at the discretion of the council of ILEX any other person, who supervises his work or by whom he is employed, which confirms the nature of his duties and that he is competent to be a fellow; (3) satisfy any other requirements of the council in respect of fitness to be admitted as a fellow; (4) agree to become a member of ILEX; and (5) accept any obligations imposed on him by the Articles of Association or the council's bye-laws: see the Membership Requirement Bye-laws (23 September 2005) para 5.1(4)-(8). A person who has been admitted as a fellow but whose membership has lapsed may be eligible for re-admission as a fellow: see para 5.2. As to the council see PARA 1465; and as to the Articles see PARA 1464 note 1.

The rights of audience are as follows (see the Institute of Legal Executives Rights of Audience Qualification Scheme Guidelines for Candidates Completing an Application for a Certificate of Eligibility):

- 2187 (1) under a Civil Proceedings Certificate a legal executive advocate is entitled (a) to appear in open court in the county court in all actions, except family proceedings; (b) to appear before justices or a district judge (magistrates' court) in the magistrates' courts in relation to all matters originating by complaint or application, including applications under the licensing, betting and gaming legislation; (c) to appear before any tribunal under the supervision of the Council on Tribunals where the tribunal rules provide for a non-discretionary right of audience being available to barristers and solicitors; (d) to appear before coroners' courts in respect of all matters determined by those courts and to exercise rights of audience similar to those exercised by solicitors and barristers;

A Fellow of the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX')¹ who has satisfied the Solicitors Regulations Authority² of completion of the academic stage of training³ is not required to serve under a training contract if (1) he has satisfactorily completed a legal practice course⁴ or an integrated course⁵; (2) he has been either continuously engaged in the practice of the law since qualifying as a fellow of the institute before attending that course or he satisfies the Authority that, although those requirements are not met, he has experience in the practice of the law since qualifying as a fellow of the institute that is sufficiently recent to justify him not being required to serve under a training contract⁶; and (3) he has satisfactorily completed a professional skills course⁷.

A member of ILEX who has three years' qualifying employment and who has satisfactorily completed the professional qualifications of ILEX which give exemption from the common professional examination⁸ may commence a legal practice course on either a full or part time basis⁹, upon the successful completion of which he must serve a two year training contract¹⁰.

1472. Disciplinary bodies.

The council of the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX')¹ must establish such disciplinary, appeals and investigative committees and tribunals as it sees fit and from time to time make rules setting out their constitution, powers, functions and membership². Such bodies have the power to order that a member³ be excluded from membership or his registration be cancelled or, alternatively, that he be reprimanded or admonished⁴.

They may, additionally, order a member to pay a fine, costs to ILEX in respect of the proceedings it has brought against him, a sum to a complainant as compensation, or all three, and also have power to order ILEX to make a payment to a fellow or registered person by way of compensation or to meet his costs in defending the proceedings brought against him⁵.

The council may delegate to any subsidiary company of ILEX any or all of its powers relating to the regulation of professional conduct including (but not limited to) disciplinary matters and the right to charge fees in respect of such activity⁶.

1473. The Investigating and Appeals Committees.

The Investigating Committee¹ is charged with considering:

- 701 (1) complaints² against members³;
- 702 (2) declarations of prior conduct⁴ by members or persons applying to be members⁵;
- 703 (3) whether a member has been guilty of any misconduct or has breached the Institute's Articles of Association, bye-laws or regulations⁶, whether or not a complaint has been made against the member by a third party⁷; and what, if any, action should be taken or penalty should be imposed as a result⁸.

A complaint made against a member must be sent to the Institute of Legal Executives ('ILEX')⁹ on the appropriate complaint form¹⁰. ILEX must then appoint an investigating practitioner¹¹ or an officer¹² to make preliminary inquiries¹³. A copy of the complaint must also be sent to the member for their response to the allegations¹⁴. Once all the information has been gathered a summary of the issues is prepared and the matter is put to the Investigating Committee¹⁵.

The Investigating Committee has the power to:

- 704 (a) accept the member's response to a complaint, allegation or issue of potential misconduct and decide to take no further action in relation to it¹⁶;
- 705 (b) decide that the complaint, allegation or issue of potential misconduct concerns matters beyond the jurisdiction of ILEX¹⁷;
- 706 (c) call for further information or evidence¹⁸;
- 707 (d) request the member to provide references from employers or others as to his character and professional conduct¹⁹;
- 708 (e) defer a decision so that legal advice may be taken²⁰;
- 709 (f) request a member to give undertakings as to his future conduct²¹;
- 710 (g) impose conditions on a member in respect of his conduct or in regard to his employment that it may think appropriate²²;
- 711 (h) reject a complaint, allegation or issue of potential misconduct²³;
- 712 (i) admonish, reprimand or warn the member as to his future conduct²⁴;
- 713 (j) refer the matter to the Disciplinary Tribunal²⁵.

ILEX must notify the member concerned and the complainant of the decision taken, and, unless the matter has been referred to the Disciplinary Tribunal, the member may then appeal against it within 15 days of notification²⁶. An appeal is heard by the Appeals Committee²⁷ which may confirm or vary the decision or refer the matter back to the Investigating Committee for further consideration²⁸.

1 The Investigating Committee is established under the Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 r 1(1), (2). It is made up of nine members, six members of the council and three lay members: r 11(1). A minimum of five members (at least one of whom is lay) are required for a quorum, and the committee must meet regularly throughout the year: r 11(2)-(5). As to the appointment of members and officers see rr 12-15; and as to the conduct of meetings see rr 36-38. Certain matters may be resolved without a meeting: see rr 39, 40. 'Lay member' means a lay person who has been appointed by the ILEX council to serve on the committee: r 9. As to the council see PARA 1465.

2 'Complaint' means any document, communication or record of conversation setting out matters of complaint against a member: Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 r 9.

2194 (5) any decision (whether under appeal or not) excluding or expelling him from any other professional body; and every applicant for registration with ILEX and every member must by notice to ILEX declare them: Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 r 16. Further provision is made with regard to prior conduct: see rr 17-25.

5 Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 r 10(b).

13 See the Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 rr 27, 28(1). Provision is also made with regard to timescales (see r 29; and Appendix 1) and notification (see r 30). As to the further powers of the committee see r 35.

14 See the Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 rr 27(f), 28(2). Provision is also made for the service of documents: see r 7.

15 See the Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 rr 27(m), 28(3). The committee must not investigate old complaints (ie where the matter to which the complaint relates occurred more than 12 months before the complaint was raised) unless the complainant can show good reason why he could not bring the matter to the attention of the ILEX earlier, or the committee decides that the complaint should nevertheless be investigated: see r 33. The committee may request a member to appear before it: see r 35.

- 25 Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 r 31(j). Where the committee decides a prima facie case has been made out that a member has been guilty of professional misconduct, a breach of the institute's Articles of Association, bye-laws or regulations, or conduct unbecoming to ILEX or likely to bring it or its members into disrepute it must refer the matter to the Disciplinary Tribunal unless it finds that the conduct is not serious enough to justify such a referral being made: r 32(1). As to the Disciplinary Tribunal see PARA 1474.
- 26 See the Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 rr 41, 43(1). As to the grounds for appeal see r 47.

1474. The Disciplinary and Appeals Tribunals.

If a complaint¹ is referred to the Disciplinary Tribunal² the complainant³ and the respondent⁴ must be notified as soon as is reasonably practical⁵, and a date, time and venue must be set for the hearing within three months of the referral⁶. A panel must also be selected from the tribunal to hear the case⁷. Additional charges may be brought where the panel is satisfied that this would not occasion unfairness to the respondent⁸.

The panel must decide whether each allegation made against the respondent has been proven beyond reasonable doubt⁹. If it finds that one or more of the allegations has been proven, it has the power to: (a) exclude a person from membership¹⁰; (b) admonish or reprimand the member¹¹; and (c) order the member to pay a fine, costs to ILEX, compensation to the complainant, or all three¹². If the panel judges that one or more allegations have not been proven, it may order that ILEX pay compensation to the respondent or cover his costs¹³. Documents and exhibits used or produced at a hearing must be maintained for at least a year¹⁴, and any findings or orders reported to the council¹⁵. The tribunal may also decide that its decision should be published¹⁶.

The member may appeal against a decision of the Disciplinary Tribunal to the Appeals Tribunal¹⁷ who may affirm or vary the findings¹⁸.

7 See the Investigation, Disciplinary and Appeals Rules 2008 r 59. The panel consists of three members of the tribunal, two lay and one member of the council: r 59(1). As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. A licensable body² which, by virtue of a licence under the Legal Services Act 2007 Part 5³, is authorised to carry on a reserved legal activity⁴ by a licensing authority⁵ is an authorised person in respect of that activity⁶ and consequently entitled to carry on that activity⁷.

The Legal Services Act 2007 Part 5 has effect for the purpose of regulating the carrying on of reserved legal activities and other activities by a body which holds a licence in force under Part 5 (a 'licensed body')⁸.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 ss 13, 18, 71, 109 are to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

1477. Licensable bodies.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. A body ('B') is a licensable body if a non-authorised person² is a manager of B or has an interest in B³. B is also a licensable body if another body ('A') is a manager of B, or has an interest in B and non-authorised persons are entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, at least 10 percent of the voting rights in A⁴. A body may be licensable by virtue of both the above situations⁵.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 ss 72, 111 are to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

As to the meaning of 'registered foreign lawyer' see the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 89; and PARA 628 note 2.

3 Legal Services Act 2007 s 72(1). A person has an interest in a body if the person holds shares in the body or the person is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, voting rights in the body: s 72(3). 'Shares' means:

2199 (1) in relation to a body with a share capital, allotted shares (s 72(6)(a));

However a body may only make an application in relation to a reserved legal activity if it is a relevant approved regulator in relation to the activity⁸ or it has made an application⁹ for the Board to recommend that an order be made by the Lord Chancellor designating the body as an approved regulator in relation to the activity¹⁰.

An applicant may, at any time, withdraw the application by giving notice to that effect to the Board¹¹.

1481. Advice.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The Legal Services Board² must give each of the persons listed below a copy of the application and accompanying material and a notice specifying a period within which any advice³ must be given⁴. Those persons are:

- 714 (1) the Office of Fair Trading⁵;
- 715 (2) the Consumer Panel⁶;
- 716 (3) the Lord Chief Justice⁷;
- 717 (4) such other persons as the Board considers it reasonable to consult regarding the application⁸.

The Board must give the applicant a copy of any advice duly given by the persons in heads (1) to (4) above⁹ and the applicant may make to the Board written representations and, if the Board authorises it to do so, oral representations, about the advice¹⁰. The Board must, as soon as practicable after the period within which representations¹¹ may be made, publish any advice duly given¹² and any written representations duly made¹³ and the report if any¹⁴.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

2 As to the Legal Services Board see the Legal Services Act 2007 s 2; and PARAS 303-326.

3 ie any advice under the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 paras 4-6 (see notes 5-8). As to notices generally see PARA 303 note 11.

4 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 para 3(1). A person (the 'consultee') to whom a copy of the application is given under Sch 10 para 3(1) may, for the purposes of giving advice under Sch 10 paras 4-7, request the applicant or any other person to provide the consultee with such additional information as may be specified by the consultee: Sch 10 para 8.

5 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 para 3(2)(a). As to the Office of Fair Trading see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 6 et seq. The Office of Fair Trading must give the Board such advice as the Office thinks fit regarding whether the application should be granted, and in deciding what advice to give the Office must in particular have regard to whether making an order under Sch 10 para 15 (see PARA 1484) in accordance with the recommendation applied for would (or would be likely to) prevent, restrict or distort competition within the market for reserved legal services to any significant extent: Sch 10 para 4. As to the meaning of 'reserved legal services' see PARA 512 note 2.

6 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 para 3(2)(b). As to the Consumer Panel see PARA 323. The Consumer Panel must give the Board such advice as the Consumer Panel thinks fit regarding whether the application should be granted and, in deciding what advice to give, the Consumer Panel must, in particular, have regard to the likely impact on consumers of the making of an order under Sch 10 para 15 (see PARA 1484) in accordance with the recommendation applied for: Sch 10 para 5. As to the meaning of 'consumers' see PARA 302 note 8.

The Board must give the Lord Chief Justice a copy of any advice duly given under Sch 10 paras 4-6 and a notice specifying a period within which any advice under Sch 10 para 7 must be given: Sch 10 para 7(1). The Lord Chief Justice must then give such advice to the Board as the Lord Chief Justice thinks fit regarding whether the application should be granted: Sch 10 para 7(2). In deciding what advice to give, the Lord Chief Justice must, in particular, have regard to the likely impact on the courts in England and Wales of the making of an order under Sch 10 para 15 (PARA 1484) in accordance with the recommendation applied for: Sch 10 para 7(3).

8 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 para 3(2)(d). In Sch 10 Pt 1, in relation to an application 'selected consultee' means a person within Sch 10 para 3(2)(d): Sch 10 para 3(3). A selected consultee may give the Board such advice as the selected consultee thinks fit in respect of the application: Sch 10 para 6.

9 Ie advice duly given under the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 paras 4-7 (see notes 5-8).

10 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 para 9(1), (2). The Board must make rules governing the making of oral and written representations: Sch 10 para 9(3). Representations must be made within the period of 28 days beginning with the day on which the copy of the advice is given to the applicant or such longer period as the Board may specify in a particular case: Sch 10 para 9(4). Where oral representations are made, the Board must prepare a report of those representations: Sch 10 para 9(5). Before preparing that report, the Board must give the applicant a reasonable opportunity to comment on a draft of the report and have regard to any comments duly made: Sch 10 para 9(6).

11 Ie representations under the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 para 9 (see text and note 10).

12 Ie advice duly given under the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 paras 4-7 (see notes 5-8).

13 Ie written representations duly made under the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 para 9.

14 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 10 para 10(1). Nothing in Sch 10 para 10(1) operates:

2202 (1) to prevent a person who gives advice under Sch 10 paras 4-7 (see notes 5-8) from publishing that advice (Sch 10 para 10(2)(a)); or

2203 (2) to prevent a person who makes representations under Sch 10 para 9 (see text and note 10) from publishing those representations (Sch 10 para 10(2)(b)).

A person (the 'publisher') publishing any such material (whether under Sch 10 para 10(1) or otherwise) must, so far as practicable, exclude any matter which relates to the private affairs of a particular individual the publication of which, in the opinion of the publisher, would or might seriously and prejudicially affect the interests of that individual: Sch 10 para 10(3).

The Board may, before the end of the decision period, issue a notice extending that period by a period specified in the notice and stating the reasons for extending the decision period: Sch 10 para 13(3), (6). Although more than one such notice may be issued, the decision period must not exceed 16 months: Sch 10 para 13(4). The Board may issue a notice under Sch 10 para 13(3) only after it has consulted the Office of Fair Trading, the Consumer Panel and the Lord Chief Justice, and obtained the Lord Chancellor's consent to the extension: Sch 10 para 13(5). 1484. Effect of grant of application.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Where an application is granted in relation to a reserved legal activity² or activities the Legal Services Board must recommend³ to the Lord Chancellor that an order be made designating the applicant as a licensing authority in relation to the reserved legal activity or activities in question⁴. Where such a recommendation is made the Lord Chancellor may:

- 722 (1) make an order in accordance with the recommendation⁵; or
- 723 (2) refuse to make such an order⁶.

Where such an order is made⁷, the applicant's proposed licensing rules are at the same time treated as having been approved by the Board⁸.

Where the recommendation relates to more than one reserved legal activity, the Lord Chancellor may make an order under head (1) above in relation to all or any of them⁹.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Where an approved regulator² (the 'former authority') has its designation as a licensing authority in relation to one or more reserved legal activities cancelled³ the Lord Chancellor may, by order, make transfer arrangements⁴.

The transfer arrangements:

- 736 (1) must make such provision as is necessary to ensure that, where a licensed body⁵ is treated under those arrangements as being authorised to carry on a protected activity by the new authority, that licensed body is subject to the licensing rules of the new authority⁵;
- 737 (2) may make provision requiring amounts held by the former authority which represent amounts paid to it by way of licensing fees⁶ by the consenting licensed bodies (or a part of the amounts so held) to be paid to the new authority and treated as if they were amounts paid by those licensed bodies by way of licensing fees to the new authority⁷.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 s 77 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

4 Legal Services Act 2007 s 77(1), (3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such orders had been made. 'Transfer arrangements' are arrangements in accordance with which each consenting licensed body is, from the time the cancellation takes effect, treated as being authorised to carry on each protected activity by virtue of a licence issued under Pt 5 (ss 71-111) by a licensing authority, in relation to the protected activity, which consents to the transfer arrangements: s 77(4). 'Consenting licensed body' means a licensed body authorised by the former authority which consents to the transfer arrangements: s 77(5). For the purposes of s 77 a licensed body is 'authorised by the former authority' if immediately before the time the cancellation takes effect the body is, by virtue of a licence under Pt 5, authorised by the former authority to carry on an activity which is a reserved legal activity to which the cancellation relates and in relation to that body the activity which the body is authorised to carry on is a 'protected activity', and 'new authority' means the licensing authority by which (in accordance with transfer arrangements under s 77(4)) the body is treated as authorised to carry on a protected activity: s 77(9). The Lord Chancellor may make an order under s 77 only if the Board has made a recommendation in accordance with s 78 (see PARA 1494) and the order is in the same form as, or in a form which is not materially different from, the draft order annexed to that recommendation: s 77(8). As to the meaning of 'licensed body' see PARA 1476.

5 Legal Services Act 2007 s 77(6)(a). Section 77(6)(a) is subject to any transitional provision which may be made by the transfer arrangements, including provision modifying the licensing rules of the new authority as they apply to the bodies to whom the transfer arrangements apply: s 77(7). As to licensing rules see PARA 1498 et seq.

6 For the purpose of the Legal Services Act 2007 s 77 'licensing fee', in relation to a licensing authority, means a fee payable by a licensed body under the authority's licensing rules made in accordance with Sch 11 para 21 (see PARA 1512): s 77(10).

Before making such a recommendation the Board must publish a draft of the proposed recommendation and the proposed draft order⁵. The draft must be accompanied by a notice which states that representations about the proposals may be made to the Board within a specified period⁶. Before making the recommendation, the Board must have regard to any representations duly made⁷.

4 Legal Services Act 2007 s 78(1). If the draft order to be annexed to the recommendation differs from the draft previously published in a way which is, in the opinion of the Board, material, the Board must, before making the recommendation, publish the draft order along with a statement detailing the changes made and the reasons for those changes: s 78(5).

On an application by a person appointed by the Board to act on its behalf, a judge of the High Court, circuit judge or justice of the peace may issue a warrant authorising that person to enter and search the premises of the former authority and take possession of any written or electronic records found on the premises⁸. A person so authorised may, for the purpose of continuing regulation, take copies of written or electronic records found on a search carried out by virtue of the warrant⁹. The judge or justice of the peace may not issue the warrant unless satisfied that its issue is necessary or desirable for the purpose of continuing regulation¹⁰.

8 Legal Services Act 2007 s 79(3). The Lord Chancellor must make regulations:

2204 (1) specifying further matters which a judge or justice of the peace must be satisfied of, or matters which a judge or justice of the peace must have regard to, before issuing a warrant (s 79(6)(a)); and

2205 (2) regulating the exercise of a power conferred by a warrant issued under s 79(3) or by s 79(4) (whether by restricting the circumstances in which a power may be exercised, by specifying conditions to be complied with in the exercise of a power, or otherwise) (s 79(6)(b)).

Regulations under s 79(6)(b) must in particular make provision as to circumstances in which written or electronic records of which a person has taken possession by virtue of a warrant issued under s 79(3) may be copied or must be returned: s 79(7). But the Lord Chancellor may not make regulations under s 79(6) unless they are made in accordance with a recommendation made by the Board or the Lord Chancellor has consulted the Board about the making of the regulations: s 79(8). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made. The Board must make rules as to the persons it may appoint for the purposes of s 79(3): s 79(9). The draft must be accompanied by a notice which states that representations about the proposals may be made to the Board within a specified period: s 81(3). Before making any recommendation, the Board must have regard to any representations duly made: s 81(4). If the draft order to be annexed to the recommendation differs from the draft published under s 81(2)(b) in a way which is, in the opinion of the Board, material, the Board must, before making the recommendation, publish the draft order along with a statement detailing the changes made and the reasons for those changes: s 81(5). UPDATE

1500 Regulatory arrangement provisions to co-operate with investigations

TEXT AND NOTE 1--Day appointed in relation to Legal Services Act 2007 s 145(2), (3) is 1 January 2009: SI 2008/3149.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/8. ALTERNATIVE BUSINESS STRUCTURES/(2) LICENSING AUTHORITIES/(vi) Licensing Rules/A. GENERALLY/1501. Special bodies.

1501. Special bodies.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. A licensed body² (or an applicant for a licence) which is an independent trade union, a not for profit body, a community interest company, a low-risk body³ or a body of such other description as may be prescribed by order made by the Lord Chancellor on the recommendation of the Legal Services Board⁴ may apply to the relevant licensing authority, in accordance with its licensing rules⁵, for the authority to make one or both of the following orders⁶:

- 750 (1) that the authority's licensing rules apply in relation to the body with such modifications as may be specified in the order⁷;
- 751 (2) that the provisions relating to the ownership of licensed bodies⁸ do not apply in relation to the body, or apply in relation to the body with such modifications as may be specified in the order⁹.

In deciding what order (if any) is appropriate in all the circumstances of the case, the licensing authority must in particular have regard to:

- 752 (a) the reserved legal activities and non-reserved activities which the body carries on (or proposes to carry on)¹⁰;
- 753 (b) the nature of the persons to whom the body provides (or proposes to provide) services¹¹;
- 754 (c) any non-authorised persons¹² who have an interest or an indirect interest in the licensed body or hold a material interest in the licensed body, or are managers of the body¹³; and
- 755 (d) any other matter specified in the authority's licensing rules¹⁴.

Where a licensing authority has made an order under the above provisions in relation to a body to which those provisions apply, the licensing authority must revoke that order if it becomes aware that the body in respect of which the order was made is no longer a body to which those provisions apply¹⁵.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 ss 106-108 are to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'licensed body' see PARA 1476.

3 A body ('B') is a low risk body if the management condition and the ownership condition are satisfied in relation to it: Legal Services Act 2007 s 108(1). The management condition is that the number of managers of the body who are within s 108(4) is less than 10% of the total number of managers: s 108(2). The ownership condition is that:

2208 (1) the proportion of shares in B held by non-authorised persons or licensed bodies is less than 10% (s 108(3)(a), (4)); and

2209 (2) the proportion of the voting rights in B which such persons are entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, is less than 10% (s 108(3)(b)); and

- 2210 (3) if B has a parent undertaking ('P') the proportion of shares in P held by such persons is less than 10% and the proportion of the voting rights in P which such persons are entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, is less than 10% (s 108(3)(c)).

As to the meaning of 'parent undertaking' see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 420; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 351 (definition applied by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 108(5)).

4 Legal Services Act 2007 s 106(1). At the date at which this volume states the law no such orders had been made. As to the Legal Services Board see s 2; and PARAS 303-326. The licensing authority may revoke or otherwise modify an order under s 106 on the application of the body in relation to which the order was made or of its own motion: s 107(3). However it may only do so if it considers it appropriate to do so in all the circumstances of the case, having regard to the matters mentioned in s 106(5): s 107(4).

5 As to the licensing rules see PARA 1498. In the Legal Services Act 2007 Pt 5 'relevant licensing authority':

- 2211 (1) in relation to a licensed body, means the licensing authority by which the licensed body is authorised to carry on an activity which is a reserved legal activity (s 73(4)(a));

- 2212 (2) in relation to an applicant for a licence, means the licensing authority to which the application is made (s 73(4)(b)).

As to the meaning of 'licensing authority' see PARA 1478.

6 Legal Services Act 2007 s 106(2). On an application under s 106(2), the licensing authority may make any order which the authority has power to make under s 106(3) and considers appropriate in all the circumstances of the case, whether or not it is the order for which the applicant applied: s 106(4). Licensing rules must make provision about the form and manner in which applications under s 106 or s 107 are to be made: see Sch 11 paras 7, 8; and PARA 1507.

7 Legal Services Act 2007 s 106(3)(a). If the licensing authority makes an order under s 106(3), the authority's licensing rules or Sch 13 (see PARAS 1522-1543) or both (as the case may be) have effect in relation to that body in accordance with that order: s 106(6). The licensing authority may not make an order under s 106(3)(a) in relation to provisions of its licensing rules made in accordance with Sch 11 paras 2, 3 (see PARA 1503), 7, 8 (see PARA 1507), 9(3), 10(2) (see PARA 1508), 16, 18 (see PARA 1511), 23 (see PARA 1513), 24(1)-(3), (8), (10), (11), 26(2) (see PARA 1514): s 106(7). The licensing authority may not make an order under s 106(3)(a) which results in its licensing rules, as they apply in relation to the body to which the order relates, not making the provision required by s 83(5)(a)-(g), Sch 11 paras 1 (see PARA 1502), 4(3) (see PARA 1504), 6 (see PARA 1506), 20 (see PARA 1511): s 106(8). If the licensing authority's licensing rules, as they apply in relation to a body to which an order under s 106(3)(a) relates, make provision requiring the body to have a Head of Legal Practice approved by the licensing authority or a Head of Finance and Administration approved by the licensing authority, they must also provide for a review by the licensing authority of any decision by it to refuse or withdraw that approval: s 106(9).

A. LICENSING AUTHORITIES GENERALLY

1515. Application to a licensing authority.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. A licensing authority other than the Legal Services Board² must determine any application for a licence which is made to it³. A licensing authority may not grant an application for a licence unless it is satisfied that if the licence is granted the applicant will comply with its licensing rules⁴.

If the licensing authority grants an application for a licence, it must issue the licence as soon as reasonably practicable⁵ and the licence has effect from the date on which it is issued⁶.

¹ The Legal Services Act 2007 s 84 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

² As to the Legal Services Board's determination of applications in its capacity as a licensing authority see PARA 1517. As to licensing authorities see PARA 1478 et seq. As to the Legal Services Board see the Legal Services Act 2007 s 2; and PARAS 303-326.

1516. Licensing authority's duty to determine its suitability.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. A licensable body may apply to each competent licensing authority² for:

- 766 (1) a determination as to whether the authority has suitable regulatory arrangements³;
- 767 (2) a statement as to whether the authority has made a particular application⁴ and if it has, a determination as to whether, if the application is granted, the authority will have suitable regulatory arrangements⁵.

A licensable body may apply to each potentially competent licensing authority for a determination as to whether it will have suitable regulatory arrangements in place if it becomes a competent licensing authority⁶.

A competent (or potentially competent) licensing authority to which an application is made under the above provisions⁷ must make the determination before the end of the decision period⁸ or, if it requires the licensable body to provide it with information⁹, the period of 28 days beginning with the day on which the information is provided¹⁰.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 12 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

3 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 12 para 3(1)(a). 'Suitable regulatory arrangements', in relation to a licensable body and a competent licensing authority, means regulatory arrangements which are suitable in relation to the licensable body, having regard to:

2218 (1) the composition of the licensable body, including in particular the following matters:

34
- 35. (e) the kinds of non-authorised persons who have an indirect interest in the licensable body (Sch 12 para 7(1)(a), (2)(e)); 35

2219 (2) the services the licensable body proposes to provide (Sch 12 para 7(2));

2220 (3) if the licensable body proposes to carry on non-reserved activities, any regulation to which the carrying on of such activities is subject (Sch 12 para 7(3));

2221 (4) the persons to whom the licensable body proposes to provide services (Sch 12 para 7(4)).

In head (1)(a)-(e) above 'authorised person' means a person who is an authorised person in relation to any activity which is a reserved legal activity and authorised persons are of different kinds if they are authorised to carry on such activities by different approved regulators: Sch 12 para 7(3). The authority may specify only information which it reasonably requires for the purpose of making the determination applied for: Sch 12 para 3(4). 'Potentially competent licensing authority', in relation to a licensable body, means an approved regulator:

2222 (1) which has made an application to the Board under Sch 10 paras 1-16 (see PARAS 1479-1484) for a recommendation that the Lord Chancellor make a relevant designation order, and whose application has not been determined (Sch 12 para 6(1)(a)); or

2223 (2) in respect of which the Board has made such a recommendation, but in respect of which no relevant designation order (or decision not to make such an order) has been made by the Lord Chancellor (Sch 12 para 6(1)(b)).

A relevant designation order is an order designating the approved regulator as a licensing authority in respect of one or more reserved legal activities and the effect of which will be that the approved regulator becomes a competent licensing authority in relation to the licensable body: Sch 12 para 6(2).

1517. Application to the Board.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The Legal Services Board (acting in its capacity as a licensing authority)² may determine an application for a licence³ which is made to it only if the applicant is entitled to make the application by virtue of a decision of the Board⁴ (acting otherwise than in its capacity as a licensing authority)⁵.

A licensable body⁶ may apply to the Legal Services Board⁷ for a decision that the body is entitled to make an application for a licence to the Board acting in its capacity as a licensing authority⁸. Such an application may be made on one of the following grounds⁹:

- 768 (1) that there is no competent licensing authority¹⁰ and there is no potentially competent licensing authority¹¹;
- 769 (2) that:
- 43
- 44. (a) each competent licensing authority has determined that it does not have suitable regulatory arrangements¹²;
- 45. (b) if one or more competent licensing authorities have made an application to the Board¹³ for the approval of alterations of their regulatory arrangements, each of those authorities has determined that it will not have suitable regulatory arrangements if the application is granted¹⁴; and
- 46. (c) each potentially competent licensing authority has determined that it will not have suitable regulatory arrangements if it becomes a competent licensing authority¹⁵;
- 44
- 770 (3) that the body has made an application for a licence to each competent licensing authority which has suitable regulatory arrangements and no such licensing authority is prepared to grant the body a licence on terms which are appropriate to that body, having regard to certain matters¹⁶.

1518. Board's decision.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. On an application for a decision that a licensable body² is entitled to make an application for a licence³ the Legal Services Board⁴ must, before the end of the decision period⁵, decide whether the licensable body is entitled to make an application for a licence to the Board acting in its capacity as a licensing authority⁶.

The Board must give a notice to the licensable body stating its decision and giving reasons for its decision⁷.

The Board must make rules providing for a review of its decision⁸. The rules may in particular provide that if the Board decides to grant the application, the Board may review that decision if the ground on which the application was granted ceases to be made out before the Board (in its capacity as a licensing authority) determines any application for a licence made by the licensable body⁹.

1521 Registers of licensed bodies

TEXT AND NOTE 1--Day appointed in relation to Legal Services Act 2007 s 87(4), (5) is 1 January 2009: SI 2008/3149.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LEGAL PROFESSIONS (VOLUME 65 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 301-762; VOLUME 66 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 763-1558)/8. ALTERNATIVE BUSINESS STRUCTURES/(4) OWNERSHIP AND REGULATION OF LICENSED BODIES/(i) Introduction/1522. Restricted interests subject to approval.

(4) OWNERSHIP AND REGULATION OF LICENSED BODIES

(i) Introduction

1522. Restricted interests subject to approval.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The holding by a non-authorised person² of a restricted interest in a licensed body³ is subject to the approval of the relevant licensing authority⁴ in accordance with provisions of the Legal Services Act 2007⁵.

However in relation to a licensed body which is a partnership⁶ the holding by a non-authorised person of a restricted interest in the body without the approval of the relevant licensing authority does not make it unlawful for the business of the partnership to be carried on or for the partners to carry it on in partnership⁷.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'non-authorised person' see PARA 1477 note 2.

3 As to the meaning of 'licensed body' see PARA 1476. 'Restricted interest' means each of the following:

2231 (1) a material interest (Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 2(1)(a));

2232 (2) if licensing rules are made by the relevant licensing authority under Sch 13 para 2(2), a controlled interest (Sch 13 para 2(1)(b)).

Licensing rules may specify that a controlled interest is a restricted interest for the purposes of Sch 13: Sch 13 para 2(2).

For the purposes of Pt 5 (ss 71-111), a person holds a material interest in a body ('B') if the person:

2233 (a) holds at least 10% of the shares in B (Sch 13 para 3(1)(a));

2234 (b) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of B by virtue of the person's shareholding in B (Sch 13 para 3(1)(b));

2235 (c) holds at least 10% of the shares in a parent undertaking ('P') of B (Sch 13 para 3(1)(c));

2236 (d) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of P by virtue of the person's shareholding in P (Sch 13 para 3(1)(d));

2239 (g) is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, voting power in P which, if it consists of voting rights, constitutes at least 10% of the voting rights in P (Sch 13 para 3(1)(g));

- 2240 (h) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of P by virtue of the person's entitlement to exercise, or control the exercise of, voting rights in P (Sch 13 para 3(1)(h)).

Licensing rules made by the relevant licensing authority may provide that the references in heads (a)-(h) above to 10% are to have effect as references to such lesser percentage as may be specified in the rules: Sch 13 para 3(2)(a). They may also provide that in relation to a partnership, for the purposes of Pt 5 (ss 71-111) a person has a material interest in the partnership if he is a partner (whether or not the person has a material interest by virtue of Sch 13 para 3(1)): Sch 13 para 3(2)(b). Such rules are non-statutory and are not set out in this work. The Lord Chancellor may, on the recommendation of the Legal Services Board, by order modify Sch 13 para 3: Sch 13 para 9(a).

For the purposes of Sch 13 material interests held by virtue of different heads of heads (a)-(h) are restricted interests of different kinds: Sch 13 para 3(4).

For the purposes of Sch 13 a person holds a controlled interest in a body ('B') if the person:

- 2241 (i) holds at least x% of the shares in B (Sch 13 para 4(1)(a));
- 2242 (ii) holds at least x% of the shares in a parent undertaking ('P') of B (Sch 13 para 4(1)(b));
- 2243 (iii) is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, at least x% of the voting rights in B (Sch 13 para 4(1)(c)); or
- 2244 (iv) is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, at least x% of the voting rights in P (Sch 13 para 4(1)(d)).

For the purposes of heads (i)-(iv) above 'x' means such percentage as may be specified in licensing rules made by the relevant licensing authority under Sch 13 para 2(2): Sch 13 para 4(3). Licensing rules made under Sch 13 para 2(2) may specify more than one percentage and any such percentage must be greater than 10% or, if the relevant licensing authority makes licensing rules under Sch 13 para 3(2)(a), the percentage specified in those rules: Sch 13 para 4(4), (5).

For the purposes of Sch 13 controlled interests held by virtue of different heads of heads (i)-(iv) above are restricted interests of different kinds: Sch 13 para 4(6)(a). For the purposes of Sch 13 if licensing rules made under Sch 13 para 2(2) specify more than one percentage, controlled interests held by virtue of each of those percentages are restricted interests of different kinds: Sch 13 para 4(6)(b).

For the purposes of Sch 13 paras 3(1), 4(1) 'person' means the person, any of the person's associates or the person and any of the person's associates taken together: Sch 13 paras 3(3), 4(2). The Lord Chancellor may, on the recommendation of the Legal Services Board, by order modify Sch 13 para 4(2): Sch 13 para 9(b).

For the purpose of Sch 13 'associate' in relation to a person ('A') and a shareholding in a body ('S') or an entitlement to exercise or control the exercise of voting power in a body ('V'), means a person listed below: Sch 13 para 5(1). The persons are:

- 2245 (A) the spouse or civil partner of A (Sch 13 para 5(2)(a));
- 2246 (B) a child or stepchild of A (if under 18) (Sch 13 para 5(2)(b));
- 2247 (C) the trustee of any settlement under which A has a life interest in possession (in Scotland a life interest) (Sch 13 para 5(2)(c));
- 2248 (D) an undertaking of which A is a director (Sch 13 para 5(2)(d));
- 2249 (E) an employee of A (Sch 13 para 5(2)(e));
- 2250 (F) a partner of A (except, where S or V is a partnership in which A is a partner, another partner in S or V) (Sch 13 para 5(2)(f));
- 2251 (G) if A is an undertaking, a director of A, a subsidiary undertaking of A or a director or employee of such a subsidiary undertaking (Sch 13 para 5(2)(g));
- 2252 (H) if A has with any other person an agreement or arrangement with respect to the acquisition, holding or disposal of shares or other interests in S or V (whether or not they are interests within the meaning of s 72(3) (see PARA 1477)), that other person (Sch 13 para 5(2)(h)); or

- 2253 (i) if A has with any other person an agreement or arrangement under which they undertake to act together in exercising their voting power in relation to S or V, that person (Sch 13 para 5(2)(i)).

For the purpose of head (c) above 'settlement' means any disposition or arrangement under which property is held on trust (or subject to a comparable obligation): Sch 13 para 5(3). As to the meanings of 'parent undertaking' and 'subsidiary undertaking' see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 420; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 351 (definitions applied by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 5(4)). 'Voting power', in relation to a body which does not have general meetings at which matters are decided by the exercise of voting rights, means the right under the constitution of the body to direct the overall policy of the body or alter the terms of its constitution: Sch 13 para 5(4). The Lord Chancellor may, on the recommendation of the Legal Services Board, by order modify Sch 13 para 5: Sch 13 para 9(b). At the date at which this volume states the law no such orders had been made.

1523. Approval requirements.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The approval requirements are met in relation to a person's holding of a restricted interest² if:

- 773 (1) the person's holding of that interest does not compromise the regulatory objectives³;
- 774 (2) the person's holding of that interest does not compromise compliance with the duties of regulated persons⁴ by the licensed body⁵ or persons to any employee or manager of the licensed body who is an authorised person in relation to an activity which is a reserved legal activity⁶; and
- 775 (3) the person is otherwise a fit and proper person to hold that interest⁷.

Licensing rules must make provision about the procedures that will be applied by the licensing authority when determining whether it is satisfied of the matters mentioned in heads (1) to (3) above⁸.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

3 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 6(1)(a). For the regulatory objectives see PARA 302. In determining whether it is satisfied of the matters mentioned in heads (1) to (3) in the text, the licensing authority must in particular have regard to:

- 2254 (1) the person's probity and financial position (Sch 13 para 6(3)(a));
- 2255 (2) whether the person is disqualified as mentioned in s 100(1) (see PARA 1548) or included in the list kept by the Legal Services Board under Sch 13 para 51 (see PARA 1543) (Sch 13 para 6(3)(c));
- 2256 (3) the person's associates (Sch 13 para 6(3)(c)); and
- 2257 (4) any other matter which may be specified in licensing rules (Sch 13 para 6(3)(d)).

1524. Approval of multiple restricted interests.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The following provisions apply if a person ('P') holds a kind of restricted interest² in a body ('B') by virtue of:

- 776 (1) holding a particular percentage of the shares in B³; or
- 777 (2) a parent undertaking of B or an entitlement to exercise, or control the exercise of, a particular percentage of the voting rights in B or a parent undertaking of B⁴.

If the relevant licensing authority⁵ approves P's holding of that interest, it is to be treated as also approving P's holding of any lesser restricted interest in B held by P⁶.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

A lesser restricted interest is a kind of restricted interest held by P by virtue of holding a smaller percentage of the shares mentioned in Sch 13 para 7(1)(a) or an entitlement to exercise, or control the exercise of, a smaller percentage of the voting rights mentioned in Sch 13 para 7(1)(b): Sch 13 para 7(3).

(ii) Approval of Restricted Interests on Application for Licence

1525. Requirement to identify non-authorised persons.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Where a body applies to a licensing authority² for a licence it must identify in its application:

- 778 (1) any non-authorised person who holds a restricted interest³ in the body or whom the body expects to hold such an interest when the licence is issued⁴; and
- 779 (2) the kind of restricted interest held, or expected to be held, by that person⁵.

If, before the licence is issued, there is any change in the identity of the non-authorised persons within head (1) or the kind of restricted interest held, or expected to be held, by him, the applicant must inform the relevant licensing authority⁶ within such period as may be specified by order made by the Lord Chancellor on the recommendation of the Legal Services Board⁷.

It is an offence for a person to fail to comply with a requirement imposed on them under the above provisions⁸.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

2 As to licensing authorities see PARA 1478 et seq.

3 As to the meaning of 'non-authorised person' see PARA 1477 note 2. As to the meaning of 'restricted interest' see PARA 1522 note 3. Where an applicant for a licence identifies a non-authorised person to a licensing authority in accordance with the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 10 or Sch 13 para 12, it must give that person a notice stating that it has applied for a licence and identified the person to the licensing authority in accordance with those provisions and explaining the effect of Sch 13 para 14: Sch 13 para 13(1). A person who fails to comply with a requirement imposed on them by Sch 13 para 13(1) is guilty of an offence and is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale: Sch 13 para 13(2), (3). A licensing authority may require a non-authorised person identified to it in accordance with Sch 13 para 10 or Sch 13 para 12 to provide it with such documents and information as it may require: Sch 13 para 14(1). It is an offence for a person who is required to provide information or documents under Sch 13 para 14(1) knowingly to provide false or misleading information or documents: Sch 13 para 14(2). A person who is guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum and on conviction on indictment, to a term of imprisonment not exceeding two years or a fine (or both): Sch 13 para 14(3). 7 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 10(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no such orders had been made. As to the Legal Services Board see s 2; and PARAS 303-326. If a person under a duty to notify imposed by Sch 13 para 10 had no knowledge of the facts by virtue of which that duty arose but subsequently becomes aware of those facts, the person must give the licensing authority the required notification within such period, after the person becomes so aware, as may be specified by order made by the Lord Chancellor on the recommendation of the Board: Sch 13 para 12(1), (2). A person who fails to comply with the duty to notify imposed by Sch 13 para 12(2) is guilty of an offence: Sch 13 para 12(3). A person who is guilty of an offence under Sch 13 para 12(3) is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale: Sch 13 para 12(4).

1526. Licence may not be granted unless non-authorised persons approved.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. Where an applicant for a licence (the 'applicant') gives the licensing authority notification² in relation to one or more non-authorised persons³ the licensing authority may not grant the application for a licence unless, in relation to each non-authorised person in respect of which the notification is given (the 'investor'), it approves the investor's holding of the restricted interest⁴ to which the notification relates (the 'notified interest')⁵.

1527. Unconditional approval of notified interest.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. If the licensing authority² is satisfied that the approval requirements³ are met in relation to the investor's holding of the notified interest⁴, it must approve the investor's holding of that interest without conditions⁵. If the licensing authority approves the investor's holding of the notified interest without conditions, it must notify the investor and the applicant⁶ of its approval as soon as reasonably practicable⁷.

1528. Conditional approval of notified interest.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. If the licensing authority² is not satisfied that the approval requirements³ are met in relation to the investor's holding of the notified interest⁴, it may approve the investor's holding of the notified interest subject to conditions⁵. However, it may do so only if it considers that, if the conditions are complied with, it will be appropriate for the investor to hold the notified interest without the approval requirements being met⁶.

If the licensing authority proposes to approve the investor's holding of the notified interest subject to conditions it must give the investor and the applicant a warning notice⁷.

If the licensing authority approves the investor's holding of the notified interest subject to conditions, it must notify the investor and the applicant of its approval as soon as reasonably practicable⁸.

However the licensing authority may on its own initiative cancel a condition under Sch 13 para 17: Sch 13 para 35(2). If the licensing authority does cancel such a condition it must notify the person and the licensed body as soon as reasonably practicable: Sch 13 para 35(3). 6 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 17(2).

7 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 17(3). As to the meaning of 'applicant' see PARA 1526. The warning notice must specify the nature of the conditions proposed and the reasons for their imposition and state that representations may be made to the licensing authority within the prescribed period: Sch 13 para 17(4). The licensing authority must consider any representations made within the prescribed period: Sch 13 para 17(5). For the purposes of Sch 13 'prescribed' means prescribed by rules made by the Legal Services Board for the purposes of Sch 13: Sch 13 para 8. Such rules are non-statutory and are not set out in this work. As to notices generally see PARA 303 note 11.

The investor and the applicant may before the end of the prescribed period appeal to the relevant appellate body against the imposition of any or all of the conditions: Sch 13 para 18(1). The relevant appellate body may dismiss the appeal, or allow the appeal and order the licensing authority to approve the investor's holding of the notified interest without conditions, or subject to such conditions as may be specified in the order, or remit the matter to the licensing authority: Sch 13 para 18(2). A party to the appeal may before the end of the prescribed period appeal to the High Court on a point of law arising from the decision of the relevant appellate body, but only with the permission of the High Court: Sch 13 para 18(3). The High Court may make such order as it thinks fit: Sch 13 para 18(4). If the investor's holding of the notified interest is subject to conditions as a result of an order made on an appeal under Sch 13 para 18, for the purposes of Sch 13 the conditions are to be treated as having been imposed under Sch 13 para 17: Sch 13 para 18(5).

7 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 17(6). The notice must specify the reasons for the imposition of the conditions, and explain the effect of Sch 13 paras 41-51 (see PARAS 1538-1543): Sch 13 para 17(7).

1530. Continuing notification.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The following apply where a non-authorised person (the 'investor')²:

- 782 (1) proposes to take a step which would result in the investor acquiring a restricted interest in a licensed body³ (or, if the investor already has one or more kinds of restricted interest, acquiring an additional kind of restricted interest)⁴; or 783 (2) acquires such an interest in a licensed body without taking such a step⁵.

Where head (1) applies the investor must notify the licensed body and the relevant licensing authority of the proposal⁶. If a person under such a duty to notify⁷ had no knowledge of the facts by virtue of which that duty arose but subsequently becomes aware of those facts, the person must give the licensed body and the licensing authority the required notification within such period, after the person becomes so aware, as may be specified by order made by the Lord Chancellor on the recommendation of the Legal Services Board⁸.

Where head (2) applies the investor must notify the licensed body and the relevant licensing authority of the acquisition within such period, after the investor becomes aware of it, as may be specified by order made by the Lord Chancellor on the recommendation of the Board⁹.

The relevant licensing authority must, following receipt of a notification under the above provisions¹⁰ or if the licensing authority becomes aware that an investor has failed to comply with a notification requirement imposed by those provisions, determine which steps¹¹ to take¹².

2262 (5) to object under Sch 13 para 31(3) (see PARA 1534) to the investor's holding of the notifiable interest (Sch 13 para 25(3)(e)).

- 786 (3) the total proportion of shares in a licensed body, or a parent undertaking of a licensed body, held by non-authorised persons may not exceed a limit specified in the rules⁷;
- 787 (4) the total proportion of voting rights in a licensed body, or a parent undertaking of a licensed body, which non-authorised persons are entitled to exercise or control the exercise of, may not exceed a limit specified in the rules⁸.

Rules made under any of heads (1) to (4) in relation to a licensed body and a parent undertaking may specify different limits in relation to the licensed body and the parent undertaking⁹.

The following applies in relation to a licensed body, or a parent undertaking of a licensed body, if licensing rules made by the relevant licensing authority make the provision mentioned in head (1) or (2) in relation to the body¹⁰. Any non-authorised person who acquires a shareholding in the body which exceeds the share limit or an entitlement to exercise, or control the exercise of, voting rights in the body which exceeds the voting limit, must notify the body¹¹ (and, if the body is a parent undertaking of a licensed body, the licensed body) and the licensing authority of the acquisition within such period, after the person becomes aware of it, as may be specified by order made by the Lord Chancellor on the recommendation of the Legal Services Board¹².

The Lord Chancellor may, on the recommendation of the Legal Services Board, by order modify Sch 13 para 38(3): Sch 13 para 9. At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. In relation to a licensed body which is a

The person must give the body (and, if the body is a parent undertaking of a licensed body, the licensed body) and the licensing authority the required notification within such period, after the person becomes so aware, as may be specified by order made by the Lord Chancellor on the recommendation of the Board: Sch 13 para 40(2). A person who fails to comply with the duty to notify is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale: Sch 13 para 40(3), (4). At the date at which this volume states the law no such orders had been made. As to the standard scale see PARA 571 note 1.

(v) Enforcement

1538. Divestiture condition.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The divestiture condition is satisfied in relation to a non-authorised person and a licensed body² if the person holds a restricted interest in the licensed body in certain circumstances³ and the person holds that interest, in whole or in part, by virtue of the person's shareholding⁴ in a body corporate with a share capital (the 'relevant shares')⁵.

If the relevant licensing rules make the provision for limiting shares⁶ or limiting votes⁷ the divestiture condition is also satisfied in relation to a non-authorised person and a licensed body if:

- 788 (1) the person's shareholding⁸ in the body, or a parent undertaking of the body, exceeds the share limit, and the body or parent undertaking (as the case may be) is a body corporate with a share capital⁹; or
- 789 (2) the person's entitlement to exercise or control the exercise of voting rights in the body, or a parent undertaking of the body, exceeds the voting limit by virtue of the person holding shares in a body corporate with a share capital¹⁰.

If the divestiture condition is satisfied in relation to a non-authorised person and a licensed body, the licensing authority may give the person a restriction notice¹¹ and apply to the High Court for an order¹².

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'non-authorised person' see PARA 1477 note 2. As to the meaning of 'licensed body' see PARA 1476.

3 Those circumstances are that the person holds the restricted interest as a result of the person taking a step in circumstances in which that constitutes an offence under the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 24(1) (see PARA 1530) (whether or not the person is charged with or convicted of an offence), in breach of conditions imposed under Sch 13 para 17 (see PARA 1528), Sch 13 para 28 (see PARA 1533), or Sch 13 para 33 (see PARA 1535), or in contravention of an objection by the licensing authority under Sch 13 para 31 (see PARA 1534) or Sch 13 para 36 (see PARA 1536): Sch 13 para 41(2).

4 The references to a person's shareholding in the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 41(1)(b) are to be read in accordance with Sch 13 para 3(3) (see PARA 1522) or Sch 13 para 4(2) (see PARA 1522) (as the case may be): Sch 13 para 41(3). The Lord Chancellor may, on the recommendation of the Board, by order modify Sch 13 para 41(3): Sch 13 para 9.

5 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 41(1). If the divestiture condition is satisfied by virtue of Sch 13 para 14 the High Court may, on the application of the licensing authority, order the sale of the appropriate number of the relevant shares: Sch 13 para 45(1).

8 References in the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 42 to a person's shareholding (or holding of shares) or entitlement are to be read in accordance with any applicable licensing rules made under Sch 13 para 38(3) (see PARA 1537): Sch 13 para 42(3).

9 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 42(1)(a). In Sch 13 paras 41-51 'excess shares' means:

2267 (1) in a case within Sch 13 para 42(1)(a), the number of shares by which the person's shareholding exceeds the share limit (Sch 13 para 42(2)(a)); and

2268 (2) in a case within Sch 13 para 42(1)(b), the number of shares held by the person in excess of the number of shares the person could hold without the person's entitlement to exercise, or control the exercise of, voting rights exceeding the voting limit (Sch 13 para 42(2)(b)).

10 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 42(1)(b).

11 Is a notice under the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 44 (see PARA 1539). As to notices generally see PARA 303 note 11.

12 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 13 para 43(1). The order mentioned in the text is an order under Sch 13 para 45. The licensing authority may not make an application to the High Court for an order under Sch 13 para 45 unless it has notified the person that it intends to do so if the divestiture condition is satisfied in relation to the person and the body at the end of the relevant period and the relevant period has expired: Sch 13 para 43(2). The relevant period is such period (not less than the prescribed period) as may be specified in the notice: Sch 13 para 43(3).

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. If the divestiture condition is satisfied² the High Court may, on the application of the licensing authority³, order the sale of the appropriate number of the relevant shares or sale of the excess shares⁴, as appropriate⁵. If shares are for the time being subject to any restriction⁶, the court may order that they are to cease to be subject to that restriction⁷.

If shares are sold in pursuance of an order under Sch 13 para 45(7), the proceeds of sale, less the costs of sale, must be paid into court for the benefit of the persons beneficially interested in them: Sch 13 para 45(7). Any such person may apply to the court for the whole or part of the proceeds to be paid to the person: Sch 13 para 45(8).

1547. Financial penalties.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. A licensing authority may, in accordance with its licensing rules², impose on a licensed body³, or a manager or employee of a licensed body⁴, a penalty of such amount as it considers appropriate⁵. Such a penalty is payable to the licensing authority⁶.

A person on whom such a penalty is imposed may, before the end of such period as may be prescribed by rules made by the Board, appeal to the relevant appellate body on one or more of the appeal grounds⁷. The appeal grounds are:

- 796 (1) that the imposition of the penalty is unreasonable in all the circumstances of the case⁸;
- 797 (2) that the amount of the penalty is unreasonable⁹;
- 798 (3) that it is unreasonable of the licensing authority to require the penalty imposed or any portion of it to be paid by the time or times by which it was required to be paid¹⁰.

On any such appeal, where the relevant appellate body considers it appropriate to do so in all the circumstances of the case and is satisfied of one or more of the appeal grounds, that body may quash the penalty, substitute a penalty of such lesser amount as it considers appropriate¹¹ or, in the case of the appeal ground in head (3) above, substitute for any time imposed by the licensing authority a different time or times¹².

A party to the appeal may appeal to the High Court on a point of law arising from the decision of the relevant appellate body, but only with the permission of the High Court¹³ and the High Court may make such order as it thinks fit¹⁴.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 ss 95-97 are to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

Licensing rules must make provision in relation to the imposing of financial penalties: see the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 11 para 22; and PARA 1512. As to the meaning of 'licensing rules' see PARA 1498.

3 For the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007 s 95 references to a licensed body are to a body which was a licensed body at the time the act or omission in respect of which the penalty is imposed occurred (whether or not the body subsequently ceased to be a licensed body): s 95(6). As to the meaning of 'licensed body' see PARA 1476.

4 For the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007 s 95 references to a manager or employee of a licensed body are to a person who was a manager or employee of a licensed body at that time (whether or not the person subsequently ceased to be a manager or employee): s 95(6). As to the meaning of 'manager' see PARA 369 note 17.

5 Legal Services Act 2007 s 95(1). The Legal Services Board must make rules prescribing the maximum amount of a penalty which may be imposed under s 95 and the penalty imposed under s 95(1) must not exceed this amount: see s 95(2), (3). Any rules made by the Board under s 95(3) must be made by statutory instrument and the Statutory Instrument Act 1946 applies to the Board's powers to make those rules as if the Board were a Minister of the Crown: s 204(2). The rules may only be made with the consent of the Lord Chancellor: s 95(4).

Such rules are non-statutory and are not set out in this work. In ss 96 and 97 references to a 'penalty' are to a penalty under s 95: s 95(7). As to the Legal Services Board see the Legal Services Act 2007 s 2; and PARAS 303-326. If the whole or any part of a penalty is not paid by the time by which, in accordance with licensing rules, it is required to be paid, the unpaid balance from time to time carries interest at the rate for the time being specified in the Judgments Act 1838 s 17 (see PARA 988): Legal Services Act 2007 s 97(1). Where a penalty, or any portion of it, has not been paid by the time by which, in accordance with licensing rules, it is required to be paid and no appeal relating to the penalty has been made under s 96 during the period within which such an appeal can be made or an appeal has been made and determined or withdrawn, the licensing authority may recover from the person on whom the penalty was imposed, as a debt due to the licensing authority, any of the penalty and any interest which has not been paid: s 97(2). A licensing authority must pay into the Consolidated Fund any sum received by it as a penalty (or as interest on a penalty): s 97(3). Any sum received by the Legal Services Board under ss 95-97 in its capacity as a licensing authority is payable into the Consolidated Fund: see s 175(1)(e). As to the Consolidated Fund see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 711 et seq; PARLIAMENT vol 78 (2010) PARAS 1028-1031.

6 Legal Services Act 2007 s 95(5).

7 Legal Services Act 2007 s 96(1). Except as provided by s 96 the validity of a penalty is not to be questioned by any legal proceedings whatever: s 96(8).

8 Legal Services Act 2007 s 96(2)(a).

9 Legal Services Act 2007 s 96(2)(b).

10 Legal Services Act 2007 s 96(2)(c).

11 Where the relevant appellate body substitutes a penalty of a lesser amount it may require the payment of interest on the substituted penalty at such rate, and from such time, as it considers just and equitable: Legal Services Act 2007 s 96(4).

12 Legal Services Act 2007 s 96(3). Where the relevant appellate body specifies as a time by which the penalty, or a portion of the penalty, is to be paid a time before the determination of the appeal under s 96 it may require the payment of interest on the penalty, or portion, from that time at such rate as it considers just and equitable: s 96(5).

2281 (d) that the licensing authority has reason to suspect dishonesty on the part of any manager or employee of the licensed body in connection with that body's business, any trust of which that body is or was a trustee, any trust of which the manager or employee of the body is or was a trustee in that person's capacity as such a manager or employee or the business of another body in which the manager or employee is or was a manager or employee, or the practice (or former practice) of the manager or employee (Sch 14 para 1(2)(d));

2282 (e) that the licensing authority is satisfied that there has been undue delay on the part of the licensed body in connection with any matter in which it is or was acting for a client or with any trust of which it is or was a trustee or on the part of a person who is or was a manager or employee of the licensed body in connection with any trust of which that person is or was a trustee in that person's capacity as such a manager or employee, and the notice conditions are satisfied (Sch 14 para 1(2)(e));

2283 (f) that the licensing authority is satisfied that it is necessary to exercise the powers conferred by Sch 14 (or any of them) in relation to a licensed body to protect the interests of clients (or former or potential clients) of the licensed body, the interests of the beneficiaries of any trust of which the licensed body is or was a trustee or the interests of the beneficiaries of any trust of which a person who is or was a manager or employee of the licensed body is or was a trustee in that person's capacity as such a manager or employee (Sch 14 para 1(2)(f)).

As to the meaning of 'relevant licensing authority' see PARA 1501 note 5. As to the meaning of 'manager' see PARA 369 note 17. As to notices generally see PARA 303 note 11. For the purposes of Sch 14 para 1(2) a relevant insolvency event occurs in relation to a licensed body if:

- 2284 (i) a resolution for a voluntary winding-up of the body is passed without a declaration of solvency under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 89 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 941) (Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 1(3)(a));
- 2285 (ii) the body enters administration within the meaning of the Insolvency Act 1986 Sch B1 para 1(2)(b) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 212) (Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 1(3)(b));
- 2286 (iii) an administrative receiver within the meaning of the Insolvency Act 1986 s 251 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 8) is appointed (Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 1(3)(c));
- 2287 (iv) a meeting of creditors is held in relation to the body under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 95 (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 942) (creditors' meeting which has the effect of converting a members' voluntary winding up into a creditors' voluntary winding up) (Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 1(3)(d));
- 2288 (v) an order for the winding up of the body is made (Sch 14 para 1(3)(e)).

The notice conditions referred to in Sch 14 para 1(2)(e) are:

- 2289 (A) that the licensing authority has given the licensed body a notice inviting it to give an explanation within such period (of not less than eight days) following the giving of the notice as may be specified in it (Sch 14 para 1(4)(a));
- 2290 (B) that the licensed body has failed within that period to give an explanation which the licensing authority regards as satisfactory (Sch 14 para 1(4)(b)); and
- 2291 (C) that the licensing authority gives notice of the failure to the licensed body and (at the same time or later) notice that Sch 14 applies in its case by virtue of Sch 14 para 1(2)(e) (Sch 14 para 1(4)(c)).

Where Sch 14 applies in relation to a licensed body by virtue of Sch 14 para 1(1)(a) (see head (1) above) it continues to apply after the body's licence has been revoked or has otherwise ceased to have effect: Sch 14 para 1(5).

For the purposes of Sch 14 'licensed body' includes:

- 2292 (aa) a body whose licence is suspended (Sch 14 para 1(6)(a));
- 2293 (bb) a body to whom Sch 14 continues to apply by virtue of Sch 14 para 1(5) (Sch 14 para 1(6)(b));
- 2294 (cc) except in Sch 14 para 1, a body whose licence has ceased to have effect as mentioned in Sch 14 para 1(1)(b) (Sch 14 para 1(6)(c)).

The powers conferred by Sch 14 in relation to sums of money, documents or other property may be exercised despite any lien on them or right to their possession: Sch 14 para 15. The licensing authority may do all things which are reasonably necessary to facilitate the exercise of its powers under Sch 14: Sch 14 para 16. Any costs incurred by the licensing authority for the purposes of Sch 14 (including the costs of any person exercising powers under Sch 14 on behalf of the licensing authority) are to be paid by the licensed body and may be recovered from the licensed body as a debt owing to the licensing authority: Sch 14 para 17(1). This is subject to any order for payment of costs that may be made on an application to the court under Sch 14: Sch 14 para 17(2). The High Court, on the application of the licensing authority, may order a liable party to pay a specified proportion of the costs mentioned in Sch 14 para 17: Sch 14 para 18(1). For this purpose 'liable party' means, if the licensed body is a partnership, any former partner in the licensed body, and in any other case, any manager or former manager of the licensed body: Sch 14 para 18(2). The High Court may make an order under Sch 14 para 18 in respect of a liable party only if it is satisfied that the conduct (or any part of the conduct) by reason of which Sch 14 applies was conduct carried on with the consent or connivance of, or was attributable to any neglect on the part of, the liable party: Sch 14 para 18(3). In Sch 14 para 18 'specified' means specified in the order made by the High Court: Sch 14 para 18(4). Any sums received under Sch 14 paras 17, 18 are payable into the Consolidated Fund: see s 175(1)(e). As to the Consolidated Fund see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 711 et seq; PARLIAMENT vol 78 (2010) PARAS 1028-1031.

3 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 2(1), (2). An order under Sch 14 para 2(2) may take effect in relation to a person:

2295 (1) whether or not the person is named in the order (Sch 14 para 2(3)(a));

2296 (2) however the money is held (Sch 14 para 2(3)(b));

2297 (3) whether the money was received before or after the order was made (Sch 14 para 2(3)(c)).

But an order under Sch 14 para 2(2) does not take effect in relation to a person until the licensing authority has given the person a copy of the order and (in the case of a bank or other financial institution) has indicated the branches at which it believes money to which the order relates is held: Sch 14 para 2(4). A person is not to be treated as having disobeyed an order under Sch 14 para 2(2) by making a payment of money if the court is satisfied that the person exercised due diligence to ascertain whether it was money to which the order related and failed to ascertain that the order related to it: Sch 14 para 2(5).

1553. Money vesting in licensing authority.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The sums of money held by or on behalf of the licensed body² in connection with:

- 808 (1) its activities as a licensed body³;
- 809 (2) any trust of which it is or was a trustee⁴; or
- 810 (3) any trust of which a person who is or was a manager or employee⁵, and the right to recover or receive them, vest in the licensing authority⁶ if the licensing authority decides that they should do so⁷.

The licensing authority must give the licensed body, and any other person in possession of sums of money to which the above applies a copy of the licensing authority's decision and a notice prohibiting the payment out of those sums⁸. Any right to recover or receive debts due to the licensed body in connection with its business vest in the licensing authority if the licensing authority decides that they should do so⁹.

If the licensing authority takes possession of any sum of money to which the above provisions apply, it must pay it into a special account in the name of the licensing authority or a person nominated on its behalf¹⁰.

1 The Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 is to be brought into force by order made by the Lord Chancellor under s 211(2) as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Lord Chancellor see PARA 301 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'licensed body' see PARA 1476.

3 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 3(1), (2)(a). Schedule 14 para 3(1) applies whether the sums were received by the person holding them before or after the licensing authority's decision: Sch 14 para 3(3).

4 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 3(1), (2)(b).

5 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 3(1), (2)(c). As to the meaning of 'manager' see PARA 369 note 17.

6 As to the meaning of 'licensing authority' see PARA 1478 and as to licensing authorities generally see PARA 1478 et seq. As to when the licensing authority's power of intervention applies see PARA 1552.

7 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 3(1). Those sums and that right are held by the licensing authority on trust to exercise the powers conferred by Sch 14 in relation to them and subject to that and to rules under Sch 14 para 6, on trust for the persons beneficially entitled: Sch 14 para 3(4). The licensing authority may make rules governing its treatment of sums vested in it under Sch 14 para 3 or Sch 14 para 4(3): Sch 14 para 6(1). The rules may, in particular, make provision in respect of cases where the licensing authority, having taken such steps to do so as are reasonable in all the circumstances of the case, is unable to trace the person or persons beneficially entitled to any sum vested in the licensing authority under Sch 14 para 3 or Sch 14 para 4(3) (including provision which requires amounts to be paid into or out of any fund maintained by the licensing authority in connection with its compensation arrangements): Sch 14 para 6(2). Such rules are non-statutory and are not set out in this work. As to the meaning of 'compensation arrangements' see PARA 369 note 11.

8 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 3(5). A person to whom a notice under Sch 14 para 3(5) is given may apply to the High Court for an order directing the licensing authority to withdraw the notice: Sch 14 para 3(6). An application under Sch 14 para 3(6) must be made within eight days of the licensing authority giving the person notice under Sch 14 para 3(5): Sch 14 para 3(7). The person must give not less than 48 hours' notice of any application under Sch 14 para 3(6) to the licensing authority and if the notice under Sch 14 para 3(5) gives the name of a solicitor instructed by the licensing authority, to that solicitor: Sch 14 para 3(8). If the court makes the order, it may make any other order it thinks fit with respect to the matter: Sch 14 para 3(9). It is an offence for a person to whom a notice has been given under Sch 14 para 3(5) to pay out sums of money at a time when such payment is prohibited by the notice: Sch 14 para 3(10). As to notices generally see PARA 303 note 11.

9 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 4(1), (2). Any sums recovered by the licensing authority by virtue of the exercise of rights vested under Sch 14 para 4(1) vest in the licensing authority and are held by it on trust to exercise the powers conferred by this Sch 14 in relation to them and subject to that and to rules under Sch 14 para 6 (see note 7), on trust for the persons beneficially entitled: Sch 14 para 4(3). The licensing authority must give the licensed body, and any other person who owes a debt to which the order applies, a copy of the licensing authority's decision: Sch 14 para 4(4).

10 Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 14 para 5(1). A person nominated under Sch 14 para 5(1) holds that sum on trust to permit the licensing authority to exercise the powers conferred by Sch 14 in relation to it and subject to that and rules under Sch 14 para 6 (see note 7), on trust for the persons beneficially entitled: Sch 14 para 5(2). A bank or other financial institution at which a special account is kept is under no obligation to ascertain whether it is being dealt with properly: Sch 14 para 5(3).

1554. Information about money.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The licensing authority² may apply to the High Court for an order requiring a person to give the licensing authority:

- 811 (1) information about any money held by the person on behalf of the licensed body, and the accounts in which it is held³; or
- 812 (2) information relevant to identifying any money held by the licensed body or by another person on its behalf⁴.

The High Court may make the order if it is satisfied that there is reason to suspect, in a case within head (1), that the person holds money on behalf of the licensed body and, in a case within head (2), that the person has the information in question⁵.

1555. Notice to produce or deliver documents.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The licensing authority² may give notice to the licensed body requiring it to produce or deliver all documents in its possession or under its control in connection with its activities as a licensed body, any trust of which it is or was a trustee or any trust of which a person who is or was a manager or employee of the licensed body is or was a trustee in that person's capacity as such a manager or employee³. The notice may require the documents to be produced:

- 813 (1) to any person appointed by the licensing authority⁴;
- 814 (2) at a time and place to be fixed by the licensing authority⁵.

The person appointed by the licensing authority may take possession of any such documents on behalf of the licensing authority⁶.

It is an offence for a person having possession of such documents to refuse, neglect or otherwise fail to comply with a notice under Sch 14 para 8(1): Sch 14 para 8(4). However this does not apply where an application has been made under Sch 14 para 9(1)(a) (see PARA 1556): Sch 14 para 8(5). A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: Sch 14 para 8(6). The following applies where the licensing authority takes possession of documents or any other property under Sch 14 para 8: Sch 9 para 10(1). On taking possession, it must give a notice to the licensed body and any other person from whom the documents or property were received or from whose possession they were taken: Sch 14 para 10(2). The notice must state that possession has been taken and specify the date on which possession was taken: Sch 14 para 10(3). A person to whom a notice under Sch 14 para 10(2) is given may apply to the High Court for an order directing the licensing authority to deliver the documents or other property to such person as the applicant requires: Sch 14 para 10(4). An application under Sch 14 para 10(4) must be made within eight days of the licensing authority giving the person notice under Sch 14 para 10(2): Sch 14 para 10(5). The person must give not less than 48 hours' notice of the application to the licensing authority and if the notice under Sch 14 para 10(2) gives the name of a solicitor instructed by the licensing authority, to that solicitor: Sch 14 para 10(6). The court may make any order it thinks fit: Sch 14 para 10(7). As to notices generally see PARA 303 note 11. As to the meaning of 'manager' see PARA 369 note 17. The licensing authority may take copies of or extracts from any documents in its possession by virtue of Sch 14 para 8: Sch 14 para 13(1). If the licensing authority proposes to deliver such documents to any person, it may make the delivery conditional on the person giving a reasonable undertaking to supply copies or extracts to the licensing authority: Sch 14 para 13(2). As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The High Court may on the application of the licensing authority² make an order for production or delivery:

- 815 (1) in relation to a person required to produce documents³ and the documents the person was required to produce⁴;
- 816 (2) if it is satisfied that there is reason to suspect that documents in relation to which the powers⁵ are exercisable have come into the possession or under the control of some person other than the licensed body, in relation to that person and those documents⁶.

An order for production or delivery is an order requiring a person to produce or deliver documents to any person appointed by the licensing authority, at a time and place specified in the order and authorising the appointed person to take possession of the documents on behalf of the licensing authority⁷. The court may, on the application of the licensing authority, authorise a person appointed by the licensing authority to enter any premises (using such force as is reasonably necessary) to search for and take possession of:

- 817 (a) any documents to which an order for production or delivery relates⁸;
- 818 (b) any property in the possession of or under the control of the licensed body or in the case of an order under head (1), which was in the possession or under the control of that body and has come into the possession or under the control of the person in respect of whom the order is made, which the licensing authority reasonably requires for the purpose of accessing information contained in any such documents⁹, and to use property obtained under head (b) above for that purpose¹⁰. It may do so on making the order for production or delivery, or at any later time¹¹.

1557. Communications redirection order.

As from a day to be appointed the following provisions have effect¹. The High Court, on the application of the licensing authority², may from time to time make a communications redirection order³.

Where a communications redirection order has effect, the licensing authority or the person appointed by the licensing authority may take possession or receipt of the communications redirected in accordance with the order⁴. Where a communications redirection order is made the licensing authority must pay to the designated payee⁵ the like charges (if any) as would have been payable for the redirection of the communications to which the order relates if the addressee had permanently ceased to occupy or use the premises or other destination of the communications and had applied to the designated payee to redirect the communications as mentioned in the order⁶.

The High Court may, on the application of the licensing authority, authorise the licensing authority, or a person appointed by it, to take such steps as may be specified in the order in relation to any website purporting to be or have been maintained by or on behalf of the licensed body, if the High Court is satisfied that the taking of those steps is necessary to protect the public interest or the interests of clients (or potential or former clients) of the licensed body⁷.

The licensing authority may apply to the High Court for an order as to the disposal or destruction of any document or other property in its possession by virtue of Sch 14 para 8 (see PARA 1555) and the court may make any order it thinks fit: Sch 14 para 12. The licensing authority may take copies of or extracts from any documents in its possession by virtue of Sch 14 para 11: Sch 14 para 13(1).
